272 ACCLAIMED FOR VOTING TO KEEP U.S. FREE

BlockedGovernment by Decree.

Roll of Honor

The roll of honor, containing the names of the 272 congressmen who yesterday were acclaimed by congressional leaders as having blocked efforts to establish a government by decree in the United States, will be found on page 2.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—Members of congress who voted yesterday against President Roosevelt's order limiting salaries to $25,000 a year as an unwarranted exercise of executive powers, tonight found themselves acclaimed by Republican and Democratic colleagues as having inscribed their names on a new national roll of honor.

"Those 272 legislators who voted against usurpation of power by the chief executive rank with the signers of the Declaration of Independence," said Rep. Roy O. Woodruff [R., Mich.]. "The signers of the Declaration of Independence made us free and these men kept us free.

"Those who signed the Declaration of Independence expressed themselves against royal decrees. Those who voted for the amendment, which ended the President's decree, stopped government by executive decree."

The People vs. Rulers.

"This was a struggle between representative government and government by edict," said Rep. Wesley E. Disney [D., Okla.]. "This stupendous issue is the age-old contest between executive and legislative power—between the people's representatives and the people's rulers.

"All down Anglo-Saxon history it has been waged, and the people's representatives always have finally won. In instances when the representatives have failed the people, the people chose themselves new representatives, new guardians of the people's liberty.

"The ancient civilizations of the world in turn flourished, gradually declined and disintegrated. They broke upon the rock of centralized regal or executive power.

Victory to the Stout Hearted.

"Stalwart and courageous parliaments and congresses have preserved representative government during modern Anglo-Saxon history. The battle has not gone to the adroit, the entrenched, and the powerful, but to the valiant, the strong willed, the stout hearted guardians of the people's interests."

Rep. William A. Rowan [D., Ill.] said that altho he is a new member of congress he was conscious of the part the legislative branch should play in the government of the country.

"I am proud," he said, "to be in such distinguished company."

"The vote is a demonstration of the wisdom of the framers of the Constitution," said Rep. Leo E. Allen [R., Ill.]. "In their wisdom the fathers of the country provided for the check and balance of the three branches of the government—the executive, the judicial, and the legislative.

Try to Destroy Balance.

"New dealers have sought to destroy that balance and institute a régime of government by decree. A long suffering congress has manifested the will of the American people for truly representative government."

A total of 268 members of congress voted for the measure and 4 men were paired for the bill. All are listed in the roll of honor. One man who should be on the list is Rep. Jesse P. Wolcott [R., Mich.]. Wolcott executed a shrewd parliamentary maneuver in the final tense moments of yesterday's session, which upset the Democrats but automatically barred him from the voting for the executive rebuke.

Fireman, Save My Pride! Trapped Woman Pleads

Camden, N. J., March 13 (AP).—A woman employé of a clothing firm discovered she had been locked in tonight after all other employés left. She telephoned for aid and a hook and ladder truck drew up in front of the building. A crowd gathered—and the embarrassed woman refused to descend the ladder. After a little delay firemen took the ladder to the rear of the building and she climbed down out of sight of the crowd.

You Can Get More Gasoline Providing Your Car's Stolen

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—You can get more gasoline—if your car is stolen.

The office of price administration said that if police find the car no more than 200 miles from home you can get extra gas coupons to drive it back. If the thieves take it a longer distance you may have to load the car on a train to get it home.

The order also provided extra rations up to 200 miles for delivery of a newly purchased automobile.

BOMBERS SMASH JAP TRANSPORT AND CARGO SHIP

Attack on Flotilla Is Continuing.

ALLIED HDQ., Australia, March 14 [Sunday]—(AP).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's planes have pounced upon another Japanese convoy thrusting toward New Guinea—this time composed of five merchantmen and three destroyers—and have damaged two ships in an initial attack, the high command announced today.

The convoy was discovered 40 miles northwest of Wewak yesterday afternoon, and Flying Fortresses immediately raced to the assault, braving anti-aircraft fire and the protecting enemy fighter planes to set fire to one 8,000 ton transport and score a hit and a near miss on a 4,000 ton cargo ship last evening.

Weather prevented close observation of the results. The communique said the attack was continuing.

Two Convoys Sighted.

Wewak is 370 miles north of the allied base of Port Moresby and 500 miles northwest of the scene where a 22 ship Japanese convoy was wiped out recently in the Bismarck sea. The Japanese also lost approximately 15,000 troops and scores of airplanes in that three day battle.

It was also disclosed that two Japanese convoys of five merchant ships each with warship escort had been sighted two days ago northeast of Manus Island in the Admiralties. It is possible that the Wewak convoy was one of those. The other convoy still remained an unknown threat.

The Japanese convoy employed the customary technique of approaching New Guinea with a storm front as a cover—a strategem which has worked before. But this time the Japanese were more cautious, the convoy changing course constantly as it neared Wewak.

Allied airmen were again active over a wide area, attacking a medium cargo ship at Raaf bay in the northwestern sector of Dutch New Guinea "with unobserved results," strafing Japanese positions in the Salamaua area, and attacking airdromes and installations at two points in New Britain.

The strafing of Japanese positions in the Mubo area below Salamaua has resulted in the killing of 237 more Japanese, the communique said. Allied ground patrols found their bodies, it said.

One of six Japanese planes which tried to intercept heavy allied reconnaissance units near Babo in Dutch New Guinea was shot down yesterday, the communique said.

SEND M'ARTHUR MORE AID, PLEA OF BATAAN CLAN

John E. Peterson, president of the American Bataan Clan of Maywood, composed of close relatives of men who fought on Bataan, said yesterday that "all true Americans should write their congressmen, demanding more planes and men for the Pacific area."

"The mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, wives, and sweethearts of the men who made history in the Philippines are praying that our congress will answer the pleas of Lt. Gen. Kenney and Maj. Gen. Sutherland, who came across the Pacific to ask more planes and men for Gen. MacArthur so they can get back the Philippines," he said.

"Our boys must be liberated before they starve to death," Peterson said. Maywood was the home of the famous Maywood tank battalion, one of the units lost on Bataan.

Firm Rents Land to Grow Food for 650 Employes

Butler, Pa., March 13 [Special].—The American Bantam Car company has leased a 100 acre farm to grow vegetables for 650 employés and their families. The company will sell produce to employés at cost. If possible, men will be hired at factory rates to till the farm. Otherwise, plant employés with farm experience will work the land in shifts.

NAZIS FORCED TO FLY FOOD TO SOLDIERS IN NORTHERN TUNISIA

BEJA, Tunisia, March 13 (AP).—The Germans have been forced to supply their forward troops in northern Tunisia by air and a number of prisoners taken in recent fighting told allied officers that they had been forced to go as long as three days without food.

Yesterday 11 Stukas flew over Germans holding a position south of the British on the Tamera-Sedjenane front and dropped supply canisters. Some of the supplies fell among mine-fields.

These troops already have been exhausted by a series of unsuccessful attacks against the British, but there is no indication that they plan to give up the position.

DARROW'S SPIRIT FAILS 5TH TIME TO ANSWER CALL

Communication with the spirit of Clarence Darrow failed for the fifth time yesterday. Claude D. Noble, Detroit business man and magician, with whom Darrow made a death pact, knelt at 12:30 p. m. on a Jackson park bridge near which Darrow's ashes had been sprinkled and bade the lawyer's spirit to knock a plaque from his hand. As previously, nothing happened.

Darrow, Noble, and Howard Thurston, the late magician, agreed in 1932 that the first to die would try to communicate with the others. The communicant was to stand at the deceased's grave, on the anniversary of the death and hold an object familiar to all three. The spirit was to knock the object out of the holder's hand.

Yesterday Noble held a bronze plaque of Thurston. He repeated the Lord's prayer, called on Darrow, and held out his hand. There was no answer. On April 13 he will make a pilgrimage to Thurston's grave in Columbus, O., and try again. Noble has made a similar pact with Carveth Wells, explorer, and Harry Blackstone, magician.

Dutch Churches' Protest Brings More Nazi Arrests

BERNE, Switzerland, March 13.—Protestant and Catholic churches in Holland in a joint letter to Arthur Seiss-Inquart, the reich commissioner, and in a pastoral letter which was read from all pulpits in Holland, Feb. 21, have registered another energetic protest against "the state's encroachment on freedom of worship," mass mobilization of Dutch youth for German war industries and persecution of religious minorities. The German answer to these joint protests is reported to have been more arrests with "further measures" threatened.

The surest sign of spring, George and Jerry Hollenback, operators of a 100 year old maple grove near Millbrook in Kendall county, say, is the staccato sound of the clear, sweet sap falling from the maple trees into buckets.

Yesterday the great-grandsons of the Pennsylvania Dutch farmer who planted the trees more than a century ago, hurried from tree to tree to empty the pails that hang below a sap tap in each trunk. A 350 gallon horse-drawn container was filled within an hour, and the Hollenback brothers predicted a "better-than-usual" yield.

Only Tapping 600.

The grove is a 50-acre tract in the Fox river valley. Only 600 of the Hollenbacks' 900 trees will be tapped this year because the brothers have been unable to obtain additional tapping buckets. The trees have yielded more than 100 gallons of sirup each season for more than 100 years.

Each gallon of maple sirup requires 50 gallons of sap in its making. The clear sap is placed in boiling pans over a low-built furnace in the pine board cooking house. As the sap is cooked, refuse and foam are skimmed from the top, and the liquid gets thicker until it becomes sirup.

No Job to Hollenbacks.

Neither of the Hollenback brothers considers making sirup a job. Jerry says it's a family tradition. George calls it a hobby. They consider their trees more important this year because of the demand for sugar.

The first George Hollenback, planter of the trees, tapped the trees with crude sumac spouts and hung a wooden bucket beneath each tap. The wooden spouts have been replaced with shiny metal ones and metal pails now catch the sap, which, as if in response to care, flows faster each year.

SUBSTITUTE FOR COPPER FOUND, NAZI RADIO SAYS

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The Berlin radio reported yesterday that a German physicist, Prof. Justi, had discovered a new semi-metal that could substitute for copper, an important war metal, in electric wires. The new material is an excellent electric conductor and especially good for use in electric wires, said the broadcast recorded by the Associated Press. The radio said Prof. Justi had developed the semi-metal after discovering some time ago that electrical resistance "completely disappeared" in a mixture of a heavy metal and porcelain molding sand at low temperatures.

FLYING FORT BAGS 7 NAZI FIGHTERS IN 12 MIN.; LOG TELLS STORY

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—In 12 minutes of furious fighting one Flying Fortress shot down seven German Focke-Wulf 190 fighters over St. Nazaire, France, on Nov. 23, the war department reported today. It told the story in this log of the Fortress which was without fighter escort.:

1:35 p. m.—Enemy aircraft came in from right rear and below coming up. Ball turret gunner fired. At 50 yards bullet entered motor; fighter burst into flames and broke in pieces.

1:38 p. m.—Enemy aircraft came from right and above out of sun. Right waist gunner fired. At 300 yards enemy aircraft was hit in nose, began smoking heavily, and pilot bailed out.

1:40 p. m.—Enemy aircraft came in from right front and above. As it came over, waist gunner fired. Aircraft fell out of control at about 1,000 yards and into the sea.

Charge Agent of CIO Incited Mutiny on Ship

Mobile, Ala., March 13 [Special].—A federal grand jury will convene here Monday to inquire into government charges that a 31 year old deck chairman for the ship's committee of the National Maritime union [CIO] attempted to undermine the loyalty of a navy gun crew during a recent nine month voyage of a merchant vessel carrying war materials.

The accused union representative is James Couchois, an able seaman aboard the freighter West Nohonos, who was arrested and arraigned here yesterday under a section of the war time sedition act which provides a maximum penalty of 20 years imprisonment and a fine of $10,000 for attempting to undermine the morale of men in the navy.

Released Under Bond.

Couchois, ordered held under $3,000 bail by United States Commissioner Alex T. Howard, obtained his release today by posting a bond which he obtained by paying a $300 premium. He said he expects the union will employ attorneys to defend him.

Atty. Gen. Francis Biddle announced in Washington that an investigation by the federal bureau of investigation has disclosed that Couchois persisted thruout the voyage in giving daily harangues to members of the gun crew.

The complaint against Couchois charges that he "did knowingly, unlawfully, and wilfully create and cause insubordination among members of the gun crew," and that he attempted to influence them "to be disloyal and discontented with their duties and service."

Discharged as Undesirable.

The complaint described him as a former navy enlisted man who had been discharged as "undesirable."

He told the commissioner that he is not guilty and that the charges are "ridiculous." He asked several questions about his right to summon "a flock of witnesses."

Couchois denied that he is a Communist.

NAVY ORGANIZES WOMEN TO HELP GUARD U. S. PORTS

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Formation of a new women's unit to help guard waterfront installations was announced today by the navy.

Mrs. William J. Clothier, 56, of Valley Forge, Pa., will head the organization. It will be part of the volunteer port security force of the coast guard.

The announcement said the women will wear uniforms but they will not be the uniforms of the women's reserve coast guard.

The women will have the duties of doing office work at regimental headquarters posts, of transporting men to their stations in their own cars and of feeding the men while they are on duty.

Mrs. Clothier, mother of three children, founded the Emergency Aid in Philadelphia during the last World war. She has been given a lieutenant's commission as a temporary member of the coast guard reserve.

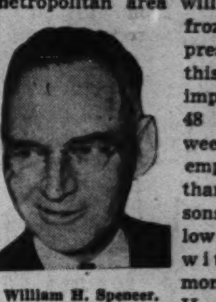
U.S. to Grow Quinine Trees on 10,000 Costa Rica Acres

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, March 13.—The government today signed an agreement ceding 10,000 acres of land for 25 years to the United States for the cultivation of quinine producing trees.

EXPECT ORDER FREEZING CITY'S WAR CONTRACTS

Fear Labor Scarcity in Six Months.



William H. Spencer.

War plant contracts in the Chicago metropolitan area will probably be frozen at their present levels this week, with imposition of the 48 hour work week on every employer of more than eight persons likely to follow some time within six months, William H. Spencer, regional man power director, announced last night.

"On the basis of latest labor reports, the Chicago area probably will be declared a Group II. area this week," he said. "This would mean that only renewals of war contracts now in production, requiring no additional workers, would be made, and that no new contracts would be placed here if alternative facilities exist elsewhere. We cannot guarantee that Chicago would not be moved into Group I. classification and thereby inherit the 48 hour work week."

Would Affect All Workers.

Should the Chicago area be placed in Group I. the 48 hour week order would apply to all workers where more than eight persons are on the pay roll—clerks in retail stores, newspaper employés, domestic servants, and all except those who are normally part time workers.

Spencer said the metropolitan area consisted of the Illinois counties of Lake, Cook, Du Page, De Kalb, McHenry, Will, Kane, Kendall and Grundy, and Lake and Porter counties in Indiana.

Chicago is now a Group III. area, a classification which denotes a balanced labor supply and demand with no shortage expected within six months, Spencer explained. The war contract "freeze" order would put Chicago in Group II., denoting that a labor shortage is expected within six months and the next move would be to put it in Group I., signifying critical labor shortage, if conditions did not improve.

Three Remedies Suggested.

Man power demands of selective service and war and essential civilian industries can be met in this area during the next six months, Spencer said, if three conditions are satisfied:

1. Industry must hire more women, older people, members of minority groups, and physically handicapped persons.

2. A substantial number of women must be recruited for work in war plants and in firms essential to civilian life. "This point is based on the willingness of employers to hire women," Spencer said.

3. Substantial numbers of persons in nondeferable occupations must be induced to transfer to war jobs.

Must Meet All Conditions.

"If these conditions are not met in full, Chicago inevitably would be moved to Group I. as a labor shortage area, requiring the imposition of the 48 hour week on all employers with over eight persons on their pay rolls, and the channeling of all hiring thru the United States employment service," he said. "In a Group I. area no renewal of contracts would be made and no new contracts placed if alternative facilities exist elsewhere."

Spencer said the regional office of WMC does not have authority to designate the classification of an area, which is left to the Washington office of WMC and other agencies concerned.

POULTRY DEMAND UP 50%; SUPPLIES DROP ⅓ OR MORE

Demand for poultry has increased at least 50 per cent over last year, while the supply is 30 to 50 per cent lower, Chicago dealers said yesterday.

"Normally 50 to 100 trucks of chickens arrive every day," one poultryman said. "Last week there were about 10 a day, on the legitimate market."

Large government purchases and the high price of eggs are factors in the shortage, as well as higher feed costs and the difficulty of hiring help on the poultry farms, the wholesalers declared. They said low ceiling prices established by the office of price administration encourage a "sizable" black market in chickens.

HERE'S WHAT YOU MISS BY PAYING YOUR TAX EARLY

There's Fun, Philosophy, Weal and Woe.

The United States courthouse on the next to the last day for filing income tax returns, was a wonderful place yesterday for sightseeing—if you like people.

It was recommended highly by the Negro porter. Leaning over the sixth floor railing he looked down into the rotunda at some of the more than 5,000 persons lined up below. He scratched his gray-crowned black head and announced:

"Come September, I've been here 17 years and I ain't never seen nothin' like it. Nothin'." He said he had sneaked away from work one day last week and gone thru the line.

Down on the fourth floor was a roly-poly sightseer. He looked at the long lines—six abreast instead of four as on previous days—and said: "Human nature is funny. Always waiting to the last minute. Hanging on to money just as long as possible."

Room 403 was heavy with tragedy. That's where hundreds sought extensions. There was the middle aged woman in black, a heavy veil over her handsome face. Her husband has just died. A largish woman who had worn babushkas ever since coming from Russia years ago wanted to know if she couldn't wait until her son came home on leave from the army. He was so, so smart. Most people pleaded sickness. A few received extensions in filing time, but must pay interest as a penalty.

The tall, slender man stood in the lobby talking to an armed guard. His face was grim. "Cattle!" he said. "That's the way the New Deal treats people. Like cattle. Look at them. Lined up and herded along." He looked for a place to spit. The guard, smart enough to work in the United States courthouse lobby, diplomatically said: "Yeah."

A little man slunk down the hall. For a while he stood under an "Air raid shelter" sign. Then, when guards' backs were turned, he slipped into the line, close to the front. It looked like he was safe until a big, blonde woman 20 feet back pointed and shouted that he was cheating. Guards jerked the little man from his ill-gotten place and escorted him to the rear, almost a block away.

In an envelope without a return address came $441 in currency and a 2 cent stamp. The collector put the money in a "conscience" fund.

Statistics: Biggest corporation payment to date, 13 million dollars; biggest individual payment, $375,000; returns filed in last two days, 133,200, bringing total to 520,300; payments in last two days, $14,279,810.97, bringing total to $111,800,517.12, or 27 million dollars more than a year ago.

The man in the brown suit has directed lines to the cashiers' windows all during the rush. People flowing past have had thousands of dollars in their pockets, their purses or their hands. Yet he hadn't heard of a single pickpocket.

Going past at the moment were two elevator operators. One was grumbling. "You always said you'd be glad to pay income taxes," his mate said. "Sure," replied the grumbler, "but I thought I would come up to the taxes, not the taxes come down to me."

Back in the line a small, stout man silenced another grumbler. "When I read about the boys in New Guinea, I know I'm getting off cheap," he said. The crowd seemed to agree.

The Nice Old Lady finally completed the last line. She was tired, and she was thirsty. She spotted a fancy golden dragon out of whose mouth protruded a drinking faucet. She hurried over and turned the lever. There was a rumble deep inside the dragon. Then the faucet spit. But after the first burst, the water only trickled. She tried again and again. It was always the same—rumble, spit, trickle; rumble, spit, trickle.

The Nice Old Lady let her indignation carry her away. "Damn," she said efficiently. "Damn it all."

CUSTOMER RUSH TAXES FACILITIES OF RESTAURANTS

Theater Patrons Also Form Long Lines.

The crowds which invaded loop department stores in a wave of "panic buying" that set a new sales record for February have tapered off, but the lines of waiting customers in restaurants and theaters on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday night are apparently here for the duration, downtown business executives agreed last week.

The swarms of women who scrambled for the best available shoes immediately after rationing went into effect Feb. 8 and then snapped up other articles in fear of possible clothes rationing skyrocketed sales by 75 per cent over February, 1942, in many apparel stores and increased general sales in department stores by 30 per cent over a year ago. Elmer T. Stevens, president of the State Street council, said the demand has dwindled, tho department store business is probably running about 20 per cent ahead of a year ago.

Too Many Customers.

"February is usually a dull month, but last month was the biggest February on record for the loop stores," he said. "The crowds were tremendous. All the stores had too many customers for their facilities. Now the fear of clothes rationing seems to have faded."

The federal reserve bank reported that its survey of 57 large department stores in the city showed an average increase of 30 per cent in dollar volume last month over February, 1942. The peak period was the week ending Feb. 13, which showed a jump of 43 per cent.

January, 1943, in contrast, was off 5 per cent in dollar volume, compared to January, 1942. Department store executives explained this by the fact that men went on a clothes buying spree in January a year ago that resulted in abnormal business for that month.

Restaurants Lack Help.

Business in loop theaters and restaurants has increased 20 to 25 per cent over this period a year ago, which itself was above average, a partial survey disclosed. To restaurant owners this is more of a headache than a pleasure, since employés are showing a preference for work in war plants. Added to this is the new worry of obtaining sufficient food under rationing restrictions.

"Business on Saturdays and Sundays, when we have customers standing in line all day waiting for dinner, is up 50 per cent over last year, and Monday has become a tremendous night because the stores are open," said one leading restaurateur. "But getting enough help and food to take care of the business is becoming a problem."

The head of a chain of 15 loop restaurants said he doubts whether he will be able to feed the increased number of customers. Business is now running 25 per cent greater than last year with the biggest rush of customers after 4 p. m. on Saturdays and Sundays, when service men and their relatives appear in great numbers, he declared.

A spokesman for loop theaters said long lines at ticket booths are regular occurrences on week nights and that Saturdays and Sundays are becoming "the nearest thing to New Year's eve I've ever seen here."

U. S. TIRE SELLER JAILED BY FBI ON BRIBE CHARGE

Agents Act as Marked Money Passes.

Arnold R. Boris, an official of a government tire distributing agency, was arrested by federal bureau of investigation agents yesterday after he allegedly collected a bribe from a tire dealer who had been given preferential treatment and provided with a hand picked selection of tires.

The tires were some of those collected by the government from civilians after the edict limiting ownership to five casings per car went into effect.

Boris, 33 years old, is a former tire salesman. He lives at 1629 Columbia avenue with his wife and one child. He is traffic supervisor and manager of the Chicago office of the Rubber Manufacturers' Association of America, Inc., which is a subsidiary of Defense Supplies corporation and in turn of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Arrested While Leaving Shop.

Boris was arrested yesterday as he left the tire shop of Hyman Friedman, 7245 Grand avenue, Elmwood Park. FBI men said they found in Boris' pockets $25 in marked bills which Friedman had paid him at their direction.

Boris admitted, the FBI agents said, that he had received "gratuities" from several other tire dealers in Chicago since he took federal office last January. United States District Atty. Albert J. Woll said Boris will be booked Monday on a charge of accepting a bribe, punishable on conviction by a three year prison sentence and a fine.

Had Charge of 60,000 Tires.

Spencer Drayton, FBI agent in charge, said Boris visited Friedman after Friedman obtained priority forms and had ordered 100 tires from the Rubber Manufacturers' association. He said Boris assured Friedman that he would select the best of the 60,000 tires over which he has control in a warehouse at 3617 South Ashland avenue. The fee would be 25 cents per tire.

Friedman told Boris he would decide later whether to accept the proposition and communicated immediately with the FBI. The FBI directed him to go thru with the plan. The tires were ordered from Boris and delivered last Friday. They were stacked high in Friedman's shop. Behind these piles of tires, FBI agents hid.

Drives Up in Expensive Auto.

Yesterday Boris drove up in an expensive automobile with a "C" card on the windshield. He hurried in, giving the stacked tires a friendly pat.

"Well, you got them, I see," he told Friedman, "and I know you're going to be satisfied with them." Friedman nodded and handed Boris the money. Boris stuffed it in his pocket and walked out of the store.

Chicago fell below the million dollar a day mark in the Chicago cruiser campaign yesterday, but kept well ahead of the quota, the treasury reported. Sales of bonds for the 25th day to raise 40 million dollars in 40 days amounted to $728,100, boosting the total to $25,056,759.

WALLACE CALLED NEW DEAL'S NO. 1 COMMUNIST AID

Assailed for Role in OWI Propaganda Movie.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—Vice President Henry Wallace was accused today by Rep. John Taber [R., N. Y.] of being the administration's No. 1 propagandist along the Communist party line.

Rep. John Taber.

Following a preview of the latest output of the office of war information, which included a sound movie starring Wallace making a speech, the New York congressman asserted that government funds are being used to break the faith of the American people in their form of government.

"Statements by Wallace which we have just heard are right along the Communist party line," he said. "They are the same as has been put out by Earl Browder."

"Partly Drivel; Partly Insidious."

Of the entire assortment — the movie and a pair of OWI radio transcription records—he snorted angrily:

Taber's outburst drowned out even the sounds from the movie preview which had disturbed the placid silences in the house office building.

From his office, there rang thru the austere marble corridors the beat of martial music, crowds cheering, the tramp of soldiers' feet, battleship salvos, chattering machine guns and cries of battle. Historic utterances by George Washington were heard; Joe Mazerak, who is to steel puddlers what the legendary Paul Bunyan is to lumberjacks, was born, and Wallace had his say. It was all background for the OWI message to the nation.

Smearing Charged.

Rep. Taber also issued a formal reply to Elmer Davis, OWI chieftain, who has denied previous charges that the OWI is being used to boom President Roosevelt for a fourth term. He charged that Davis in assailing him for criticizing the OWI had "stooped to use the time worn New Deal tool of smearing as a substitute for facts."

The Wallace movie, chief object of Taber's wrath, bore the title, "The Price of Victory." It had the Vice President posed at his desk repeating the bulk of a speech of the same title which he delivered originally in May of last year before the Free World association in New York City.

In it Wallace sounded his gospel of a new world order which was characterized as "globaloney" by Rep. Clare Boothe Luce [R., Conn.].

"Groping Toward Light."

Following are some of the excerpts of Wallace's speech which have been preserved for posterity by the OWI:

"The march of freedom of the last 150 years has been a long drawn out people's revolution. In this great revolution of the people, there were the American Revolution of 1775, the French revolution of 1789, the Latin-American revolution of the Bolivarian era, the German revolution of 1848, and the Russian revolution of 1918. Each spoke for the common men in terms of blood on the battlefield. Some went to excess. But the significant thing is that people groped their way toward the light . . .

"The people are on the march toward even fuller freedom than the most fortunate peoples of the earth have hitherto enjoyed. No Nazi counter-revolution will stop it. The common man will smoke the Hitler puppets out into the open in the United States, in Latin America, and in India. He will destroy their influence. No Lavals, no Mussolinis will be tolerated in a free world . . ."

Revolution "Not Completed."

The Vice President said that such blessings as freedom of expression, freedom from fear and freedom of religion are not strange in this country but continued:

"When we begin to think about the significance of freedom from want for the average man, then we know that the revolution of the past 150 years has not been completed, either here in the United States or in any other nation in the world. We know the revolution cannot stop until freedom from want has actually been attained."

In another reference to the present conflict as a revolution, he said:

"The people, in their millenial and revolutionary march toward manifesting here on earth the dignity that is in every human soul, hold as their credo the four freedoms enunciated by President Roosevelt. Those four freedoms are the very core of the revolution for which the United Nations have taken their stand."

The movie began with Wallace occupying the whole screen. Then he faded in and out in the best Hollywood manner while his voice went on. There were varied shots of soldiers, battle scenes, factories, and farms. Many of these were quickly recognizable as having been taken from the movie colony's most colossal masterpieces and from news reels.

Transcriptions Are Different.

Entirely different were the radio transcriptions which were taken, it was explained, from a series called, "Uncle Sam," and devoted to patriotic subjects. A hearty male voice tells the story with a background of stirring music. The scenes are laid and other characters come in to act out the episodes.

The first dealt with Gen. Washington in 1776 when he was defending Manhattan.

"He never thought he would be unsupported by those he was seeking to defend," said the voice.

Criticism Recalled.

Then followed a description of criticism of the nation's founder in the Continental congress.

"He is no general to have . . ."

". . . No general to follow . . ."

". . . No general to lead . . ." said an assortment of harsh voices.

". . . Mean laughter of small minds," interposed the story teller smoothly. "But Washington kept his head above the muddy water. It was a good thing he was tall."

Later the main voice pointed out that Washington won despite criticism because "he knew his cause was just and what he was fighting for."

Telling of the early difficulties in the formation of the union, the voice observed that in those days people served their states rather than the whole country, adding:

"Like today we fight for our country and do not know we have a world."

Man of Steel Appears.

The other transcription concerned the life of the fictitious character, Joe Mazerak who, according to the account, was a man of steel that cast himself into a melting pot to give heart and soul to war materials.

It began with the statement that he was born during a storm. Thunder and rain were heard.

"Wa-a-ah," said the new born babe. The group of listeners in Taber's office snickered.

From there on with dialogue and sound effects the tale developed to its climax and conclusion.

Taber, ranking minority member of the house appropriations committee, said this record was plain silly while the first contained "insidious propaganda" against congress by attempting to show that Washington did not have the support of the colonial legislators.

"If the executive branch had a single instance to show where congress has failed in its duties it could take its case to the people," he asserted. "The executive branch would not need this propaganda. It is a plan to break down the liberties of the American people.

Take Cracks at Congress.

"The cracks taken at the Continental congress contain implied criticism against the legislative branch of our government. And this is being done with government funds without any authorization whatever. If propaganda is needed at all it is needed across the water not here at home. Americans aren't yellow; they'll fight without this kind of foolishness."

The New York congressman recently exposed on the house floor another piece of OWI propaganda—"The Life of Franklin D. Roosevelt" in cartoons similar to the comic strip booklets. He has also blasted the OWI's de luxe magazine, Victory, which he charged is loaded with political propaganda and is taking up valuable shipping space needed for war materials.

In his letter to Davis he noted that the information chief sought to justify the Roosevelt booklet with the statement that the axis powers "use the personalities of their leaders as symbols of their nations."

'Fascism' Being Copied.

"May I call to your attention, Mr. Davis, that we are now engaged in a war against those enemies to overthrow that very principle of dictatorship—the deification of one man as the leader of a country," he wrote. "That, sir, is Rascism in its simplest form. A confession by you that you are copying one of the most hideous elements of Nazism and Fascism is a startling thing when we consider the power that you today exercise over free speech in America."

He asked Davis to justify the expenditures necessary for production of the movie and the radio transcriptions. He said he is informed that the movie is being shown in every county in the nation thru the department of agriculture and the office of civilian defense. And he said he has learned that the transcriptions have been distributed to 700 radio stations. As to whether any stations have refused to put them on the air, it was noted, radio broadcasters are dependent for their existence upon government licenses which they must obtain from the federal communications commission.

"Troop Train," a movie short which loop theater patrons saw over and over during the last week as they went from theater to theater, was given to the picture houses free, the Balaban & Katz publicity department stated yesterday.

It was made at the taxpayers' expense under direction of the office of war information and came to the theaters as one of a series of government produced films, the B. & K. spokesman said. The public, however, paid to see the 10 minute picture.

The film depicts moving of an armored division of the army, somewhere in this country to somewhere else—no cities being named. A few civilians are shown sitting at telephones and arranging for the train. Then follow scenes of tanks and jeeps being driven aboard flat cars of a freight train, and made secure. The loading of soldiers into passenger cars comes next.

The rest of the picture consists of scenes of the train in motion and stopping, of the soldiers in the car seats and in berths, playing cards, shooting craps, and singing.

The picture was reminiscent of one produced by the city of Chicago recently at the expense of Chicago taxpayers, depicting some of the activities of the office of civilian defense, the free distribution of which was called part of Mayor Kelly's campaign for reëlection.

"The troop train picture is supplied to us free thru the war activities committee of the motion picture industry," said the Balaban & Katz spokesman.

FBI 'INFORMER' FINDS HIMSELF FACING A CHARGE

Robert Lahey, 35 years old, who unwittingly surrendered to the federal bureau of investigation in Chicago last Tuesday, was held yesterday for removal to Grand Rapids, Mich., to face a federal charge of transporting a stolen automobile across state lines. Lahey, a Monee, Ill., bartender, was identified as a fugitive after he told Spencer J. Drayton, chief of the FBI here, that he would sell information concerning "a man you want" for $100. Lahey was the man the FBI wanted, all right.

RUSSIAN ACCORD VITAL FOR PEACE, EDEN DECLARES

Calls for Collaboration After War.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, today asserted that post-war coöperation of Great Britain, Russia, and the United States is essential to a stable peace.

The dapper diplomat, who last year negotiated the 20 year alliance Briain concluded with Russia, hewed to the theme of collaboration at a press conference in the rambling red brick British embassy.

As he prepared to undertake a series of conferences on war and post-war problems, Eden said the allied nations must collaborate to the fullest on the assumption the war will be long and hard.

Predicts Setbacks in War.

"The allies," he acknowledged with a bright smile, "have achieved notable victories recently, but to count on a quick conclusion of the war would only work to get ourselves in trouble. The only possible assumption is that we have a long way to go.

"We must all understand hard work lies ahead. Setbacks and disappointments are absolutely certain before we can hope to win the war and the peace.

"Our motto should be 'On with the job.' It is going to be pretty tough, but no job is better worth doing."

He said the Anglo-Russian treaty he negotiated was regarded in Britain as the turning point of a new and improved chapter in relations with Russia. The treaty has improved coöperation, has helped to promote mutual confidence, and will work toward creation of additional confidence in the future, he said.

China Included in Plan.

Eden emphasized that post-war collaboration of Russia, Britain, and the United States is as important as war coöperation.

"Collaboration is pretty well indispensable if we are going to have a stable peace after the war," he said.

"I don't necessarily mean exclusive collaboration. It, of course, would bring in China and would be the foundation for the kind of collaboration we would like to see in operation among all the united nations.

"The important thing is to take precautions to make sure that Germany and Japan—Italy's problem is not of the same stature—never are able to start this sort of business again.

"That is the fundamental job of our statesmanship. We should not adopt the attitude of the last time. I don't think it wise to set up a new government in Germany and then trust to luck. We will have to take precautions in both Germany and Japan.

"Italy is different. I don't think the Italian menace will be a long, enduring menace."

The handsome 45 year old Britisher was in excellent humor as he underwent a barrage of questions from 150 American newspaper men. He arrived here yesterday by plane accompanied by British officials.

Eden said he could not discuss details of his impending conferences with President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, and other ranking American officials, other than that they will be of a broad and comprehensive nature.

Conveys Congratulations.

Eden asked reporters to convey the congratulations of the British people to the American nation for the great victory won in the Pacific by forces under Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

"The British people have watched with intense admiration the fighting prowess of the American forces and their Australian comrades in arms in the Pacific theater," he said.

Eden said he was looking forward to getting to know Secretary Hull, who was reported to be hurring back from Florida, where he had gone for a rest, to attend the conferences.

Asked whether he had definite knowledge Adolf Hitler is suffering from a nervous breakdown, Eden replied: "I don't know, but he certainly ought to be suffering from a nervous breakdown."

CANADIAN SHIP SINKS ITALIAN SUB IN BATTLE

OTTAWA, Ont., March 13 (AP).—Destruction of an Italian submarine in the Mediterranean by the Canadian corvette Regina in a night battle was announced by Navy Minister Angus L. MacDonald here today. More than 20 of the submarine's crew were captured, he said.

It was the third enemy submarine reported sunk by the royal Canadian navy in the Mediterranean waters this year. The Canadian-built Ville de Quebec sank a German submarine in the western Mediterranean last January and shortly afterward the Port Arthur sank an Italian submarine.

The Regina, commanded by 36 year old Lt. Comm. Harry Freeland of Sydney, N. S., was carrying out convoy duties along the North African coast when she saw the submarine, MacDonald related.

R. A. F. Bombers Set Fires in Raid on Burma Railroad

NEW DELHI, India, March 13 (AP).—R. A. F. Blenheim bombers blew freight cars into the air and set the remainder of a concentration of 50 cars afire in a raid yesterday on Wuntho railroad station, between Shwebo and Katha in Burma, a British communique announced today. River traffic in the Rathedaung area, north of Akyab, was shot up by a Hurricane fighter patrol, while four troop carrying launches were machine gunned near Kanzauki and casualties inflicted on the Japanese personnel, the bulletin said. No British planes were lost.

SENATE TO GET PLAN FOR ALLIED WORLD COUNCIL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—Four senators who have supported the administration's foreign policies today announced they will introduce jointly a resolution in the senate Tuesday calling on the United States to initiate a conference of allied nations looking toward coöperation in working out war and post-war problems.

The senators reported they will meet tomorrow with President Roosevelt at a special White House conference to discuss the resolution. They plan to call on Secretary of State Cordell Hull at the state department later tomorrow for the same purpose.

It was thought likely that Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, here for a conference on allied coöperation, might attend one or the other of the conferences.

All Are Interventionists.

The four senators are Carl A. Hatch [D., N. M.], Joseph H. Ball [R., Minn.], Harold H. Burton [R., O.], and Lister Hill [D., Ala.]. All are pre-Pearl Harbor interventionists. They will be accompanied to the White House by Sen. Tom Connally [D., Tex.], chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, and Sen. Robert F. Wagner [D., N. Y.].

The proposed resolution would provide:

1. An expression of sentiment that allied nations coördinate and utilize fully the military and economic resources of member nations to prosecute the war.

2. For the establishment of temporary administrations for axis controled areas as these are occupied by allied nations' forces, until permanent governments are established.

Relief Program Included.

3. For the administration of relief and assistance in rehabilitating territories of member nations which have been damaged by the axis and in axis territory occupied by forces of the allied nations.

4. For the establishment of procedure and machinery for peaceful settlement of disputes and disagreements between nations.

5. For the assembly and maintenance of an allied nations' military force and to suppress by such force any future attempt at military aggression by a nation.

Under the resolution, the senate also would advise that any organization of democratic nations for such purposes provide machinery for its modification, the delegation of specific and limited functions to such an organization, and for admission of other nations to membership. Member nations would commit themselves not to seek territorial aggrandizement.

WOMAN DIES AFTER PLUNGE INTO LAKE; 5 FAIL IN RESCUE EFFORT

Two high school girls, a college boy, and two midshipmen tried unsuccessfully yesterday to save the life of an unidentified woman, about 55 years old, who plunged into Lake Michigan from the beach at Delaware place. The girls, Nadine Anderson, 16 years old, 833 George street, and Wilma Zwickl, also 16, of 921 George street, saw the woman plunge into the water and cried for help.

Joseph Buishas.

Joseph Buishas, 18, of 165 West Ohio street, a Wilson Junior college student and former life guard at Jackson park who was studying on the beach, swam in 10 feet of icy water to the woman's side, but was unable to pull her from the lake. Two midshipmen whose names were not obtained, also went to her rescue, and the three managed to get the woman ashore. A fire department rescue squad was unable to revive her, however.

An inquest will be held at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow in the chapel at 200 East Erie street. The woman wore a black coat trimmed in brown fur, a black dress, and black oxfords. She had red hair and a ruddy complexion.

REDS FALL BACK BEFORE GERMANS' KHARKOV SMASH

Nazis Pound Ukraine Key from Three Sides.

LONDON, March 14 [Sunday] (AP).—German troops gained fresh ground in the flaming fight for Kharkov, a midnight Moscow bulletin announced last night, and Russian dispatches termed the situation "serious" as the Nazis threw hundreds of tanks and thousands of infantrymen into an assault on three sides of the Ukraine citadel.

The German high command declared SS [elite] guardsmen had "shattered enemy resistance" and advanced to the main railway station. It did not claim recapture of the city, where it said a violent street struggle still was going on.

The Moscow bulletin recorded by the soviet monitor said the Russians absorbed heavy counter-attacks on the north and south sides, but acknowledged another withdrawal "to new positions" on the west side, where "large enemy tank and infantry forces succeeded, after repeated attacks and at the cost of severe losses, in pressing back our troops."

Nazis Claim 3 Towns Taken.

The Russians officially have acknowledge four withdrawals in the last two days.

The Germans yesterday claimed they were advancing to the northwest of Kharkov. The Berlin communique said three towns were retaken west of Belgorod, which is the former German base 40 miles north of Kharkov. The towns lie west of the rail line between Belgorod and Kharkov.

Squadrons of German planes were reported to have devastated Kharkov's central section—already heavily damaged by two previous battles for the city. The Russian army newspaper Red Star termed this aerial attack a nonstop affair.

Repulse Attacks in Donetz.

Pravda termed the situation serious, stressing that the Russians were outnumbered.

The German comeback in the Kharkov area extended on a line running southeast into the Donetz basin, but Russia's midnight bulletin said 200 Germans were slain in the repulse of numerous Nazi attacks in the Izyum sector, 75 miles southeast of the Ukraine steel city.

On the central front, however, the Russians were advancing steadily upon Smolensk, 230 miles west of Moscow, in an offensive which might nullify a recapture of Kharkov by the Germans. American and British tanks and planes were being used in this drive.

Towns Taken by Reds.

Altho the Russians did not mention either sector, the Germans yesterday said the Red army had been forced to suspend its attacks in the Orel sector, north of Kursk, and claimed several Russian brigades had been shattered by Nazi forces in the Kuban area of the north Caucasus.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 13.—Survivors of a Panamanian merchant vessel which was torpedoed and sunk in the Atlantic last month told today how their ship just missed ramming a submarine shortly before they were hit.

The ship's captain, whose name was not disclosed, said the submarine was sighted 150 feet off the port bow. The captain ordered full speed ahead and the ship's gun crew opened fire. The navy did not disclose the result of the action. The vessel was hit by two torpedoes and went down with the loss of 19 men. Thirty-two were rescued.

Moscow, March 13 (AP).—The Russian people heard official Russian appreciation of American lend-lease aid for the first time today when Moscow newspapers printed a statement made by Ambassador Maxim Litvinov in Washington, D. C., on the second anniversary of lend-lease two days ago.

The ambassador was quoted as having said lend-lease material received by Russia had "brought tremendous aid, which is deeply appreciated by the people of the soviet union, who are fully aware of its extent."

[American Ambassador William H. Standley had said in Moscow last Monday that the Russian people had not been told of the extent of American aid.]

Today's newspapers also carried excerpts from speeches made by President Roosevelt, Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius Jr., and British Ambassador Halifax at the anniversary celebration in Washington.

AMIENS, RAILWAY CENTER, BLASTED BY YANK BOMBERS

LONDON, March 13 (AP).—Heaping new destruction on German targets on top of a record smash at Essen by the R. A. F. last night, a great fleet of American heavy bombers today raided the important French rail junction of Amiens, 60 miles northeast of Rouen, which was bombed yesterday.

It is thru these two key junctions that the Germans must pour most of their supplies for troops assigned along 100 miles of French coastline between the Somme and Seine rivers.

Bomb Abbeville and Poix.

Railroad yards at Abbeville and Poix also were attacked in the daylight sweep, U. S. A. A. F. headquarters and the British air ministry announced in a joint communique.

All the American bombers returned from the day's operations but six of the escorting Spitfires were reported missing. The communique said four enemy aircraft were destroyed by the fighters and "some" by the bombers.

[Another R. A. F. raid on Europe was indicated last night when the German Deutschlandsender radio went off the air.]

London had an alert tonight, but officials said it had been "a mistake." There was no explanation.

Krupp Works Still Burning.

R. A. F. reconnaissance officers reported large fires still were burning in the center of the Krupp arms works at Essen in mid-afternoon today as a result of last night's assault.

In the latest blow at the Krupp plant a cloud of four engined planes exceeded the attack which burned and shattered 450 acres of Essen on March 5.

The air ministry had described last week's raid as probably the heaviest blow of the aerial war, more than 1,000 tons of bombs ruining dozens of the Krupp buildings and leaving 30,000 persons homeless, but it said last night's raid was better still.

23 Bombers Lost.

Pilots said that smoke from the carpet of fire set last night reached a height of 15,000 feet.

Of the ground defenses, strengthened since the raid last week, one pilot said the Germans "seemed determined we shouldn't get thru"—and 23 bombers did not return.

The air ministry description of the attack indicated more than 1,000 tons of bombs were tumbled on the munitions center.

CANADIAN URGES WORLD POLICE AFTER THE WAR

Ottawa, Ont., March 13 [Special].—At a luncheon of the Progressive Conservative association of Canada here today John Bracken, leader of the party, defined the party position in these words: "We can achieve a world of greater peace instead of a world of even more terrible wars if we desire it enough to pay the price of international coöperation. It will be a battle against national selfishness.

"It is as one of many nations that we are fighting this war and it is as one of many nations dedicated to the destruction of the Prussian philosophy of race superiority, and to the promotion of international trade and comradeship that we shall win peace. When that day comes we must be ready to do our share and help provide an international police force to assure order in the world.

"As Canadians we believe in Canada first, in the maintenance of the British commonwealth connection, in Canadian-American goodwill and in world coöperation. It is within that framework that we must seek by positive and constructive action and enduring peace."

U-BOAT BELIEVED SUNK BY GREEK ESCORT VESSEL

LONDON, March 13 (AP).—The Greek government in exile today said that one of its escort ships, the Adrias, was believed to have sunk a U-boat which attempted to attack a convoy in the Atlantic. The Adrias fought the submarine with gunfire and depth charges.

A Norwegian communique reported the loss in action of the Norwegian minesweeper Harstad.

5 Speedboats Sunk, Say Nazis.

BERLIN, March 13.—The German communique today reported that German patrol boats last night sank three speedboats in an engagement against British torpedo and artillery speedboats off the Dutch coast. In the English channel, two more speedboats were said to have been sunk when 12 attacked the German flotilla. Long distance batteries from both sides of the channel were said to have joined the fight.

HOLDS MASS FOR 1ST CHAPLAIN TO DIE IN MOROCCO

Rites Conducted by Archbishop Spellman.

BY RUTH COWAN.

FEDALIA, French Morocco, March 13 (AP).—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York said mass today at a plain, hastily built wooden altar in a small French cemetery over the grave of the first American chaplain killed in the second World war.

The Rev. Clement Falter of Akron, O., Catholic chaplain in an infantry unit which landed last Nov. 8 with the first United States assault troops, was killed during the French resistance. He was buried with a number of other Americans who lost their lives while going ashore.

Tells of Consolation.

It was a simple service held amid the white crosses marking the graves. On these crosses, placed at the heads of mounds too fresh to be grass covered, are plates giving names and serial numbers of the fallen soldiers.

At the conclusion of the mass the archbishop walked slowly to the edge of the wooden platform and said simply:

"It was not my intention to say anything, but still I feel that on this occasion I should tell you of the consolation I have experienced to be able to offer the holy sacrifice of the mass for the eternal repose of all our fellow Americans who have given their lives for our country and for the principles our country stands for.

"When I left the United States a month ago it was one of my most cherished hopes to visit the graves of American soldiers and sailors and to offer the sacrifice of the mass."

He added that here this morning "in a cathedral under the sky with the birds singing accompaniment" he was realizing that hope.

Greets Soldiers.

That, he said, gave him consolation, as did seeing present so many comrades of the men buried there. "I am sure you share with me the feeling of gratitude to Almighty God that we are citizens of our land and that our land stands for the principles it does."

Afterward, the archbishop shook hands with those present and told them if they wished him to write to anyone back home when he returns to give him the addresses. He spent 15 minutes taking down names.

But it may be some time before he gets home. He is visiting the cemeteries of the American dead in North African and holding conferences with Catholic chaplains. He is the director of the Catholic chaplains in United States military service.

Later he plans to visit allied headquarters and then go to Tunisia to see the troops and chaplains on the battlefront. After leaving Africa he is going to Iraq, India, and China.

'WE'LL PUSH AXIS TO DESTRUCTION' —EISENHOWER

Allied Airmen Pound Foe in Tunisia.

ALLIED HDQ. IN NORTH AFRICA, March 13 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has told his troops that German and Italian forces in Tunisia are doomed to be pushed into the sea and eventually destroyed now that three of their efforts to break out of the encircling allied ring have been smashed.

Gen. Eisenhower's order of the day, which was released for publication today, was dated March 9, just two days after Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery of the British 8th army had promised that "it will then be our turn to attack" after giving the enemy a "very bloody nose" as a result of his attempted offensive out of the Mareth line.

Eisenhower's Order.

Referring to Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim's series of northern thrusts against the British, Marshal Erwin Rommel's central Tunisian offensive in February and his abortive attack from the Mareth line a week ago in which he lost 52 tanks, Gen. Eisenhower's order of the day said:

"Some of the fighting has been bitter and we have suffered losses, but the enemy has been once frustrated and twice defeated in his attempts to break the allied ring encircling him.

"Possibly he will make further and desperate efforts, but I know that the troops of our field armies will, with the continued effective support of our naval and air forces, inexorably push him back to the sea and to destruction.

"For the immediate future I know that each one of us has no other thought than to do his full duty and more in clearing Tunisia of the enemy."

Actual fighting as reported today in the allied communique was confined to vigorous patrol activity all along the front and a repetition of allied aerial blows directed particularly at Tunis and Sousse.

Heavy and medium United States bombers gave the docks and railway yards at Sousse, 62 miles south of Tunis, and the road junction of Enfidaville, 25 miles north of Sousse, a heavy pounding yesterday, the communique disclosed.

Scouring the Sicilian straits for axis convoys, Mitchell medium bombers escorted by Lightning fighters fell upon a flotilla of barges and sent three of them to the bottom. They damaged a number of others and shot down two Italian three motored bombers as well.

Fighter bombers also damaged enemy vehicles and positions in the Sedjenane area on the northern sea flank, while to the south the western desert air forces hammered at Mareth line positions and bombed Palermo, Comiso, and Porto Empedocle.

Face New Nazi Tanks.

Montgomery's veteran armored divisions and famous 25 pound batteries are hard against a 40 mile wall, the Mareth line, blocking a bottleneck between the sea and the hills, and they are faced by some new German tanks, including heavy Mark VI.'s, and 88 millimeter antitank batteries.

[The Italian communique yesterday claimed five allied ships and a destroyer were hit in air raids on two convoys near Bone and Philippeville, Algeria, and numerous allied planes smashed in a raid on an airdrome.]

AXIS LAUNCHES DRIVE ON LOST TIME IN SHOPS

New York, March 13 (AP).—Axis-controled radio broadcasts, reported to the office of war information, indicated tonight that a drive against industrial absenteeism is being launched in Germany, Italy and Nazi-occupied France.

The Nazi-operated Paris radio quoted an announcement by Vichy's secretariat of the navy calling on absentee workers at the Lorient arsenal to "regularize their positions," the OWI reported. Lorient, site of one of the German submarine bases on the Bay of Biscay, has been battered frequently by allied bombs.

In Germany, according to a DNB news agency dispatch which the OWI said was transmitted for use by the Nazi press and radio, officials will begin an investigation Monday of absenteeism caused by accidents in all German factories.

A Rome radio broadcast said Premier Mussolini had signed a decree imposing prison sentences up to six months for "absenteeism beyond 24 hours."

U.S. PILOT PROUD OF SHOWER BATH IN INDIAN CAMP

An army pilot from Fort Sheridan, who bombed Tokio with Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle, boasts in a letter received by his parents yesterday that he has rigged together the only shower bath in his camp in India, but makes only casual mention of his 100 combat hours in 25 missions over Burma.

Capt. R. A. Knobloch.

He is Capt. Richard A. Knobloch, 24 years old, whose father, William F. Knobloch, is chief civilian operating engineer at the military post, where the family has resided for 15 years.

"I have completed over 25 missions and 100 combat hours since I've been here," Capt. Knobloch wrote. "We have just returned from a 2,000 mile trip in 24 hours, in which we dropped more than three tons of bombs."

The young captain devotes most of his letter to describing life in camp. He lives in a grass-thatched mud hut with oriental rugs on the floor. Orchids grow on trees at the door. His shower has been constructed from an oil drum and pipes salvaged from a damaged plane.

TUNISIA LESSON: MAKE YANKEES TOUGHER MEN

Experts Believe They Need to Be Hardened Up.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ALLIED FIELD HDQ., North Africa, March 13 [Passed by military censor].—To make the American soldier even more effective as a fighting man should this theater of the war become a springboard for the reconquest of Europe, it is believed by many military observers here that it will be necessary to make him more tough minded as well as harder muscled.

These were the same observations made by other military men who watched the opening phases of the war with Japan in the Philippines where the Americans were up against fanatical, well trained, and hardy fighters. In this theater of the war too, they are finding the enemy not only experienced and resourceful, but one who usually battles—that is, if he is a German—with cold, fanatical hatred and supreme belief in the rightness of his banner.

Those who hold the view that the American should be better indoctrinated believe in fighting fire with fire. They say this is total war and that, as the Russians have long been aware, it is necessary for our fighting men to go into battle with implacable hatred and the will to kill.

Suggest New Teaching Plan.

To do this, they contend, it is not necessary to take on Nazi coloring or even Nazi tricks. They believe it can be accomplished in some way thru regular orientation courses at the training camps or thru the process of teaching the soldier how best to use his weapons.

They point, for example, to the Rangers or the paratroopers, who are among our most highly skilled fighters. Their long and intensive training, which is particularly noticeable in the Rangers, prepares them to fight as coldly methodical killers.

This approach to battle often develops too amply among our other soldiers after they have gone thru several engagements and seen their comrades being killed or shot up or after they have lain under heavy dive bombing and strafing. But it is seldom found among our men before this happens.

Want to Win Quickly.

In conversations with the men themselves a certain unawareness of the purpose behind their fighting in Tunisia is encountered. While many express a deep and heartfelt hatred of the Japanese, their reactions to this part of the war might be summed up in these words: "Let's get this thing over in a hurry and get back home."

Whenever the fighting permits time for "bull sessions" there is little talk about Fascism and not much about world affairs in general. These fighting men of ours have no use for the Nazi or his creed, but their voices hold no hatred. They are concerned for the moment with the German as a soldier, a worthy foe whom they must try to kill.

With typical American good humor, wisecracks and dislike for cant or hypocrisy, they have come here to fight as one would approach an adventure. It is this apparent lack of seriousness and their failure to realize the length of the task ahead of them which some military observers would change by a mental toughening process.

ARMY CHAPLAIN WINS SILVER STAR; DRIVES OFFICER IN WAR ZONE

WITH UNITED STATES FORCES IN TUNISIA, March 12 [Delayed]—(AP).—The chaplain who drove a commander at night thru enemy shelling to rally various units and break up a German attack was awarded the silver star for bravery and efficiency today.

The citation said the chaplain, Capt. Edward Donahue of Kansas City, Mo., acquired a thoro knowledge of the area and the troops "under the most difficult conditions" and "when the enemy attempted to overrun the positions held by our force he voluntarily drove a combat commander to various units which were placed in defense positions to meet the attack."

Silver stars also were awarded to five officers and enlisted men.

MODERN MIRACLE WORKERS SAVING BATTERED YANKS

Doctors on Pacific Front Make Medical History.

BY JACK TURCOTT.
[Correspondent of New York News.]

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA, March 13.—A group of Baltimore surgeons, working under conditions undreamed of in peace time, are making medical history in the tiny operating room of an American army hospital deep in the Australian bush.

Often forced to improvise tools and drugs, these men are performing surgical miracles in saving the lives of American soldiers evacuated by plane from the New Guinea front after being given blood plasma.

An operation originally considered futile saved the life of Pvt. John F. Trojak, 25 years old, a former welder of 2437 South Homan avenue, Chicago. Trojak was near Buna Dec. 19 when a Jap plane sent a stream of bullets his way.

Tag Driven Against Heart.

At the Baltimore hospital, Lt. Col. George H. Yeager found a bullet had driven Trojak's identification tag thru the chest wall against the heart. The pericardial sac, which encloses the heart, had been punctured and filled with pus. Yeager devised tubes to drain the pus from the sac, as well as from the chest area between the lungs. Then, gingerly lifting the heart, Yeager extracted four pieces of steel from his patient's chest.

After three operations and numerous antiseptic irrigations of the heart area, Yeager cleaned the wound so Trojak could be moved. His breastbone still is split, his heart pulsations are visible, but he has recovered sufficiently to start the journey home to Chicago.

Another outstanding case is the operations which saved the life of Pvt. Charles Wheeler, 21 years old, of Quincy, Ill. Wheeler was a member of a portable hospital unit en route to Buna last Nov. 17 when Jap bombs set fire to their small ship.

Wounded by Zero Flyer.

While swimming for shore, Wheeler was attacked by a Zero strafer. An explosive bullet hit him in the mouth. Reaching shore despite the wound, Wheeler was then flown to the hospital where Capt. Theodore A. Schwartz discovered bullet fragments had penetrated his right sinus, smashed the eye socket, and lodged inside his right middle ear.

Schwartz removed the boy's right eye to prevent infection and then began extracting the fragments. Handicapped by abscesses in the soldier's face and ear, the Baltimore surgeon healed the smashed sinus and then pulled out metal fragments embedded in the ear by way of the mouth, as well as thru the ear.

Unable to remove one last bit, Schwartz probed into the ear thru Wheeler's eye. When the last bit of shell was removed, Wheeler's hearing was restored.

BELMONT BRIDGE CLOSED TODAY.

The Belmont avenue bridge will be closed to traffic from 5 a. m. to 5 p. m. today while pilings are replaced, City Engineer W. W. Berard said yesterday.

De Gaulle Asks French Unity; Await Giraud Speech Today

Note Sent in February

LONDON, March 13 (AP).—Describing the present French national morale as "shattered," Gen. Charles de Gaulle's national committee has proposed to Gen. Henri Giraud that the best way to bring unity is to fuse the two factions under the banner of Fighting France.

A four point program, outlined in a memorandum dispatched to Giraud late in February, was made public today on the eve of a broadcast by the North African leader who is expected to announce far reaching plans for liberalizing his régime.

The committee's 1,600 word communication was considered as outlining the platform of the Fighting French commission which will arrive in North Africa soon to establish liaison with Giraud and seek a better understanding.

Liberties Must Be Restored.

The memorandum suggested:

1. "The so-called 'armistice' concluded against the will of France by a pseudo government . . . must be officially held in French North and West Africa as null and void and as not engaging the nation.

2. "Fundamental liberties of thought, of press, of assembly, of association, of equality of all citizens in the eyes of the law must be restored in all French territories as they are liberated.

3. "Transformation of the republic [of France] into a 'French state' and the so-called legislative reassurances inspired by Nazi or Fascist ideology . . . must be considered null and void. Republican legality must be reestablished.

4. "No doubt should remain as to the determination of any French authority to help in assuring immediately after liberation the free expression of popular will by election with universal suffrage of national representation. . . ."

Wants Guard's Coöperation.

Declaring that on these lines the national committee thought it possible to realize an effective union of French forces, the memorandum said: "In any case, in the superior interest of the country, the national committee considers it necessary that cooperation as extensive as possible be immediately established with the French in North and West Africa."

It added that the national committee "counts on increasing its contacts and in working on common ground with the populations of French North and West Africa."

May Oust Officials

ALGIERS, March 13 (AP).—Ousting of three important French African leaders as pro-Vichyites and an attempt to bring French fleet units at Alexandria and Martinique into immediate use by the allies were reported by informed sources tonight to be potential developments in northwest Africa's political future.

It was not disclosed whether Gen. Henri Giraud would touch upon them in his speech tomorrow [noon, Chicago time], in which he is expected to announce repeal of all Vichy laws including anti-Jewish measures, and to take the brake off political debate.

Members of War Cabinet.

Informed sources expect these developments:

First: Ousting of Gen. Jean Marie Bergeret, Gen. Auguste Nogues, and Gen Rene Megidal on charges of being Vichyites. Bergeret and Nogues are members of Giraud's war council, and Megidal is commander of French air forces.

It was understood that both the British and American envoys have been insistent with Giraud that he rid his administration of Vichy supporters. A number of minor figures have been removed, but the time is believed near for the ax to be applied to Nogues, Bergeret, and Megidal. These three have been highly objectionable to the Fighting French.

Appeals Made to Admirals.

Second: Sending of missions to Martinique and Alexandria to make final appeals to Adm. Georges Robert at Martinique and Adm. Rene Emile Godfroy, the commander at Alexandria, to join Giraud's forces. Their stands in remaining aloof from other French who are fighting the axis has met with little sympathy in North Africa.

Third: A rapid growth of opinion among the North African French public and Fighting French soldiers and sailors that the French must unite, even to the extent that if Giraud and Gen. Charles de Gaulle are unable to reach an agreement they must be replaced by some one else to bring all French forces under one leadership.

AGED MAN DIES AFTER EXPOSURE.

John J. Barrett, 75 years old, a retired stockyards worker of 5608 Emerald avenue, who was found wandering in the cold in Cicero Jan. 17, his fingers frozen, died yesterday in the County hospital.

NAZIS ROUND UP FRENCH YOUTHS AS WAR WORKERS

Boys 16 to 19 Forced to Labor, Swiss Hear.

BERNE, Switzerland, March 13 (AP).—Conditions grew worse in France today, with Nazi authorities taking over the job of rounding up youths for German war industry and defense work, frontier advices said.

The Gazette de Lausanne quoted a reliable source reporting the Germans had gathered up boys 16 to 19 years old for the Todt organization to build fortifications. They were said to be held in barbed wire camps.

The Nazis have taken recruitment of workers into their own hands, the Lausanne paper declared, no longer waiting for the Vichy government to deliver workmen.

Raid Shop, Seize Workers.

It said a Nazi commission went to the office of the newspaper, France de Bordeaux, and forced men 18 to 50 to leave Bordeaux, sending them to work as laborers.

But the Germans were reported to be having increasing difficulties in rounding up workers, with many fleeing to the mountains, and others staging demonstrations.

In Geneva gunfire was heard from the French Alpine region of Haute Savoie, where the Vichy government had sent 800 mobile guards with machine guns and armored cars to dislodge guerrillas said to be under leadership of a French army officer, according to the Tribune de Geneve. Young Frenchmen seeking to escape forced labor for the Germans were reported joining the guerrillas' ranks.

Germans Demand French Help.

LONDON, March 13 (AP).—Jittery over the prospects of a 1943 invasion and the unruliness of the civil populations of occupied countries, the Germans were reported today by a foreign diplomatic source to have conferred with police authorities in Paris during the last fortnight on measures to prevent outbreaks in the hinterlands when the allies march on the continent.

The meeting, said this source who requested anonymity, was headed by Field Marshal Gen. Gerd von Runstedt, Nazi commander in France, and was attended by all the civil authorities and military personages responsible for policing western Europe.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, Fighting French leader, last night urged the French people to intensify their opposition to the German efforts to mobilize labor.

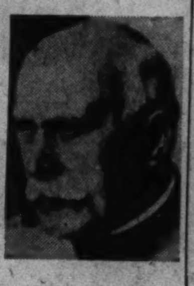
MARSHAL PETAIN REPORTED DYING AFTER STROKE

ALGIERS, March 13 (AP).—Underground reports which reached French North Africa today said Marshal Petain suffered a stroke several days ago and is in a critical condition and probably dying in a hospital near Vichy.



Marshal Petain.

Petain's illness was reported being kept secret from the French public.

Marshal Petain, 86 year old hero of Verdun who emerged from semi-retirement to head post-armistice France, has been less and less active since the Nazi invasion of Vichy territory Nov. 11, 1942. He named Pierre Laval as dictator last Nov. 18, and designated him heir presumptive to the office of chief of state to succeed Adm. Jean Darlan, who swung to the allied side in French North Africa only to die from an assassin's bullets.

The marshal held out against transfer of the government from Vichy back to Paris. He denounced what he termed the "treason" of French commanders in North Africa who joined forces with British and American troops and, with some reserve, was reported to have agreed to raise a new French army for Hitler. A Berne dispatch, Dec. 9, said Marshal Petain, "virtually stripped of powers, was permitted to leave his quarters at Vichy only when accompanied by a German soldier."

PRESIDENT'S ACT STIRS ARGENTINE POLITICAL STORM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTEVIDEO, Uruquay, March 2 [By Air Mail].—According to Buenos Aires newspapers the fiercest political storm of recent years broke loose when President Ramon Castillo, "selected" Robustiano Patron Costas as the Conservative party's candidate in the coming Argentine presidential election. The traditional practice has been for the party convention to "elect" the candidate.

The comments of such staid organs as La Prensa and La Nacion have been caustic, the latter remarking on the unfortunate intervention of the president in choosing the party's candidate who is "destined inevitably to succeed him, in view of that party's custom of not losing elections."

The Conservative leaders of the province of Buenos Aires, who look upon a deciding voice in the nomination of the party's candidate as a sort of right, are angry because not only have they been completely ignored, but the governor of the province, Rudolfo Moreno, who would have been their own choice for the presidency, was not mentioned even in connection with the vice presidency.

8 JAP COLUMNS CROSS YANGTZE; PERIL CHANGSHA

CHUNGKING, China, March 13 (AP).—The drive by eight Japanese columns across the middle Yangtze river continues to progress, the Chinese high command said today, and there was increasing belief that the enemy advance was leading up to another battle for Changsha, Hunan province capital, 95 miles south of the river.

Today's communique indicated the Japanese had made the most progress with their spearheads skirting the eastern shore of Tungting lake, from which their right wing has operated in the other three fights for Changsha.

Farther west, however, a Japanese column was reported to have suffered heavy casualties and another to have been "effectively intercepted."

During the Philippine defense, the son was stationed on the minesweeper U. S. S. Pigeon whose crew was twice cited by the President.

YANKEES' RETURN FROM JAPAN HELD UP BY SHIP ROW

CHUNGKING, China, March 13 (AP).—Difficulties between the Japanese and the owners of the 18,765 ton Italian liner Conte Verde are holding up repatriation of Americans from Japan, a responsible Chinese who has arrived from Shanghai said today.

The man said the Lloyd Triestino company demanded $3,200,000 monthly for use of the Conte Verde as an exchange ship and asked that the Japanese provide her fuel. The Japanese were reported to have considered the terms excessive.

The visitor quoted a Japanese shipping official as saying Japan had lost one-fourth of her navy and merchant marine in the Pacific war. He said that in addition to concentration camps the Japanese have established "segregation centers" for men of the United States and other allies at Postung, near Shanghai.

40 JAP, 32 U. S. WARSHIPS SUNK IN THE SOLOMONS

Navy Reveals Foe Lost 2 Battleships.

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—The navy announced tonight that two Japanese battleships were sunk in the sea battle off Guadalcanal in mid-November.

Previous official reports had claimed the sinking of one battleship and one vessel identified as either a battleship or heavy cruiser. A study of later intelligence reports proved the big warship to have been a battlewagon.

The navy issued a recapitulation of the Solomon Islands naval campaign from its start Aug. 7 thru Feb. 7 when Japanese resistance on Guadalcanal was coming to an end. It totaled Japanese combatant ship losses at 40 sunk and noncombatant ship losses at 24 sunk or destroyed, a total of 64.

The enemy warships sunk were 2 battleships, 12 cruisers, and 26 destroyers. In addition nine warships were listed as probably sunk and 81 as damaged for a total of 130 combatant types sunk or damaged.

Gives Names to Battles.

One noncombatant vessel was listed as probably sunk and 27 as damaged for a total, including those sunk, of 52. Ships sunk or damaged for all types amounted to 182. Total United States losses were given as 39 ships, 32 of which were sunk.

The navy review also gave official names to six big sea battles of the campaign and listed them, with results, as follows:

Recalls General's Warning Against Japan 25 Years Ago

Stern warning more than 25 years ago by an experienced and honored American military leader that Japan looked with covetous eyes upon our inadequately defended Pacific possessions was recalled from the forgotten past yesterday by Dr. Clarence L. Wheaton, 25 East Washington street.

The warning had been issued by his father, Maj. Gen. Loyd Wheaton, who was decorated with every military honor the government could bestow and whose outspoken opinions on the Philippine problem aroused a storm of controversy in congress prior to his retirement in 1902.

It was during the World war, Dr. Wheaton said, that his father warned of future war with Japan and the vulnerable position in which our Pacific coast and insular possessions then stood. Not only was that warning ignored, but the 25 succeeding years passed with the nation refusing to heed others who backed up this soldier who had a major share in the Philippine campaign and was more familiar with the orient than many American military leaders.

Sees Peril to Alaska.

"We must recognize that Japan must expand because its population increases at the rate of 700,000 or 800,000 a year," Gen. Wheaton warned. "Alaska offers alluring possibilities to such a nation especially when its only outside territory is Corea and Manchuria, where the land is settled to the maximum.

"Our insular possessions are our most vulnerable points and an oriental enemy probably would seize them first of all. The next move probably would be to seize and disable the Panama canal. That would split our navy into two contingents; that in the Atlantic probably would be too distant to be of any assistance and that in the Pacific would be too small to cope with the Japanese navy, which is nearly as large as that of the United States.

Seizing Passes in Rockies.

"The next strategic move of the enemy would be to land troops on the Pacific coast and in Alaska. There are but three passes thru the Rocky mountains. Japanese soldiers could seize those and then occupy all of the coast states and hold them until the Japanese had mulcted citizens of every dollar they would be able to raise, and until an army of 600,000 or 800,000 Americans had been organized. Such an army could drive out the invaders from the coast states, but Alaska would be lost to this country forever."

Military strategists agree that Japan intended to follow rather closely the program outlined by Gen. Wheaton and the passing of a quarter century altered in only a few instances the clarity of his analysis and the soundness of his counsel.

"May Be Busy in China."

Startlingly prophetic was this statement:

"Of course, Japan may be busy in China for a number of years. It may take her that long to complete the task of subjecting the orient to her complete control."

"It is furthest from my mind to suggest the Japanese are planning any such campaign now," Gen. Wheaton said. "But I recognize that such prospects may develop in the future. I merely attempt to awaken the people to their duty of preparedness, by showing them what might be done.

"Coast fortification has been carried about as far as it may be carried on the Pacific coast. All the principal harbors are protected. But there are innumerable spots, near San Francisco and other cities, where troops might land. Of course, it would be well that these points be fortified against invasion, but I do not believe that the people of the United States are ready to vote for and pay for this fortification.

Army of 300,000 Needed.

"The only alternative is that they organize, equip and support an army of at least 300,000 men and make it available for almost immediate transport to the Pacific coast. Such an army could repel an invasion.

"An addition to our navy also would be necessary in case of such a war. The naval situation amounts to this: That the United States either must build a large fleet of submarines or that its navy must be increased immensely to dominate the Pacific."

Reserve Militia Officers to Attend School for Week

Seven Chicago area Illinois reserve militia officers will attend a one week army training school convening tomorrow at Camp Skokie Valley, near Glenview, Adjt. Gen. Leo M. Boyle announced yesterday in Springfield. They are Col. Gilbert S. Maxwell, Captains A. Robert Wingerter and Hiram F. Turner; Lieutenants Arthur W. Carlson, Glenn A. Gilliland, and Henry C. Taylor, all of Chicago, and Capt. Thomas P. Gallahue, Waukegan.

U. S. SUB BATTLES 37 MINUTES TO SINK JAP PATROL CORVETTE

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

A Domei news agency dispatch broadcast from Tokio yesterday said the 6,000 ton soviet freighter Kohla had been "torpedoed and sunk the night of Feb. 17 in the east China sea by an American submarine."

This declaration was not supported by any advices from allied nations agencies. Japan and Russia have a neutrality pact, but have had exchanges over such matters as floating mines in the Sea of Japan, which Tokio charged were of soviet make.

A Japanese communique said Japanese naval airmen had sunk a 3,000 ton allied transport east of New Guinea on March 8. It declared 32 allied planes had been shot down by Japanese airmen and anti-aircraft guns in operations from the Aleutians to the Solomons from March 8 to 11, a period in which no allied aerial losses had been reported.

U. S. PLANES RAID MUNDA BASE FOR NINETIETH TIME

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—American bombers for the 90th time raided Munda and other Japanese bases in the Solomon Islands Friday, the navy reported today, after two enemy planes had dropped bombs on American positions on Guadalcanal Island.

The communique said:

"During the night of March 11-12 two Japanese planes dropped bombs on United States positions on Guadalcanal Island. No casualties or damage resulted.

"On March 12 Liberator heavy bombers carried out minor bombing attacks on Japanese positions at Ballale, in the Shortland Island area, and at Vila and Munda in the New Georgia group. During the night a force of Avenger torpedo bombers attacked Japanese positions at Munda. Fires were started in the enemy area. One United States plane failed to return."

ROB HOTEL CLERK OF $12.

William H. Warner, 55 years old, clerk at the Rex hotel, 3120 North Ashland avenue, told police yesterday that two men robbed him of $12.

CITE 8 HEROES IN CRUISER'S FIGHT WITH BATTLESHIP

A WEST COAST PORT, March 13 (AP).—Awards and citations to eight naval heroes disclosed today that still another United States cruiser had fought successfully the 14-inch shells of a Jap battleship in the battle off Guadalcanal last Nov. 13.

It was in that battle that 18 Japanese ships were sunk and 10 damaged and from which the cruiser San Francisco emerged as a victor against overwhelming odds.

The navy said today's awards were occasioned by the recent arrival on the west coast of a "battle scarred cruiser with at least four notches in her guns for Japanese victories."

Citations granted eight of the ship's heroes disclosed that the cruiser had sunk a destroyer and damaged an enemy cruiser before the ship itself was hit, and that even after it had been put out of control it sank another destroyer and caused extensive damage to a battleship.

Four Officers Honored.

Of the eight men honored four were officers led by Capt. L. T. Dubose of Washington, D. C., who was awarded the navy cross with star.

The others honored were:

Prevented Flooding.

Thomas P. Johnson Jr., Rochester, N. Y., boatswain's mate second class, recipient of the navy cross, who as trainer of a main battery director "contributed directly to continuing effective fire."

Gerald Jared Metsker, coxswain, awarded the navy cross. He immersed exposed powder and tightened loosened closures to prevent the spread of flooding "when damage to the ship subjected his powder handling room to slow flooding."

George W. Weldon, Pontiac, Mich., seaman second class, recipient of the silver star medal. He "rendered outstanding service as the loader of a five-inch gun."

CITADEL CADETS CORPS TO MARK 100TH BIRTHDAY

Charleston, S. C., March 13 [Special].—With reminiscent pageantry, The Citadel, South Carolina's famous military college, will observe the centennial of its opening next Saturday. Twenty cadets, some of them descended from families of original cadets, will report in civilian costumes of a century ago and the historic Washington Light Infantry of Charleston, in ball-buttoned uniforms, will represent state soldiers whom the first cadet corps, organized as an arsenal guard, displaced.

An afternoon review will be followed by a program in the armory at which speakers will be Cadet Hubert L. Beckington of Rockford, Ill., and Col. James H. Hammon, a 1907 graduate. The next morning The Citadel's patriotic dead will be honored by a memorial service in the cadet chapel.

Gen. Charles P. Summerall is president of The Citadel. He commanded the 1st division and the 5th army corps during World War I. He was almost the last American corps commander in France to remain in active service, and numerous decorations attest his valor. He retired in 1930 after serving four years as army chief of staff.

ADMITS TAKING AUTO FROM GARAGE.

Anthony Caliva, 18 years old, 1157 Sedgwick street, employed in a garage at 1523 North Wells street, admitted to police yesterday that his story of the theft of a car was false. He said he took the car, abandoning it after it struck a fence at Ogden avenue and Larrabee street.

LABOR DEMANDS TO SAG IN FALL, NELSON REPORTS

Production Nearing Peak, He Tells Senators.

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Word from Donald M. Nelson that war production will reach its peak next fall, slackening the demand for workers, was studied hopefully today by senators concerned over the man power problem.

The war production board chairman told a senate appropriations subcommittee, it developed today, that attainment of the production peak not only will level off the calls for workers but will reduce employment somewhat because of greater efficiency.

Moreover, Sen. Carl Hayden [D., Ariz.] hinted in questioning Nelson that the committee has received some assurance that the army's goal of 8,200,000 men for the end of this year will not be boosted further, altho Lt. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff, testified that military leaders "have not yet determined the size of the army we will ask for in 1944."

Plan Emergency Corps.

The projected size of the army has been the nub of congressional controversy over man power, some contending that the army and navy must be held down to insure adequate food production and others asserting that curtailing inductions would risk defeat.

The senate spent four days this week considering man power measures in connection with the bill of Sen. John H. Bankhead [D., Ala.], for blanket deferment of farm workers, but deferred a vote on this at least until Tuesday. It also will consider then proposals to establish an emergency worker corps to move in on labor shortages in factories or on farms and to freeze transportation workers to their jobs in labor shortage areas.

Nelson explained that as industry got more fully into repetitive operation there was a great increase in efficiency, reflected in the lowering of man hours per unit of production.

Still Short of Help.

"In the airplane industry, for example," he said, "the man hours have constantly dropped down until about November and December, when it started up a bit because we had to add many new workers and inexperienced women. But we are counting on a continual drop in man hours to produce a particular kind of plane."

Nelson insisted, however, that an additional 1,800,000 workers were needed now in war industries, plus 1,300,000 the army and navy will take out of war plants this year. He said most replacements would come from among older persons, those physically handicapped, and those released by the curtailment of civilian industries, but acknowledged that some would be drawn from farms.

MARINE LISTED AS MISSING IS DUE TOMORROW

If young Mrs. Violet Rockwell, 325 South Leavitt street, is butterfingered today as she assembles rheostats in the war plant where she has been working since her husband, Roy, 24, joined the marines last April, she has good reason to be. For the husband, reported missing in heavy Guadalcanal fighting last September, is coming home tomorrow.

Rockwell, one of five Kewanee, Ill., brothers in the army and navy, telephoned from San Diego, Cal., yesterday that he would arrive at 9 a. m. He wanted his wife, however, to prepare for a shock, explaining he had been shot in both legs.

Mrs. Rockwell believed for more than two months that her husband was dead. Then, just before Thanksgiving she received a letter from him saying he was "as well as could be expected." Just before Christmas she received a navy telegram telling her he was alive. She was so glad to get the phone call yesterday that no one thought of asking how badly his legs had been injured.

'I Am an American Day' Is Proclaimed for May 16

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt today proclaimed Sunday, May 16, as "I Am an American Day." He urged that the day be set aside for "recognition of all our citizens who have attained their majority or who have been naturalized during the past year," and called on officials and organizations to help citizens "understand more fully the duties" of citizenship.

Husband Accused

MRS. STELLA GACKOWSKI.

Albert Gackowski, 22 years old, an unemployed mechanic, was locked up at Shakespeare avenue police station yesterday on a charge of bigamy. The complainants are Mrs. Stella Gackowski, 25, of 2932 Wisner avenue, and Mrs. Betty Gackowski, 26, of 1733 North Spaulding avenue.

Mrs. Stella Gackowski told Sergt. Albert Doppke that she married her husband in November, 1938, and that she was the mother of three children. Mrs. Betty Gackowski appeared with her daughter, 2 months old, and said she married Gackowski in St. Louis.

"I came back to Chicago and lived with my folks because Albert said he was drafted," she said. "Once in a while he would come over and say he was on furlough and that his army clothes were at the cleaners. I found out where he lived and called up Stella."

U. S. SUB FIGHTS AND SINKS JAP PATROL VESSEL

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—A United States submarine attacked and sank a small Japanese warship in the mid-Pacific, the navy reported today, after a violent 37-minute fight in which one member of the sub's crew was killed. The date of the action was not reported.

The submarine discovered a Japanese patrol vessel about the size of a corvette as it was running on the surface early one morning. Lt. Comm. Willis M. Thomas of Fresno, Cal., ordered the crew to battle stations and closed up on the Jap ship.

At a distance of about two miles, the navy report said, the sub and the patrol craft both opened fire. Shell after shell from the submarine's back gun tore into the enemy hull. The Japanese poured fire from machine gun and light cannon and a machine gun bullet fatally wounded Herbert Calcaterra. There was no material damage to the sub itself. After 37 minutes the patrol ship sank.

IF YOU ARE ELIGIBLE* FOR A NEW CAR—GET THE NEWEST NEW CAR OF THEM ALL!

OLDSMOBILE WITH HYDRA-MATIC DRIVE

 You May be Eligible and Don't Know It

If you're one of the millions whose work is essential, even though it may not be outright war work, you should be eligible for a new car if you need one. And you have the right to buy the car of your choice—the model, the body style, even the color and the upholstery option that suits you best.

Come in and let us give you complete information about the new car rationing regulations. We're here to help in every way possible to make new car buying, for those who are eligible, practically as simple as it ever was.

And we're making immediate deliveries of brand new B-44 Oldsmobiles, with brand new pre-war quality tires all around, and with all the equipment you need and want. Many of these new Oldsmobiles are available with Hydra-Matic Drive, the Oldsmobile-proved fully automatic transmission that will set the pace, in driving ease, for practically all post-war cars.

Be sure you drive a Hydra-Matic Oldsmobile before you buy any new car. Come in and try the car that's ideal for today's type of driving.

Ideal for Today's Type of Driving!

1 EASY ON GASOLINE!

GASOLINE COUPONS

"Hydra-Matic" owners save gas three important ways. First—engine speed is slower, in relation to car speed, when the transmission is in 4th gear direct drive. Second—Hydra-Matic automatically selects the most advantageous gear ratio for acceleration, never delays or "forgets" when it's time to shift to a higher gear. Third—Hydra-Matic eliminates the "accelerator pumping" that wastes so much gas in a conventional car whenever gears are shifted.

2 EASY ON THE TIRES!

"Spinning the tires," when starting up or shifting, is almost impossible with Hydra-Matic Drive. The engine power flows through to the rear wheels, liquid-smooth, with all the tire-wasting tremors cushioned out. Even the most skillful driver of a conventional car couldn't duplicate the velvety, easy-on-rubber shifts you get automatically with Hydra-Matic Drive.

3 EASY ON THE ENGINE!

The engine, too, gets a better break from Hydra-Matic Drive. There is never any "racing" in a gear ratio too low for the car speed, never any "laboring" in a gear ratio too high. In direct drive, the engine goes only "29 miles" when you go "35." And that all adds up to much longer engine life.

4 EASY ON THE DRIVER!

Hydra-Matic lets you rest at the wheel! No gears to shift—no clutch to press! That's certainly a big wartime advantage, when your mind is loaded with new problems, and you're tired from overwork. With Hydra-Matic, your driving time is time for relaxing—all you have to do is step on it, steer, and stop.

5 ITS FLEXIBILITY SAVES TIME IN LOW-SPEED DRIVING!

Watch the Hydra-Matic-Drive Oldsmobiles the next time you're in traffic. They're usually first-off with the green light, without making "race track starts." Hydra-Matic Drive saves time by eliminating the pauses for gear-shifting. And Hydra-Matic makes it easier to hold "35" on the highway because you never have to shift gears.

6 4TH GEAR PERFORMANCE AS LOW AS 15 M.P.H.

SPEED LIMIT 35

Hydra-Matic should not be confused with some "over-drives" that never go into action within today's legal speed ranges, or with drives that are only semi-automatic. Hydra-Matic Drive automatically gives you the full gas-saving, engine-saving advantage of its low-reduction "4th gear" at speeds as low as 15 m. p. h.

YOU CAN'T TAKE DIAPERS OFF TAX BILL, U. S. DECIDES

Service Classed the Same as Other Laundry.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—The National Institute of Diaper Services today was given a legal boot in the pants when the bureau of internal revenue ruled that fathers may not deduct from their income tax money spent for baby laundry.

In a letter to the revenue commissioner yesterday, the N. I. D. S. said: "An unusual problem has just been brought to our attention and we hasten to address it to you with the hope that you might be able to give us a prompt solution to same."

Prescriptions Required.

The institute pointed out that altho laundry bills aren't deductible, many states require that a doctor's prescription accompany orders for diaper services. Therefore, the N. I. D. S. argued, deductions should be allowed under the new income tax provision for hospitalization, doctors' fees, and medicine.

Just to clear things up, it should be stated here that the reason many states require prescriptions for such services is that there is a fuel shortage, and laundries use fuel to wash clothes, and the states don't want laundries to wash anything unnecessary.

Same "Category" as Medicine.

Speaking of its clientele, the N. I. D. S. said:

"What these people want to know is—since a doctor's prescription is required, doesn't that put the ordering of a diaper service in the same category as purchasing medicine? And therefore isn't it possible to presume that the money paid by these taxpayers for such services can be deducted from one's income tax?"

After a conference, the bureau decided:

1. The washing of diapers, altho specialized, is no different than other laundry.
2. Laundry bills are not deductible.
3. Money paid for diaper services must be considered in the same category as money paid for laundry.

CAN MAKE WAY, SAYS WOMAN, 70; THEN PROVES IT

A police squad stopped Miss Hulda Tietzen, 70 years old, of Palos Park as she trudged along the highway at 125th street and 91st avenue in Palos township Friday night. At Oak Forest infirmary, where she was taken by police, she was discovered to be carrying a purse containing more than $1,400 in small bills and a number of stocks and bonds.

Hulda Tietzen.

Miss Tietzen said she had left her home after a family quarrel and that she was "well able to shift for herself," Police Chief Ben Hyink reported. She explained that the money was her life savings and that she received dividends of more than $100 quarterly from her stocks and bonds.

Miss Tietzen demonstrated that she was able to care for herself and others, too, Frank Venecek, general superintendent of the infirmary, said, by assisting trained nurses who were caring for other patients.

WAR MAY MAKE SHARK A STAPLE FISH IN CHICAGO

Shark, the tiger of the sea, will reach Chicago's fish markets for the first time on Tuesday.

Ten thousand pounds of the shark are being brought here by Morris Shapiro of Morris Fisheries, Inc., at 727 Fulton street. Shapiro, a wholesaler, expects shark to become a staple dish because of fish shortages resulting from rationing of meat products. Shark soup, made with the fins, is considered a delicacy by the Chinese.

Shapiro said shark probably would become a staple on the fish markets. He said the army purchased 500,000 pounds of fish here last month and that great quantities of fish are being brought from the fishing fleets in the Gulf of Mexico and on the west coast.

FATHER AND SON ARE FOUND DEAD IN BED AT HOME

Ottawa, Ill., March 13 [Special].—Elmer H. Van Schoick, 53 years old, president of the Chicago Retort and Fire Brick company, and his son, Elmer Jr., 17, were found dead in bed today. A coroner's jury returned a verdict saying they had died of asphyxiation.

Mrs. Van Schoick and another son, George, 8, were taken to a hospital after Mrs. Van Schoick telephoned for help at 2 a. m. George said the family went to bed Thursday night and that he did not remember anything more until he awoke today to find a doctor at his bedside. Mrs. Van Schoick was unable to tell what had happened.

Police at first said they believed the family had been overcome by fumes from a furnace, but investigators later said the furnace was in good working order. The coroner's jury did not determine the source of the fumes.

WEST POINTERS ON ALL FRONTS JOIN IN RITUAL

Predict Victory and Laud Academy's 141 Years.

New York, March 13 (AP).—The tradition of West Point carried around the war torn globe tonight, as illustrious sons of the United States Military academy broadcast messages of confidence from the world's fighting fronts that the school's principles of courage and leadership would lead the nation to victory in arms.

Broadcasts from great American generals were heard by members of the West Point Society of New York, meeting to commemorate the 141st anniversary of the founding of the academy.

Gen. George B. Marshall, chief of staff, headed the list of military leaders who were heard. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of the Pacific theater of war, was to be included, but Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, U. S. A. retired, president of the association of West Point graduates, said military duties prevented.

"Writing New History."

Gen. Marshall, asserting that "our success in this war depends above all on leadership," said:

"We have the best equipment. We have the finest personnel in the world. Given adequate leadership, victory is certain, and we will be spared unnecessary loss of life and unavoidable delays. Your graduates provide the standard for that leadership. In Australia and the Solomons, in the far east and Cairo, in Algiers and Morocco, and in the British Isles your graduates are furnishing the commanders of American warriors. West Point is writing new history, and I am certain it will be glorious history."

Tribute to Fidelity.

From Australia, Lt. Gen. Walter Krueger, commander of the sixth army, paid tribute to the academy, and said that "with our country enshrined in our hearts and minds, we will carry our flag onward to triumphant victory over our enemy."

From London, Lt. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, commander of the European theater, said that "a grateful nation pays tribute to the fidelity with which West Point has met the trust" of its responsibilities.

Other messages were heard from Maj. Gen. Orlando Ward, African command; Maj. Gen. Henry T. Burgin, representing the Hawaiian command; Maj. Gen. Simon Buckner Jr., commander of Alaskan defense; Maj. Gen. Danford, attending the dinner, and Maj. Gen. Francis B. Wilby, superintendent of the United States Military academy.

FIGHT ON, ADVISES FINNISH NEWSPAPER EDITED BY PREMIER

HELSINGFORS, Finland, March 13 (AP).—The conservative organ Uusi Suomi, of which Premier Edwin Linkomies is editorial board chairman, was among newspapers which expressed Finland's determination today to fight on against Soviet Russia. The occasion was the third anniversary of the signing of the Moscow treaty which ended the winter war of 1939-40.

Uusi Suomi said Finland had a choice of two policies: "Either to act with arms to defend our security or capitulate and submit, at the very best, to the same state of helplessness dictated by the Moscow peace. The choice is not hard."

The 1943 trade pact between Germany and Finland was signed in Helsingfors, today, providing for an exchange of agricultural and industrial goods.

"Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press and that cannot be limited without being lost."—Thomas Jefferson.

TWO TERMS ARE ENOUGH.

The movement originating in Illinois to amend the Constitution to provide that nobody can have more than two terms in the White House is spreading rapidly. Resolutions requesting the amendment have already been introduced in the legislatures of Illinois, Iowa, and Michigan and approved by one of the two chambers in each state. Wisconsin may be the next state to take action.

The resolutions petition congress to call a convention at which an amendment to the Constitution would be proposed limiting the tenure of any President to two terms. If the legislatures of two-thirds of the states concur in the resolution initiated in Illinois, congress has no recourse but to summon the convention into session for the purpose of drafting the amendment. Upon being ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states, or by conventions in the same number of states, the amendment would be in force.

This means should recommend itself especially to legislators of the southern states, who are torn between traditional allegiance to the Democratic party and opposition to the New Deal and its leader. Southerners, by voting in favor of a two-term amendment, could retire Mr. Roosevelt without voting against the party which commands their loyalty. Legislatures of the northern and western states, which are now predominantly Republican, can be expected to support the call for an amendment as a matter of clear conviction.

Some persons may say that the rebuke to Mr. Roosevelt is perhaps unnecessarily harsh, but the answer would seem to be that nothing less will suffice. Mr. Roosevelt is a willful man and no one has ever accused him of not knowing what he was doing. When he put aside the two-term tradition in 1940, placing himself above Washington, Jefferson, and all the great Presidents of the past, he did so deliberately. He is now busy developing conditions favorable to himself for a fourth term, and no one can say that he is not completely conscious of what he is doing.

He has prevented any of his party contemporaries from rising to challenge his position, but has surrounded himself with mediocrities whom he permits to assume all the unpopularity for administering the policies he initiates. He is sedulously marshaling convention votes by finding high paying federal jobs for all the discredited lame ducks of the party who were thrown out of office by the people but who still wield influence within what is left of the party. He has thrust himself into state politics, as in New York, with the sole purpose of trying to retain control of the state delegations that will attend the Democratic convention of 1944.

The republic cannot long survive if the tradition of unlimited tenure of the White House becomes established. The remedy is a constitutional amendment.

DEFENDERS OF FREEDOM.

Sen. Brooks' eloquent denunciation of the Roosevelt administration's efforts to undermine and destroy the newspapers of the nation gives reason for both hope and belief that we have seen the worst of that treachery. As the senator said:

"Any step falsely taken which impairs the freedom and usefulness of newspapers is a perfidious act. Those who join any such conspiracy are enemies of this Republic and active supporters of those alien philosophies against which the whole military and civilian power of this nation is now marshaled."

There is reason to believe that these underhanded attacks are waning, as evidenced by the most recent attempt to cut newsprint rations, which collapsed in the face of proof of the deception of the rationers. But the battle is not over. The attempt to blackmail the Associated Press thru anti-trust prosecution remains, and the plotters against American freedom, who rightly see the newspapers as the greatest obstacle to their success, may be depended upon to try new schemes.

Sen. Brooks, however, has placed them upon warning that their scheming is known, and its objectives recognized. Since last November the schemers have been shorn of power. They have sought by bluff and trickery to hide their actual impotence in the face of a congress, the majority of whose members, Republicans and Democrats, thoroly detest the ends they seek.

Sen. Brooks' speech thus serves the valuable purpose of encouraging those in congress who think as he does to assert their power. In this endeavor to awaken congress to reassert its independence other spokesmen of the middle west have done yeoman service in recent days, and particularly the delegations from Indiana and Michigan.

Sen. Willis of Indiana, an editor himself, has been highly effective in the senate. Rep. Halleck from the same state has been equally valuable in the house. Among the Michigan congressmen Rep. Shafer, Rep. Dondero, and Rep. Engel have all made their influence felt, and the valiant Rep. Hoffman, who never lacked courage to speak out when the New Deal was at the high tide of its success, is still in the forefront of the battle. To all of these men, and to the voters who sent them to congress, the rest of the American people have reason to be grateful.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN.

The Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, the "glacier priest," says that Stalin will show within the next month whether he is the friend of the United States or the friend of Japan.

The Kamchatka fishing treaty between Russia and Japan is renewed annually and the negotiations usually are not finished until spring. The fishing rights this year involve something more important to the Japanese than a mere food supply. It is from the weather stations in the Kamchatka area that the Japs get the meteorological data which enable them to forecast weather conditions in the Aleutians. Will Stalin again give the Japanese this advantage over us?

The points raised by Father Hubbard must be met. It is absurd for us to be fighting Russia's war while Russia refuses to give any assistance to ours in the Pacific. The questions of Russian aid and Russian facilities for attacks upon the Japanese homeland are far more important than whether the Russian people know of and appreciate all of the lend-lease aid the United States has contributed to their successes on the German front.

MRS. SMITH MEETS UP WITH HER SOCIAL GAINS.

Anna Smith is an American citizen of retirement age. She is over 65. She has not retired, altho she might be thought to have earned the ease and blessings of the social gains. She has worked for her living all her adult life with the exception of some ten years when a successful marriage allowed her to be a housewife. Then, the morning after the doctors gave their verdict, she returned to work to support a helpless husband whose long and hopeless infirmity was to take all the savings. [We've never been able to find freedom from that fear or that reality.]

Anna is a skilled laundress in private employment. That means out in the morning in time to be in homes in one part of the city or another by 8 o'clock. There is no 40 hour week and no time and a half for overtime. These are social gains which have not reached Anna's occupation. They have missed any number of other occupations. Anna has no social security number. Again her occupation is at fault, along with many other occupations. It is not under the cover of this article of the law.

When her husband was found to be unable ever to work again, misunderstanding friends undertook to get him old age assistance. They succeeded, to their regret and to the wife's regret. It was a mistake, but a natural one, and it exposed some of the fantasies of this social gain. Old age assistance, if a necessity, is tough luck in its worst form unless there is some way of mitigating its conditions. Any home for the aged, public or private, under a management with half a conscience, is a haven of comfort and security compared with the impoverishment offered by this form of social justice.

After a few months' experience with it Anna was relieved to show the social security worker to the door and close it on her finally and for all. The difficulty, aside from the trouble caused by a social worker of unfortunate and no doubt unusual disposition, was one of qualification. There was some life insurance to be surrendered if aid was to be given, thus stripping the wife of that small protection when she should be left alone. Then the flat was in an out of bounds neighborhood and was furnished too well—the carry over from days when the husband was a wage earner. The food was too good. There was meat instead of gruel. Impoverished conditions were required to establish eligibility—a poverty home and a poverty diet. To qualify for old age assistance these two people had to reduce themselves to conditions which the New Deal says are a reproach to the economic system and an indictment of the nation's common sense and common humanity.

There's no screw loose here except that the pretense of social justice is to enable self-respecting people, coming upon the misfortune of old age with insufficient resources, to maintain their self-respect in conditions which permit it. On the contrary, this social gain with its stipulations is admirably designed to keep a person from seeking it—a reason for making the old time poorhouse so miserable that it would be the last refuge of a homeless person with empty pockets. The assistance can be turned to profit only by people who have an aged dependent qualifying as an individual on his own but actually a member of a household unwillingly obligated to take him in. In such a household he is less a liability and more an asset if he has a pittance from the government.

The mistake in the Smith household and the experience following it gave Anna a good bird's-eye view of the New Deal Elysium. It is the only view millions of Americans have of it and it may be the only view they ever will have. Two powerful political groups, organized labor and organized agriculture, each staked out a claim in the costly domain of the New Deal. Now many of the farmers think "they wuz robbed," but labor must concede that it was no orphan child at the window outside. The benefits, following lines of political advantage to the New Dealers, went to people who had the best opportunity to protect themselves. They had property, jobs, and guarded interests. Quite likely, any changes in the social security laws as a result of the Delano reports will not ignore political advantages. If so, Anna is not going to get much of anything.

Outside the scheme of social gains were the tradesmen and the small private enterprises who are so easily knocked over by a rising wind, farm laborers, sharecroppers, tenant farmers, and people in domestic service, millions of them and most of them engaged in precarious occupations and with uncertain futures. For most of them the New Deal invented a phrase—"The one-third ill-fed, ill-housed, ill-clad." Having covered them with a rhetorical robe it passed by on the other side, admiring its social achievements.

Anna is working after retirement age for two reasons. She has nothing to retire on. She has missed social security, social gains, and social justice at every turn in the road. And from what little she has seen of them she has decided that she wants no more of them at any time. Second reason, she likes to work. It keeps your spirits up when they might sag in the middle. Thruout her experiences the New Deal piled billions of debt on billions of debt. That was for the social gains. Then came war, and because of the social gains the fiscal position of the country was that of a people who had just come out of two four-year, world sized conflicts before taking on a third. It didn't matter. You owed it to yourself.

Anna has just discovered what she owes herself. She has met her first income tax schedule. She'll be square with the treasury this year when she gives it about one month's pay. She doesn't mind. It's the war. At 66 she earns an average of $17 a week as long as she can get about. After that there isn't any more. Then the New Deal must write her off its record of beneficiaries. It will be unable to collect from her.

It may be that "he barks at the rich and bites the poor."

These are days of soul searching in the worried world of sport. What a substitute shortstop for the Phillies must ask himself is, "Am I indispensable to the national morale?"—Detroit News.

RIGHTS OF AMERICANS

[Following is the address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune, including the part for which there was not radio time, on the Chicago Theater of the Air, over W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

These are the cases that established the right of freedom of speech and of the press:

In 1920 the city of Chicago sued The Chicago Tribune for alleged libel because it had criticized the fiscal administration of the city.

The case was absolutely novel in this country and based upon supposed English and Canadian precedents. The defense was that the suit was for libel upon government and was outlawed by the guarantees of freedom of the press in state and federal constitutions. The history of that emancipation, briefly sketched in these lectures, was compiled and cited as the basis of the successful defense before the trial court and the Supreme court of Illinois.

Said Chief Justice Thompson of Illinois in handing down the unanimous decision of the court:

"The struggle for freedom of speech has marched hand in hand in the advance of civilization with the struggle for other great human liberties. History teaches that human liberty cannot be secured unless there is freedom to express grievances. As civilization advanced and as the means for expressing grievances multiplied, the struggle between the people and their despotic rulers became more bitter. With the opening of the 17th century the people began to publish newspapers and history begins to record unspeakable prosecution of the editors. . . .

"There were few prosecutions for libel on government in the American colonies, and no court of last resort in this country has ever held, or even suggested, that prosecutions for libel on government have any place in the American system of jurisprudence. The right of the government to prosecute its accusers was founded on the theory that the king could do no wrong. He was an hereditary monarch and was not responsible to the people. When the people became sovereign, as they did when our government was established under our Constitution and the ministers became servants of the people, the right to discuss government followed as a natural sequence. . . .

"The fundamental right of freedom of speech is involved in this litigation and not merely the right of liberty of the press. If this action can be maintained against a newspaper it can be maintained against every private citizen who ventures to criticize the ministers who are temporarily conducting the affairs of his government. Where any person by speech or writing seeks to persuade others to violate existing law or to overthrow by force or other unlawful means the existing government he may be punished, but all other utterances or publications against the government must be considered absolutely privileged. . . .

"This action is out of tune with the American spirit and has no place in American jurisprudence."

In 1925 the legislature of Minnesota passed a statute providing that upon an information being filed in a court of equity alleging that any newspaper was a "malicious, scandalous, and defamatory" newspaper, a judge could permanently enjoin its further publication.

The statute was cunningly devised not only to avoid the necessity of indictment by the grand jury, as had been done in the Zenger case, but to avoid a jury trial also and leave the newspaper at the mercy of a corrupt or politically controled court. The Saturday Press, a small Minneapolis paper, began a campaign against gambling and vice and their protection by the notoriously corrupt police force and prosecutor of that city. Of scandal in the generally accepted meaning of the word—gossip about the private lives of private citizens—there was not a word.

The district attorney of Hennepin county, which contains Minneapolis, filed an information charging that the Saturday Press was a "malicious, scandalous, and defamatory newspaper." A Minneapolis judge ruled that the newspaper was a nuisance and issued a permanent order abating the nuisance.

The Minnesota Supreme court held, upon appeal, that suppression of the Saturday Press did not infringe upon the guaranteed rights of freedom of speech and of the press, but the Supreme court of the United States held the law unconstitutional. This ruling has become the great charter of the freedom of the press.

In the opinion, delivered by Chief Justice Hughes, the court said:

"If we cut thru mere details of procedure, the operation and effect of the statute in substance is that public authorities may bring the owner or publisher of a newspaper or periodical before a judge upon a charge of conducting a business of publishing scandalous and defamatory matter—in particular that the matter consists of charges against public officers of official dereliction—and unless the owner or publisher is able to satisfy the judge that the charges are true and are published with good motives and for justifiable ends, his newspaper or periodical is suppressed and further publication is made punishable as a contempt. This is the essence of censorship.

"The fact that for approximately 150 years there has been almost an entire absence of attempts to impose previous restraints upon publications relating to the malfeasance of public officers is significant of the deep seated conviction that such restraints would violate constitutional right.

"Public officers, whose character and conduct remain open to debate and free discussion in the press, find their remedies for false accusations in actions under libel laws providing for redress and punishment, and not in proceedings to restrain the publication of newspapers and periodicals.

"While reckless assaults upon public men and efforts to bring obloquy upon those who are endeavoring faithfully to discharge official duties exert a baleful influence and deserve the severest condemnation in public opinion, it cannot be said that this abuse is greater, and it is believed to be less, than that which characterized the period in which our institutions took shape.

"Meanwhile the administration of government has become more complex, crime has grown to most serious proportions, and the danger of its protection by unfaithful officials and the impairment of the fundamental security of life and property by criminal alliances and official neglect, emphasize the primary need of a vigilant and courageous press, especially in the great cities. . . ."

The next attack upon the freedom of the press came in Louisiana, where the legislature passed a statute especially taxing newspapers with more than 20,000 circulation a week.

The Supreme court of the United States reaffirmed the principle that the 14th amendment forbids the states from infringing upon the essential liberties of American citizens guaranteed in the Constitution of the United States, and reviewing the history of the struggle to free the press, referred to the oppressions of the press in England, with which the makers of the Constitution were conversant, among them, "Taxes Upon Knowledge." And it declared that while newspapers could be taxed in common with other citizens, they could not be subjected to oppressive or discriminatory taxation, the result of which would be to control them or limit them in their functions.

Said Justice Sutherland:

"For more than a century prior to the adoption of the amendment—and, indeed, for many years thereafter—history discloses a persistent effort on the part of the British government to prevent or abridge the free expression of any

TAKE CARE OF YOUR PHYSICIAN.

THOUSANDS of medical men have been called to the colors. Their participation is vital. It is of the utmost importance that the best care shall be available for our soldiers.

This means that civilians will need to exercise forbearance. It may not be possible for physicians, many of whom are now doing double duty, to respond instantly to every demand. In other words, it will be necessary to conserve the strength of the doctors who keep the home fires burning. After all, they are human and can become fatigued to the point of exhaustion. No one would choose deliberately to trust his life to one who is so tired that he cannot think clearly.

What can we do to help? In the first place we may be somewhat more cautious about breaking the rules of hygiene. There never was a time when personal health deserved more attention. In fact, we cannot afford to be ill. We dare not disregard a severe cold or risk a bout with influenza. If going to bed, keeping warm, and drinking quarts of fluids fails to bring relief, the family counselor should be called. It goes without saying that he would rather know about your illness early than to be confronted later with a serious situation.

Even tho he cannot come as promptly as you wish, he may be kept informed by telephone. His judgment will then determine those who urgently require his presence. Imaginary and fanciful ailments, however, must give way to the realities presented by disease.

Then, too, we can meet office appointments promptly. Visiting, and the exchange of pleasantries may be relegated to some more suitable occasion. Go prepared with a few notes about your symptoms and be ready to narrate them without hesitation.

It is scarcely fair to those who are really sick to use our crowded hospitals for rest cures. Furthermore, trained nurses and other types of personnel are working overtime because so many of their colleagues have joined the armed forces. But we can depend upon these institutions to do their part. By and large they are staffed by people who have more at stake than the mere earning of a livelihood. Idealism does exist within this chosen group.

We must not forget that many of our experts are in the older decades. Nevertheless they will carry the burdens until their younger assistants return.

There is an old adage that "necessity is the mother of invention" and it may well be that our present dilemma will inculcate wholesome lessons. We can learn more about our bodies and how to protect them without becoming self-dosers or slaves to "cure-alls."

Out of this world upheaval with which we must continue to struggle much good may come. If we will but exercise common sense we can emerge without the slightest physical deterioration.

A CULTURE.

G. J. writes: How is a throat culture made?

REPLY.

A bit of cotton on a slender wooden stick is passed over the affected area. It is immediately brought into contact with media [bacteria food] within a glass tube. The container is closed promptly and placed in an incubator. If germs are present, they will grow within 24 to 48 hours. Proper staining methods will identify the type. The entire procedure is conducted under sterile precautions.

TIME TO EAT.

R. S. writes: Which is better—to eat when one is hungry or when the stomach is empty?

REPLY.

Hunger is associated with the absence of food. In fact, the gastric pouch will engage in rhythmic contractions as a reminder that edibles are needed. Fill it up and peace will reign.

NOT AS IMPORTANT.

D. C. writes: I know that bed rest and good food are essential to the cure of tuberculosis. Is a dry climate of equal importance?

REPLY.

Desirable but not equivalent to the other two factors.

THE LORD IS ON HIS SIDE.

Chicago, March 6.—It's gratifying to hear a military leader like Gen. MacArthur giving credit to a "merciful God" for the great victory at the Bismarck sea. Like other great leaders, such as Chiang Kai-shek and George Washington, Gen. MacArthur is not ashamed to look to the Lord for guidance and help and to acknowledge same when it arrives. His record of reading the Bible thru three times is something all Christians would do well to duplicate.

And why should not the Lord be on the side of those who worship and honor the only true God and His son, Jesus, rather than on the side of those who in their darkness turn back to heathen mythology and worship of man [Nazilism and Shintoism]?

THE AGRICULTURAL PARAGON.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—When I read in the papers and hear on the radio about the great number of years required to make a competent farm hand I have to laugh. All that is necessary is a strong back and a weak mind. When I was 12 years of age I went to work on a farm and before I was 14 could plow, sow, reap, mow, and milk six cows an hour by hand. I could break in colts, dock and shoe horses, and cure them of the colic, ring bone, side bone, heaves, springhalt, distemper, blind staggers, and the pink eye. I could dehorn cattle and vent them for bloat, shear sheep and act as midwife at lambing time, wean calves, and neutralize little pigs. I could pitch to the thresher and use the flail, drain land, build hedges, thatch the haystack, clean out the barns, bed down the stock, run the chaff cutter, and once I moved a well without spilling a drop of water. I used to butcher hogs, saving the bladder for a football, treat the poultry for roup, set hens, help chicks out of their shells, and chase down AWOL roosters, fix the windmill, mend the family shoes, cut the kids' hair, take my farmer boss his breakfast in bed, and give advice on soils, fertilizers, and crop rotations. After two years I quit the farm and went to work in a quarry. I'm not as good as I used to be, but for years I have made my taxes by winning first prizes in weight judging contests at stock shows.

ON GOVERNMENT AND EFFICIENCY.

Chicago, March 4.—Here are some worthy thoughts on government versus private ownership which were picked up many years ago from a source now unknown:

Governments are incapable of producing efficiency, not being constituted for that purpose, and not having an incentive to be efficient. The primary incentives in government are political, which are heedless and thoughtless, and the secondary incentives are burocratic, which are stubborn, fixed, and frozen.

Private enterprise survives by results. Governmental enterprise survives by taxation. Success enables private enterprise to live and failure kills it. Governments survive failures, and the losses in the enterprise and the damage done are charged to the taxpayer.

Both in purpose and in personnel the government is incapable of surviving without taxation. It is not dependent upon the success of what it undertakes except in the case of war, in which case two governments are in competition, and, not being responsible in all its other enterprises, it is incapable of conducting them without a maximum of waste and a minimum of efficiency.

ERWIN BAUMRUCK.

ARE WE HEADED BACK TO THIS?

Chicago, Feb. 26.—Last week I had a group of friends to lunch, and we talked about our girlhood when our parents or the neighbors had ash hoppers.

Ask any kid today what an ash hopper is and he will stare at you. Well, for the benefit of those who never saw one, they burned wood in those days and saved all their ashes. They built a box about six feet square and put the wood ashes into it. They kept it covered so the rain wouldn't seep thru and weaken the lye. They saved all their grease and bones for the year, then in the spring they poured water on the ashes and a brown liquid came out of the bottom called lye.

I can still see mother drop an egg into it. If the egg bounced, it was strong enough to cut the grease and make soap. Then they took a huge kettle and hung it on a wooden tree trunk which had been placed on two forked stumps of trees set into the ground. Under the kettle they built a fire, placed the grease and lye in the kettle and boiled it until it was soap, sometimes a half barrel or more and strong enough to eat the skin off your hands.

These neighbors had a huge brass kettle which they placed on the same log, filled it with cider and peeled apples from their own orchard, and made apple butter.

They dipped their sheep in the creek running thru the farm and sheared them afterward, taking the wool to the mills to be carded. They plucked their geese and made featherbeds.

I wonder if today any one is living this way and will any one go back to it, but where would we get the wood to burn to make ashes for lye?

BROKEN WATER SPOUT.

Chicago, March 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—The water spout of the house next door is broken. All winter my side entrance has been filled with ice and only by the grace of God have we escaped broken arms and legs. The walk between the houses has been a skating rink more often than not. Have we no legal remedy? H. E.

The rule is stated as follows in 67 C.J. 886: "Where an easement has not been acquired by grant or prescription, the owner of a building is required to take care of rain water falling on the roof by providing and keeping in serviceable condition gutters and spouts sufficient to carry off such precipitation as may reasonably be expected, and if by reason of his neglect water is shed from his roof onto or against the wall or building of another, he is liable for any injury caused thereby." DRAM SHOP LAW.

Chicago, March 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My wife is under medical observation and her physician has notified me that it is not advisable for her to drink alcoholic beverages. 1. A certain liquor store owner told me, when I informed him of the facts, that the problem was mine. He has been selling my wife beer, as much as a gallon a day. 2. Can he be forced to stop selling it to her? Other tavern owners have willingly cooperated with me when requested to do so. S. S.

1. Under the Illinois dram shop law, the dealer would be liable to pay damages if your wife sustained injury from purchasing liquor from him. We suggest that you notify him that you intend to act accordingly.

2. See 1. There are many cases in the current Illinois reports involving substantial damages against sellers of liquor.

Chicago, March 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. If a woman owns real property when she is single, can she retain it as her own after she marries? 2. If so, would it be legal for the property to remain in her maiden name? M. W.

1. Yes, by placing it in a trust. No, in the sense that if she leaves the title as it is her husband will acquire a dower interest.

2. Yes, but this would not prevent her husband from having a dower interest.

RIGHTS OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

opinion which seemed to criticize or exhibit in an unfavorable light, however truly, the agencies and operations of the government. The struggle between the proponents of measures to that end and those who asserted the right of free expression was continuous and unceasing.

"In 1712, in response to a message from Queen Anne, parliament imposed a tax upon all newspapers and upon advertisments. That the main purpose of these taxes was to suppress the publication of comments and criticisms objectionable to the crown does not admit of doubt. There followed more than a century of resistance to, and evasion of, the taxes and of agitation for their repeal. It was pointed out that these taxes constituted one of the factors that aroused the American colonists to protest against taxation for the purposes of the home government, and that the Revolution really began when in 1765 that government sent stamps for newspaper duties to the American colonies.

"These duties were quite commonly characterized as 'taxes on knowledge,' a phrase used for the purpose of describing the effect of the exactions, and at the same time condemning them.

"In the ultimate, an informed and enlightened public opinion was the thing at stake; for, as Erskine, in his great speech in defense of Paine, has said, 'The liberty of opinion keeps governments themselves in due subjection to their duties.'

"In 1785, only four years before congress had proposed the 1st amendment, the Massachusetts legislature, following the English example, imposed a stamp tax on all newspapers and magazines. The following year an advertisment tax was imposed. Both taxes met with such violent opposition that the former was repealed in 1786 and the latter in 1788.

"The framers of the 1st amendment were familiar with the English struggle, which then had continued for nearly 80 years and was destined to go on for another 65 years, at the end of which time it culminated in a lasting abandonment of the obnoxious taxes.

"It is equally impossible to believe that it was not intended to bring within the reach of these words such modes of restraint as were embodied in the two forms of taxation already described. Such belief must be rejected in the fact of the then well known purpose of the exactions and the general adverse sentiment of the colonies in respect of them.

"In the light of all that has now been said, it is evident that the restricted rules of the English law in respect to the freedom of the press in force when the Constitution was adopted were never accepted by the American colonists, and that by the 1st amendment it was meant to preclude the national government, and by the 14th amendment to preclude the states, from adopting any form of previous restraint upon printed publications, or their circulation, including that which had theretofore been effected by those two well known and odious methods.

"Judge Cooley has laid down the test to be applied: 'The evils to be prevented were not the censorship of the press merely, but any action of the government by means of which it might prevent such free and general discussion of public matters as seems absolutely essential to prepare the people for an intelligent exercise of their rights as citizens.'

"It is not intended by anything we have said to suggest that the owners of newspapers are immune from any of the ordinary forms of taxation for support of the government. But this is not an ordinary form of tax, but one single in kind, with a long history of hostile misuse, against the freedom of the press.

"The tax here involved is bad not because it takes money from the pockets of the appellees. . . . It is bad because, in the light of its history and of its present setting, it is seen to be a deliberate and calculated device in the guise of a tax to limit the circulation of information to which the public is entitled in virtue of the constitutional guaranties. A free press stands as one of the great interpreters between the government and the people. To allow it to be fettered is to fetter ourselves. . . ."

The rights of Americans then consist first of a guarantee against the evils cited by the Declaration of Independence:

"He has made judges dependent on his will alone for the tenure of their office, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

"He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

"He has affected to render the military independent of and superior to the civil power.

"He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution and unacknowledged by our laws, giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation.

". . . for imposing taxes on us without our consent.

"For depriving us in many cases of the benefits of trial by jury.

"For transporting us beyond seas to be tried for pretended offenses."

Second, the rights found in the Constitution:

That the house of representatives, the senate, the President, all be elective at stated intervals. That appointive officers, the judiciary, and the President may be removed by impeachment in the house and conviction by the senate.

That all legislation shall originate in congress.

That "the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety might require it."

That "no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed."

That "no title of nobility shall be granted by the United States."

That "the trial of all crimes except in cases of impeachment shall be held in the state where said crimes shall have been committed."

That "treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or on confession in open court."

That "the United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government."

That "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

* *

Third, the so-called Bill of Rights, being the first 10 amendments to the Constitution.

AMENDMENT I.

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

AMENDMENT II.

"A well regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

AMENDMENT III.

"No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house, without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war but in a manner to be prescribed by law."

AMENDMENT IV.

"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

AMENDMENT V.

"No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb, nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation."

AMENDMENT VI.

"In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

AMENDMENT VII.

"In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise reëxamined in any court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law."

AMENDMENT VIII.

AMENDMENT IX.

"The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people."

AMENDMENT X.

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

And finally the 13th amendment, section 1 of the 14th amendment, the 15th amendment, and the 19th amendment:

AMENDMENT XIII.

"Section 1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction."

AMENDMENT XIV.

"Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

AMENDMENT XV.

"Section 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color, or previous conditions of servitude."

AMENDMENT XIX.

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

The foregoing are the Rights of Americans—seven set up as grievances leading to the Declaration of Independence—17 in the body of the Constitution—31 in the Bill of Rights—and 4 adopted since the Bill of Rights—59 in all.

Most of them remain to you, but all are imperiled. Be therefore sternly on guard to save those you have and be determined to recover those that have been lost.

SPANGLER SEEKS FREEDOM—FROM CRYSTAL GAZERS

Also Urges Curb on Lame Ducks and 4th Termers.

Des Moines, Ia., March 13 [Special].—Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the Republican national committee, who arrived here today to be an "observer" at a conference of corn belt governors to be held Monday, asserted in a statement that "the nation needs more freedoms." He listed as needed freedoms the following:

"2. Freedom from lame ducks in Washington.

"3. Freedom from promotion of a fourth term on the part of Washington officials who had better spend more time on the war effort.

Hopeful Over Conference.

Spangler said the farm conference will contribute much to a solution of food and man power problems.

Twelve midwest states will be represented at the meeting, called by Gov. B. B. Hickenlooper of Iowa. Former President Herbert Hoover has been invited, and at least nine governors will attend with large delegations, it was said. They will represent Missouri, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio, South Dakota, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Iowa. Groups from Wisconsin, Kansas, and North Dakota will be without their governors.

Plans Speech to Legislature.

Hoover will speak before the Iowa legislature at 11 a. m. Monday and appear on radio broadcasts.

The conference will start at 9 a. m. Monday. Each state will be given 20 minutes to present its ideas.

A statement was released by Hickenlooper explaining that he had called the conference because of the failure of the federal government to lay down a practical farm policy.

"The national government has asked the nation to produce an increased amount of foodstuffs this year, but we are rapidly approaching the planting season and no practical or consistent program for the protection of our labor and machinery supply with which to produce these increased crops has been laid down in Washington," Hickenlooper said.

"Because the states represented in this conference are highly fertile and productive, and because the farmers of these state have practical experience and knowledge of how to produce food, I believe that many valuable ideas will be developed when the governors gather here."

FULL SCHEDULE FACES M'KIBBIN THIS WEEK IN MAYORAL CAMPAIGN

In addition to participation in several Republican ward organization meetings each night this week, George B. McKibbin, Republican nominee for mayor, has several engagements considered important to his campaign.

At 11:30 this morning he will speak in Cobb's church, 4315 Wabash avenue, and at 3:30 p. m. at a Girl Scout ceremonial at the Wabash avenue Y. M. C. A., 3763 Wabash avenue. Tomorrow noon he will meet with a group of Methodist ministers in St. James Methodist church, 4611 Ellis avenue.

Tuesday afternoon McKibbin will urge employés of the state department of finance, of which he formerly was director, to give liberally to the American Red Cross. Tuesday night he is to speak over radio station WBBM from 8:30 to 9 o'clock.

On Thursday there will be a rally and dinner in the La Salle hotel, given by the labor union group supporting McKibbin. On Friday he will be a guest of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the Palmer House. Friday night he will deliver his second radio speech of the week.

ST. LOUIS G. O. P.'S PRIMARY VOTES TOP FOES', 2 TO 1

St. Louis, Mo., March 13 [Special].—Observers said today that analysis of primary votes cast yesterday for nominees for president of the St. Louis board of aldermen indicated that the Republicans may win 11 of the 15 aldermanic seats at stake April 6 and that the Democrats may win only four.

Republicans hold 14 seats on the present board to the Democrats' 13, with one seat vacant.

In the primary Republicans polled almost twice as many votes as the Democrats. A. P. Kaufmann, unopposed for Republican nomination for board president, received 30,158 votes, compared to 16,353 for the two Democratic candidates, Joseph M. Darst, former director of public welfare, who received 13,282 votes, and Fred M. Joseph, who received 3,071. The vote was the lightest in St. Louis in 20 years.

Taking these votes as a basis, observers concluded that Republican majorities in 11 wards would indicate that those wards will elect Republican aldermen.

ROBBED BY TWO KNIFE BANDITS.

Bernard Glynn, 5545 Wentworth avenue, a salesman, told police that two Negroes armed with pocket knives held him up yesterday in front of 5963 Calumet avenue and robbed him of $37.

46 Free Dental Clinics Will Reopen in Schools

Mayor Kelly announced yesterday that the 46 dental clinics for school children, formerly operated by the board of education and financed by WPA grants, will reopen next week. The board of health will assign dentists to the clinics. More than 300,000 pupils have received free dental examinations and more than 50,000 were given complete dental treatment, he reported.

INSURANCE COLLECTOR ROBBED.

Max Waller, 4955 North Sawyer avenue, an insurance collector, told police yesterday that two Negroes held him up at 308 East 53d street and robbed him of $16 in cash and $44 in checks.

CHICAGO'S IRISH TO HEAR SPEECH BY SEN. TRUMAN

Sen. Harry S. Truman [D., Mo.] will be guest speaker Wednesday at the Irish Fellowship club's St. Patrick's day luncheon, Judge John F. O'Connell, president of the club, announced yesterday.

The club's customary formal banquet was abandoned this year because of the war, and the celebration will be confined to a luncheon and reception in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House.

The Irish Fellowship club, a nonsectarian and nonpolitical organization, was founded 42 years ago by James O'Shaughnessy, a newspaper man, and two Chicago jurists, Marcus Kavanaugh and Edward F. Dunne, later mayor of Chicago and governor of Illinois.

The club's objectives are: First, celebrate St. Patrick's day each year; second, promote the cultural aspects of Ireland's literature and music.

Chicago Pilot in Canadian Forces Wins Decoration

PRECINCT CHIEFS TO HEAR KELLY AT 4 MEETINGS

Mayor Kelly will carry his campaign to the rank and file of the Democratic organization—its 3,760 precinct captains—at four noon meetings this week. His aids* say the mayor wishes to avoid the danger of overconfidence and to insure the maximum Democratic votes as a demonstration of strength.

The meetings will be held at Hotel Morrison, starting at 12 o'clock on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Mayor Kelly will be the only speaker.

Participants in this week's Democratic radio discussion at 10:15 tomorrow night will be Kelly, Oscar G. Mayer, former president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and Benjamin Baer of Baer Brothers and Prodies, clothing dealers. The subject will be "Chicago's Fight for the Small Business Man."

FOOD RATIONED, BUT U.S. ACTS TO GIVE AWAY MORE

PTA Leaders Protest Free School Lunch Plan.

Altho food is being rationed to the public, the federal food distribution administration is making plans to extend its system of distributing food free to school lunchrooms in needy districts, it was learned yesterday.

Under the expanded program, school lunchrooms will be reimbursed with cash according to the number of meals served, and the schools will buy food from local dealers, said Thomas Popik, assistant state supervisor of the distribution division of FDA. He explained that demand for the program is growing in war plant areas where many mothers of young children are employed.

Popik estimated that 2,000 public and parochial schools with 160,000 children are now being fed in part by the free lunch program in Illinois. The cost to the government is approximately $117,000 a month, he said.

Those Who Can Must Pay.

Under the food rationing program a school lunchroom is classified as an institution, and must surrender ration coupons as any other institution serving meals. Children who can pay for the meals are expected to do so; others are served free, Popik said.

Homer B. Kinzie, Chicago area supervisor of the FDA distribution division, said the variety of foods available for free distribution to lunchrooms has been reduced greatly in recent weeks. Cereals and flour are the principal items now being given out, he said. In addition, the FDA has a subsidy arrangement with farmers and milk dealers under which milk is sold for a penny a half pint in schools.

Distribution of FDA foods is handled in Illinois thru the state public aid commission, which requires local communities to show need for the aid and to assist in setting up the lunchrooms.

PTA Presidents Protest.

In Moline, Ill., yesterday the free food plan brought protests from the presidents of two parent-teacher associations after C. R. Crakes, superintendent of schools, disclosed that 56,908 pounds of food had been distributed there between Sept. 1 and March 1. Many of the foods given out are now rationed.

During the period the Moline schools received 1,355 cans of pork and beans, 680 cans of tomatoes, 2,852 cans of grapefruit juice, and 5,908 cans of evaporated milk.

"We feel in our district that our children do not need this sort of thing," said Mrs. Ray Douglass, president of the Grant School Parent-Teacher association. "They do not get enough of any one thing to do them any real good. I think it would be better to put the foods back in wholesale houses to be sold to the public and lower the point value of rationed goods."

Sees Conflict in Policies.

"We cannot understand how one branch of the government can be donating food while rationing is being talked to us as our big part in winning the war," said Mrs. Mildred O. Allen, president of the McKinley School Parent-Teacher association.

Chicago officials of the FDA explained that some of the rationed items distributed in Moline prior to March 1 no doubt were purchased when they were abundant by the old surplus marketing administration of the department of agriculture. This has now been taken over by the FDA and the surplus food program, which employed stamps distributed to relief families as a means of moving farm surpluses, expired on March 1.

LEGION'S W-G-N EVENT TO FETE 24TH MILESTONE

Chicago posts are planning special meetings this afternoon when the 24th anniversary of the founding of the American Legion will be observed in a coast to coast broadcast over W-G-N and the Mutual network at 2:30 p. m.

Speaking on the program which is the prelude to the Legion's observance of the anniversary of the Paris caucus from March 15 to 17, 1919, when the organization was formed, will be Frank E. Samuel, national adjutant, and Mrs. Alfred J. Mathebat, national president of the Legion auxiliary.

This program also will include drama, solos, and music by the national championship American Legion glee club of Syracuse, N. Y.

Illinois department headquarters at 201 West Wacker drive will hold open house Tuesday evening and will culminate the annual membership drive ending at midnight. Department Comm. Francis E. Phelan said the Cook county membership already exceeded 40,000 and he was confident that the 45,000 of last year would be reached or exceeded when final reports are tabulated.

MILLION POSTERS TO GUIDE U. S. ON MEAT RATIONING

A million four color posters and many million consumer instruction sheets to teach housewives how to shop are being printed by government presses as part of the office of price administration's program of preparing the public for meat-butter-cheese rationing on March 29.

Probably 100,000 posters and 10 million individual point shopping guides will be distributed thru the Chicago regional office of the OPA, it was said yesterday. A similar educational campaign preceded the rationing of processed foods.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown will visit the regional OPA office here tomorrow en route from Washington to Milwaukee, Raymond S. McKeough, regional administrator, announced yesterday.

Find Still in Tavern Owner's Home

EVEN GABBY GUY CAN KEEP STILL, G-MEN DISCOVER

Among his friends and customers, Thomas Jefferson Dougherty, 53 years old, proprietor of a tavern at 1802 West 79th street, has a reputation as a gifted conversationalist.

T. J. Dougherty.

Dougherty is a sports historian. He can relate Honus Wagner's batting average in any given year, recall who pitched in the 1924 world series, and the number of earned runs chalked up against them, or tell what happened—and why—when Zev ran against Papyrus in their historic race. Dougherty loves to talk.

He Even Talks to G-Men.

Friday, two agents of the treasury department's alcohol tax unit visited Dougherty's attractive brick bungalow at 9419 Racine avenue, where he lives with his wife and five children. They had a tip that some one was operating a still in the basement there.

The agents took a look at the pretty home and decided it couldn't be true. The place was too "high class." Then they met Dougherty coming out of his garage. They told him why they were there.

"I'd like to talk to you about that, boys," responded Dougherty warmly. "Come on inside."

Inside the comfortable home, Dougherty admitted that he did have a still, but said he hadn't operated it for two years. The agents asked if they might inspect the basement—or would they have to get a search warrant? Dougherty led them downstairs.

Says Little in Court.

There the agents found one 300 gallon continuous run still; one 500 gallon re-cooker; 582 gallons of distilled whisky; 12 gallons of 188 proof alcohol; 3 gallons of raw whisky [uncolored spirits]; cases of whisky bottled; boxes of Canadian and United States strip tax stamps; an agitator for ageing whisky; a large box of charred oak chips for coloring and purifying it.

Yesterday Dougherty pleaded guilty before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker to operating an unlicensed still and possessing untaxed alcohol. He was held for federal district court under $1,000 bond.

E. C. Yellowley, district director, and Thomas Bailey, chief investigator of the alcohol tax unit, said they were checking to see if Dougherty sold his products over the bar in his tavern.

'L' TRAIN CRASH INQUIRY WILL BE MADE BY BOARD

The elevated railroad's operating board will conduct an inquiry into the collision Friday of a Lake street train and another on the Wacker drive stub in which 21 persons were injured, H. M. Lytle, vice president of the Chicago Rapid Transit company, said yesterday. Among those who will be called by the board is Stephen Odell, 65 years old, 212 North Kilbourn avenue, motorman of the Lake street train, who is said to have disregarded a warning signal, running thru an open switch. Eight of the injured, including Odell who suffered a fractured leg, remained in hospitals yesterday.

WIFE PUTS LYE IN QUARRELSOME MATE'S LIQUOR

Because her husband, William, was "so quarrelsome," Mrs. Julia Borofsky, 39 years old, 4912 South Laflin street, mother of four young children, mixed lye with his whiskey, she confessed yesterday to Francis T. McCurrie, assistant state's attorney.

Borofsky, a war plant crane operator, said he was "floored" last Monday by a draught of the whiskey which burned his mouth, throat, and stomach.

Mrs. Borofsky said she mixed a quantity of a drain pipe cleaner with the liquor, "knowing that enough of it would kill him." McCurrie ordered Mrs. Borofsky held for a lie detector test.

Martha Carr Moon Weds Dr. Omar Fareed in Nevada

The former Martha Carr Moon of Chicago and Dr. Omar Fareed, an instructor in medicine at the University of Chicago clinics, were married yesterday in Carson City, Nev., a dispatch from Reno, Nev., said. The bride was divorced Thursday in Reno from Ensign Peter G. Moon of the naval reserve. She is a daughter of George R. Carr.

BROWN CAUTIONS HOUSEWIVES ON EXCESS BUYING

Washington, D. C., March 13 [Special].—Price Administrator Prentiss Brown today appealed to housewives not to indulge in panic buying before meat and fats rationing starts March 29.

"I should like to ask the forbearance of the public in the first few weeks of rationing, while the trade is adjusting itself to new demand and supply conditions," Brown said. "I also join with Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard to urge on every member of the public the need of avoiding 'rush buying' between now and the time when rationing starts.

"No higher compliment has been paid the patriotism of America's housewives than the admirable manner in which they conducted themselves between the advance announcement of the canned goods program and the date when that program got under way.

"I am confident that the people will respond in a similar manner in the present situation. This confidence extends to the country's 600,000 storekeepers, some of whom will be experiencing rationing for the first time."

NEGLECTED FEET BLAMED LARGELY FOR ABSENTEEISM

Warnings of the dangers of tired feet as a factor in war plant absenteeism and the development of a new war malady, "lifeboat feet," were made yesterday by members of the Illinois Association of Chiropodists and Foot Specialists in their 35th annual convention in the La Salle hotel. The convention, which is being attended by approximately 400 persons, will continue thru tomorrow.

Dr. Vern S. Hall, Waukegan, estimated that 20 per cent of war industry absenteeism for ill health may be traced to neglected feet. He urged that employers institute a program of employé foot care.

Immersion of feet in cold sea water for long periods results in "lifeboat feet," with possible shooting pains, gangrene, or excessive sensitivity to weather changes, Dr. M. P. Swiech, Chicago, said. Dr. Swiech was reporting the findings of Dr. William Blackwood of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Girl Cashier's Silent Glare Causes Robber Pair to Flee

The two young robbers who attempted to hold up the Abarbanell Cleaners shop at 5832 North avenue last night gave it up as a bad job. The cashier, Miss Sena Gummels, of 4115 Crystal street, was too tough. She glared at them in defiant silence when they threatened her with a revolver and demanded to know where the money was kept. And when one of them gave her a shove, she pushed right back. Disconcerted, the robbers fled, she later told Cragin police.

Arrest Four, Disperse 40 in Gambling Raid

Four men were seized yesterday by Capt. Thomas J. Duffy and Central police in a raid on an alleged handbook and blackjack game at 324 Van Buren street. About 40 persons in the place were dispersed. Jack Pritikin, 36 years old; Albert Moll, 21; Emil Balzano, 32, and Hyman Byron, 38, were charged with gambling.

RAYON HOSIERY ORDER TERMED DAMAGING BLOW

Small Stores to Suffer, Retailers Say.

Officials of the Illinois Federation of Retail Associations said yesterday that the office of price administration "has struck its most damaging blow at the merchants of America" in a new order affecting sale and distribution of rayon hosiery which becomes effective April 15.

"The proposal divides retailing into classifications," J. T. Meek, executive secretary of the federation, said. "Each classification pays a different price to its source of supply and each must sell for a different price to the consumer."

Meek said that the OPA order puts retail stores in arbitrary classifications according to the dollar volume of hosiery business they did within a fixed period. The OPA sets the wholesale price and the retail markup for each classification and all stores within that classification must abide by the orders.

Ceiling Prices Vary.

The small store, with a small volume of hosiery business, must pay a higher wholesale price because it falls within one of the lower classifications. The small merchant, however, is allowed a higher markup and, consequently a higher ceiling price than his larger competitor.

"The owner of a very small store handling hosiery, after wading thru a complex system of marking on a controled markup basis, will find himself paying more to the wholesaler than his next door competitor if that competitor happens to be in the classification just above him," Meek elaborated. "He is then supposed to be able to sell that hosiery for more than his competitor can sell it.

Sees Ruin for Some.

"That sounds very comforting. But every one with any common sense will know that the customer will not be fooled for long. She will soon find where she can buy hosiery the cheapest, and without regard for all other factors she will be expected to go to the competitor."

Meek said that the small merchant will be forced to mark his hosiery to meet competition, will find himself paying more for his goods than his competitor, and yet getting no more for it than the competitor does.

"Such a practice means the end for most merchants and the further down the classification list—the smaller the store and its hosiery operations—the quicker will the end come," Meek said. "We cannot accept this hosiery order as such. Its injection into the scheme of things as another experiment wherein the retailer is made the guinea pig must be the shadow of other orders to come."

Cites Other "Inequalities."

Meek said that the federation has called "many other inequalities" in the hosiery order to the attention of OPA, but that the most grave situation "is the unwillingness of that office as yet to recognize the coöperation and sympathy which retailing has exhibited for sound efforts to control inflation."

"We can't take this hosiery order sitting down," Meek said. "It is more than an order. It is a decree striking at the very heart of distribution. It is markedly unfair to stores of all sizes, but the knife thrust is deepest in the heart of the average sized merchant who, after all, represents three-fourths of the numerical retail strength of the nation."

How to make a WAR GARDEN

BY BEN MARKLAND.

Snap beans, either the bush or pole type, are essential in small plots because of their tastiness, vitamin content, and adaptability for canning. They will thrive in almost any type of soil, but it is essential that the plot be well drained if the beans are to do well.

In small plots, bush beans are somewhat preferable to pole beans because they require less labor and materials, and they don't shade other low growing crops as do the pole variety. Varieties of bush beans to be planted on The Tribune farm near Wheaton are Bountiful Stringless and Giant Stringless Green Pod. Recommended varieties of pole beans are Kentucky Wonder Green Pod, Kentucky Wonder Wax, and Decatur.

When Pole Beans Are Preferable.

Pole beans are preferred to bush beans if there is a fence with a south exposure that can be utilized for stringing the plants. Otherwise it is necessary to build a tepee form of three poles.

No snap beans should be planted until all danger of killing frost is past. That is May 1 to 15 in central Illinois, May 15 to 20 in northern Illinois. Successive plantings of bush beans may be made every three weeks until July 15. If pole beans are used, one planting in mid-May and another in July should be sufficient, but the July planting probably will require watering.

Seeds of the bush beans should be planted about 1½ inches deep at 1½ to 2 inch intervals in the row. Another method of planting bush beans is in hills, of three or four seeds, at 10 inch intervals in the row. If poles are used in tepee style to support pole beans, plant two or three seeds at the base of each pole.

When to Harvest Beans.

The time of harvesting the pods is important. These should be picked just before they are fully grown, or as soon as the seeds are visible thru the pods. A good test of whether the pods are ready for harvest is to break open one of them and note the color of the seeds. The seeds should be light in color for prime picking; if they are dark, they are too old and may be tough and stringy.

Insects do not commonly attack snap beans. The only pests that may be troublesome are the bean leaf beetle and the Mexican bean beetle. Both of these may be controled by rotenone dusts and sprays.

URGE ABORTION MURDER CHARGE AGAINST MIDWIFE

A coroner's jury under Deputy Coroner George Mrazek at an inquest held yesterday in the death of Mrs. Doris Morris recommended that Mrs. Jennie Sorci, 70 years old, a midwife, be held to the grand jury on a charge of murder by abortion. Mrs. Lucy Ernst, 2577 Montrose avenue, mother of the victim, testified her daughter had gone to Mrs. Sorci's home at 4131 North St. Louis avenue, to undergo an illegal operation about a month ago after returning to her parents' home following a quarrel with her husband, Sherwin, a soldier stationed at Madison, Wis. Following the operation, Mrs. Morris became ill and was taken to Edgewater hospital, where she died Friday. Mrs. Sorci, who was arrested by the Damen avenue police, was present at the inquest but did not testify.

HINES HOME HINTS

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK BY THE 22 HINES YARDS IN CHICAGO AND SUBURBS

MANY PEOPLE WILL RAISE CHICKENS

In response to the many requests for information on chicken houses, and the wide interest in chicken raising, Hines has enlisted the aid of Mr. Raymond T. Smith of Golf, Illinois—one of the nation's most noted authorities on poultry husbandry. Mr. Smith has made poultry breeding a lifetime hobby, and has won international fame with his Superfine White Plymouth Rocks—consistent winners at leading poultry shows.

The poultry house, pictured at right, is a design endorsed and used by Mr. Smith, and it incorporates not only the results of his wide experience but also the studies of several leading agricultural authorities. It is devoid of fancy frills, and is streamlined to conserve materials and labor needed in the war effort, so that those who want to increase the nation's meat and egg supply may do so at a minimum of expense and a maximum of satisfaction.

COMES IN SECTIONS

With this house you can raise chickens with little work, and be assured of your own egg and meat supply. The house is designed so that it is easy to keep clean, and is constructed to exclude vermin. Hines Chicken Houses are completely prefabricated by experienced union craftsmen using quality materials. The sides come in one piece with doors and windows all prefitted and set in place. The floor and roof sections are prefabricated also, and it's only a matter of a few hours' work to set this house up on your property. It is so simple to put together that you can do this work, or Hines can arrange to have reliable contractors do it for you at modest cost.

Hines Chicken Houses are available in three sizes; the largest house is 14 ft. wide and 16 ft. deep and is an ideal size for both the professional and the amateur. The second size is 10 ft. wide and 16 ft. deep, and the smallest size measures 8 ft. wide and 12 feet deep. All three houses are expressly designed to insure the best results; and favorable financing is available, too, with up to three years to pay on easy monthly terms with no money down.

HINES PREFABRICATED CHICKEN HOUSE

Hines Prefabricated Poultry House is not only efficient, but it is good-looking, too, as you can see from the picture of the 14'x16' size photographed at our Glenview Yard. There are two other smaller sizes available, and all houses can be purchased on the FHA plan with no money down and as little as $5 per month.

MORGAN'S BODY BEING TAKEN TO N.Y. FOR SERVICES

Rites for Financier Will Be Held Tuesday.

Boca Grande, Fla., March 13 [Special].—The body of John Pierpont Morgan, head of the house of Morgan, was placed aboard a private railroad car today for a journey to New York, where funeral services will be held Tuesday.

A son and daughter of the international banker, who were with him when he died at 2:15 a. m. today, Chicago time, will accompany the body to New York. They are Lt. Comm. Henry Sturgis Morgan of the naval reserve and Mrs. Paul G. Pennoyer. Mr. Morgan died of a heart ailment and complications.

The funeral will be held in St. George's Episcopal church at 10 a. m. Tuesday, according to a brief announcement. It was indicated Morgan's final resting place will be beside the vault at Hartford, Conn., which contains the ashes of his wife, Jane Norton Grew Morgan. Mrs. Morgan died of sleeping sickness in 1925.

Request No Flowers.

In New York a spokesman for the family said friends and business associates would be welcome at the services but that the body would not lie in state and that no one could view it. The family has requested that there be no flowers, he said.

There was little stir or excitement today on this isolated Gulf of Mexico island as word circulated among residents that death had come to the 75 year old financier, who arrived here Feb. 25 for a fishing vacation. He took to his bed after walking two blocks from the railroad station and never was able to rise.

Announcement of the death was made by Dr. H. S. Patterson, the banker's personal physician, who flew here from New York to attend him.

One Son on Active Duty.

A younger daughter, Mrs. George Nicholas, spent several days with her father, but left three days ago when his condition took a turn for the better. His oldest son, Junius Spencer Morgan, is on active duty as a naval commander.

The financial markets took the death of the head of the country's largest banking empire in stride, a result of the careful forethought shown by Morgan in arranging for the operation of his enterprizes after his death. In 1940 the firm, which had existed as a partnership under the first John Pierpont Morgan and continued as such under the son, took out incorporation papers.

MALARIA CONTROL.

The army is seeking qualified applicants to appoint as malaria control officers in the sanitary engineering corps. Candidates who qualify will be appointed as first lieutenants or captains to serve as consultants in matters pertaining to mosquito control and general sanitation at large and small army posts or camps. There is no set minimum age but the maximum age limit is 45.

To qualify, the applicant must have had at least four years' experience in sanitary engineering, one season of which must have been in mosquito or malaria control. This experience may have been acquired, for instance, while in the employ of a city, county, or state health department; in the United States health service or other mosquito control organizations. A bachelor's degree from a four year course in civil, sanitary, or chemical engineering will qualify a candidate, but a master's degree will be accepted in lieu of one and one-half years of the experience noted above.

Among other duties, these officers will act as liaison between the post surgeon and the post engineer; supervise subordinates and assistants engaged in sanitation and mosquito control, etc. Limited service men acceptable. Apply, Chicago Officer Procurement District, Room 1100, 20 North Wacker drive, or the nearest district officer procurement office.

P. A. G. writes: "I have a man in my employ who had one kidney removed six years ago because of an accident. Can you advise me if he would be physically acceptable for service? When do I as an employer request occupational deferment for a man?"

ANSWER: The removal of one kidney [unless due to malignant disease, renal calculus, or tuberculosis] would not cause rejection if the remaining kidney is healthy. If the registrant has no other disabilities, he may be put into general service—otherwise he will be assigned to limited service. Employers wishing to obtain occupational deferment of key or skilled men should file form 42-A if the man is single, or form 42-B if married, with the registrant's local board well in advance of his possible reclassification. Failure to observe this requirement leaves the local board entirely free to reclassify and induct the registrant.

M. S. writes: "In June, 1942, I came to the United States from an internment camp in Germany as an exchange civilian prisoner of war. Before I left Germany I had to sign a declaration that I would not bear arms in this war. My local board has disregarded this obligation and classified me for service. Can they do this to me?"

ANSWER: Selective service does not need to consider the declaration you signed but they can classify and induct you the same as any registrant.

KIMBALL-HOMAN BUS LINE HOPE IS REVIVED BY TRIP

New hope for the restoration of the Kimball-Homan bus line, which was discontinued Dec. 1 by action of the office of defense transportation, has been reported by Walter H. Buescher, chairman of a delegation sponsored by Mayor Kelly, which returned yesterday from a series of conferences with Washington ODT officials.

The committee conferred Thursday and Friday with Director Guy A. Richardson and his assistant, Edward A. Roberts, taking with them petitions involving transportation difficulties of 12,000 workers from 21 west side war plants. The committee's plea stressed production decreases absenteeism, tardiness, sickness and labor turnover since the line was discontinued.

Director Richardson promised a thoro study, Buescher said. He added that Richardson's complete understanding of the case made the delegation hopeful of the reëstablishment of the line.

OWNER-JANITOR FINDS UNION ROW MAY BE COSTLY

John Naprawa, who defied Flat Janitors' union, local No. 1, by working as janitor of his own 49 flat building at 2116 North Kedzie avenue, found yesterday that his is an expensive occupation.

He was ordered by Circuit Judge Julius H. Miner to pay $580.14 to the union as fees and costs spent by the union defending itself against a picketing injunction suit started by the defiant nonunion janitor.

The injunction stopped the union pickets until the order was dissolved by the Appellate court. Under Illinois law the petitioner is assessed all costs if an injunction is dissolved. A hearing on the flat owner's motion to vacate the judgment will be held March 22.

STEPHEN BENET, POET AND FICTION WRITER, IS DEAD

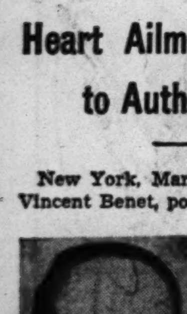
New York, March 13 (AP).—Stephen Vincent Benet, poet and novelist who used some of the fire and brimstone of his short story, "The Devil and Daniel Webster," on behalf of the war effort, died today in his Manhattan home.



Stephen V. Benet.

Benet, who was 44 years old, had been ill several days and suffered a heart attack last night.

The son of an army colonel and the grandson of a brigadier general for whom he was named, Benet was a member of a noted family which flowered into literature. Both he and his brother, William Rose Benet, had won Pulitzer prizes for their poetry. Their sister, Miss Laura Benet, also is a poet.

Graduated from Yale.

Benet was graduated from Yale university in 1919, going later to France to study at the Sorbonne. There he met the future Mrs. Benet, Rosemary Carr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Carr of Chicago. Miss Carr was on the staff of the Paris edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. They were married in 1921.

Benet's first poetry, "Five Men and Pompey," was published when he was 17. He returned to France in 1926 on a fellowship and wrote "John Brown's Body," for which he was awarded the Pulitzer prize for poetry in 1929.

In the summers he and his wife and their three children, Stephanie, Rachael, and Thomas Carr Benet, lived in Stonington, Conn

Lapboard Forms Desk.

There, in a third story room, his feet propped up on a chair, Benet wrote in long hand, on yellow copy paper, on a board held on his lap.

Interviewed at Stonington last summer, Benet said, peering thru double lensed glasses: "I shall not write a long narrative poem about this war."

Such poetry, he said, would come from men under 30.

He was working on an historical poem, "Western Star," when the war started. He abandoned printed poetry then, principally to do radio scripts for the war program.

His principal poetry included "Young Adventure," "Heavens and Earth," "Johnny Pye and the Fool-Killer," and "Nightmare at Noon." Among his prose writings were "The Beginning of Wisdom," "Spanish Bayonet," "Thirteen o'Clock," and "Zero Hour."

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Four records were broken and two were tied as the track teams of the midwest raced thru a 27 event program last night in the University of Chicago fieldhouse in the largest indoor games of this season. Notre Dame won the university section of the 15th annual Illinois Tech relays for the first time in history, and Michigan Normal took team honors in the college section for the fourth time in the last five years.

Notre Dame ran away from the field of universities, amassing 61 11-28 points. Michigan Normal, with 39 points, took its college division championship after a close fight with Miami university of Oxford, O., which finished with 32.

Illinois finished behind Notre Dame in the university standings with 37 9-14 points. Michigan, with four of its stars competing in New York, was third with 28¼ points.

Two Mile Teams Set Records.

College and university two mile relay teams raced to meet records with Miami breaking the college mark and Notre Dame's men writing a university record into the books. In addition, St. Ignatius High school bettered its own record in the half mile relay for Catholic Prep schools and Dwight Eddleman, Illinois freshman, smashed the University high jump mark.

Michigan State's sprint medley team tied the Illinois Tech record [this also was an American indoor record] and Harrison Dillard of Baldwin-Wallace tied the college 70 yard high hurdle record.

Eddleman's performance was most spectacular since it was his first varsity appearance. He reports Friday at Fort Sheridan for duty with the army. Eddleman cleared 6 feet 6¼ inches to wipe out the former record of 6 feet 4 inches held by Ed Burke of Marquette. Jerry Donovan of Drake university also bettered the former mark with a second place leap of 6 feet 4¼ inches.

Fieweger Wins Individual Honors.

Jim Fieweger of Lawrence college, however, won individual honors. Altho beaten in both the college hurdle events, in which he was defending champion, Fieweger saved second place in each, added a second in the shot put, and won the college high jump at 6 feet 2 inches. His 17 points accounted for Lawrence's fifth place in the college standings.

Fieweger's conqueror in the hurdle events, Dillard, was the only performer to gain two individual championships. High point man in the university division was Maurice Alexander of the University of Missouri. He won the 70 yard high hurdles and finished second in the race over the low hurdles.

Miami Wins College Two Mile.

The first meet record to be erased was in the college two mile relay which was held at the start of the afternoon program. The scarlet clad boys from Miami covered the eighth mile track in 8 minutes, 48 1-10 seconds, one half of a second faster than

AS CITY CHAMPIONS WERE CROWNED

Candid camera study of Kelvyn Park High school's rooting section just after Gordon Gillespie dropped in the winning score from under the basket yesterday to beat Lindblom, 28 to 26, for the City league senior basketball title in Lane Tech gym. Lindblom forced Kelvyn Park into overtime in a game that was close thruout. Gillespie scored 11 points for the Panthers. Kelvyn Park earned the right to enter the state finals in Champaign this week and will meet Kewanee in the last game of Thursday night's program. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

NEW YORK WILL SELECT GLOVES TEAM THIS WEEK

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Preparations for the Intercity Golden Gloves matches will gain impetus this week with two major developments on the schedule. New York will hold its Tournament of Champions tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday and out of these three nights of fighting will come the eastern team. Chicago's squad will reassemble on Thursday from scattered sections of Golden Gloves territory to begin training in the Illinois Athletic club. The Intercity matches between Chicago and New York will be held in the Stadium on March 31.

The New York title bouts will bring together the best fighters of the entire eastern seaboard. On the last night of their tournament—Wednesday—the show will be held in Madison Square Garden, scene of many a brilliant Golden Gloves battle in the past. In this arena New York defeated Chicago, 9 to 7, in last year's meeting.

Now It's Chicago Fans' Turn.

This year, however, it's the turn of the Chicago fans to sit in at the show. Like nearly all previous Intercity events, it's expected to be a sellout. Local boxing enthusiasts already have launched a concerted drive on the ticket counters located in The Tribune Public Service offices and the sale is reported to be moving faster than in previous years. Reserved seats are priced at $3.30, $2.20, $1.65, and $1.10.

When Chicago's fighters convene for their training sessions in the Illinois Athletic club Thursday, a hotly contested struggle for places will get under way. Only the eight champions are sure of getting fighting assign-

Morry Kaplan, Marshall forward, shoots for the basket in junior City title game with Harrison in Chicago Teachers gym. Marshall won, 47 to 34. Other players seen include: Chickie Zomlefer (No. 18) of Marshall and Bernard Chud (No. 13) and Philip Zimmerman (No. 5) of Harrison.

80TH STRAIGHT! 4TH JUNIOR TITLE FOR MARSHALL

Marshall High school's basketball team won the championship of the junior division of the Public High school league yesterday afternoon, defeating Harrison, 47 to 34, before 2,200 cheering teenage adherents in the Chicago Teachers' college gymnasium.

It was a climax to a record breaking trail for the Commandos from the West side. This was their fourth straight league title and no team had ever done that before. This was their 80th consecutive victory in four full seasons and their 22d of this campaign. Marshall is coached by Lou Weintraub.

Breaks Tie with Roosevelt.

Back in 1933, '34, and '35, Roosevelt teams had won three successive junior titles, but this coöwnership was dissolved in yesterday's game. Marshall started slowly, so slowly that the Harrison lads enjoyed a brief 5 to 2 lead. Then the Commandos rallied and moved to an 18 to 13 lead at the end of the first period.

Going into the second quarter, Harrison recovered momentarily as Augie Granzig and Phil Zimmerman sparked a drive that brought the Hornets to within one point—at 19 to 18. Then Hyman [PeeWee] Tadelman, Marshall forward, collaborated with Forward Morry Kaplan to score in consecutive tries from the court. At the half Marshall led, 28 to 19. At the end of the third period the West Siders were out in front, 36 to 26.

Kaplan Leads Scorers.

Altho Tadelman topped the scoring with 20 points on eight field goals and four free throws, it was Kaplan who won the season honors as the highest scorer on the high scoring team. Kaplan, a 5 foot 5½ inch senior, made five field goals to bring his point total to 168. Runner-up honors went to Chicky Zomlefer, who totaled 139 in the 22 games.

Marshall's final assignment of the season will be on March 27 in the city prep championship program at the Stadium when the City and Catholic league senior and junior champions will clash for the bentfit of the service men's center. Yesterday's lineup:

The City High school league crowned a new senior champion yesterday as Kelvyn Park defeated the defending champion, Lindblom, 28 to 26, in an overtime. The game, played in the new Lane Tech gymnasium, attracted a capacity crowd of 2,500. Kelvyn Park is the only undefeated senior team in the state and owns a string of 22 straight victories.

Pete Coorlas' free throw in the last ten seconds of play enabled the new champion to tie the regulation game at 25 to 25 after George Klupchak had given Lindblom a 25 to 24 lead with only 55 seconds remaining.

In the overtime, Dick Suchor was fouled by Klupchak, and made good on his attempt, only to have Klupchak match that point on Francis McGinley's fourth personal foul. With less than 40 seconds remaining to play, Gordon Gillespie took a pass from Coorlas, and hooked in the winning basket from under the board.

Gillespie, Coorlas Star.

As was expected, Gillespie and Coorlas sparked the Panthers' scoring punch. Gillespie scored 11 points and Coorlas 9. Lindblom's twin punch, George Scalamera and Charlie Molnor, accounted for 9 and 10 points, respectively.

The new champion will take part in the Illinois state high school tournament beginning Thursday in the University of Illinois George Huff gymnasium in Champaign. The Panthers also will meet the Catholic league senior champion on March 27 in the Stadium to decide the city title. Marshall, which won its fourth straight junior championship yesterday, will meet the Catholic league junior title holder on the same program.

Coorlas Scores First.

The game was nearly two minutes old before Coorlas dropped in a basket from near the foul line. Scalamera and Suchor exchanged free throws and a foul shot by Gillespie made the score: Kelvyn Park, 4; Lindblom, 1. Shortly before the first quarter ended Scalamera pushed in a shot and made the score 4 to 3.

Suchor and Molnor traded free throws and Molnor added another on a foul by Suchor which tied the score. Gillespie scored from in close and Molnor added his third free throw as the half ended, 7 to 6, in favor of the Panthers.

Gillespie and Coorlas each sank a basket before John Hriljac dribbled in close to score for Lindblom. Suchor made it 13 to 8 for Kelvyn Park on a push in. Molnor and Hriljac hit for Lindblom but Coorlas and Gillespie countered with baskets for the Panthers. Gillespie then sank two foul shots to give Kelvyn Park a 19 to 12 lead. Scalamera and Molnor closed in with baskets and Hriljac added a free throw. Molnor shot from the foul line to tie the score at 19 to 19 as the third quarter ended.

Scalamera sent Lindblom ahead with a basket to open the fourth quarter but Capt. George Leddy tied the score with a long basket. Scalamera hit on a push in and Molnor made good on a foul shot to give Lindblom a 24 to 21 advantage. Coorlas hit from about 15 feet out and Leddy tied the score at 24 to 24 on Molnor's foul. Lebanon Five Beats Wallace of Gary, 48-32

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Lebanon's Tigers, a poised group of youths led by two basketball burglars named Pete Mount and Ralph Houser, last night moved into the finals of the Indiana high school tournament, set for next Saturday in the Indianapolis Coliseum, by handing the husky Hornets of Gary Lew Wallace a 48 to 32 drubbing in the concluding contest of the northwestern Indiana semi-finals in Hammond Civic center.

For 12 minutes of the first half the game threatened to develop into one of those thrillers which are the hallmark of Hoosier basketball. Then the know how of the kids from Lebanon revealed itself and they scampered to the half time intermission with a 33 to 16 advantage.

At no time in the second half did they allow the Gary Hornets to come closer than seven points. When it was all over the capacity crowd of 5,500 had to admit the Tigers have a ball club which may well add another state championship to those the school won in 1912, 1917, and 1918. Lebanon's performance this year is the best in the 13 year coaching régime of Paul [Butch] Neuman, one time Purdue star.

Mount Proves Sly Fellow.

Of the aforesaid burglars, the more larcenous is Master Mount, a leggy towhead whose sleepy demeanor belies his slyness. Time and again he pilfered Gary passes from the Hornets' clutches. He had an able confederate in little Houser, the smallest man on the squad and the director of the Lebanon's floor play. Pete's swag for the day was a handsome 39 points, 19 of same being lifted from the night game.

Houser was restrained to seven points in the evening, but his floor management was proven at the outset of the fourth quarter when he was the head operator of a passing attack which had the Hornets gasping. Nary a Tiger shot was essayed during this exhibition.

Gary Builds Up Lead.

Lebanon took a 4 to 1 lead early over Lew Wallace on a basket and free throw by Houser and another penalty toss by Truitt. Michialik then took a hand with two successive Gary field goals, but Laflin tied it up at 5 to 5 with a Lebanon free throw. Kalember sent Lew Wallace ahead with a push shot from the penalty circle, and then he and Michalik made good on successive pairs of free throws to give the Gary kids an 11 to 6 margin at the end of the first quarter.

This lead didn't last long, once Mount and Houser began to collaborate on their ball stealing act under the baskets. First it was Houser, who took two sly passes from Mount after the latter had whisked the ball out of a Gary boy's clutches, and then Pete hit one to send the Tigers up, 13 to 12, with five minutes of the half remaining. Kukoy of Lew Wallace answered with a short try and Kalember then drove under the basket to make it 14 to 13 for Lew Wallace.

Squelch Gary Rally.

Mount then turned square and clicked on a set shot from the side. Laflin got the idea, and delivered from mid court to give Lebanon a 17 to 16 advantage. Little Helms then dashed in for two points, and Truitt scored on a sleeper play to make it 21 to 16. The gun sounded a second after Laflin, taking a Gary rebound the length of the floor, scored on a push shot for the Tigers' intermission edge of 23 to 16.

Houser and Mount took charge of matters during the third period uprising which brought Lew Wallace within seven points at 27 to 20. By the time the period was over, the Tigers had increased their seven point halftime edge to 33 to 22. Mount then touched off the last quarter with three baskets and completed the rout with thievery of passes that led to seven straight points for Forward Bob Agan.

Lebanon Whips Rochester.

In the first afternoon game Lebanon moved along the road to a fourth chance at the championship by defeating Rochester's Zebras, 49 to 34. The Tigers were in front thruout, by 10 to 6 at the quarter, 29 to 20 at the half, and by 35 to 27 after three periods.

Mount was the author of 17 points in the first half, but was withdrawn midway thru the third quarter, when he incurred his third foul, and could collect only three more points on his return. His total of 20 was matched by the eight field goals and four baskets made for Rochester by Dick

MONTREAL, Que., March 13 (AP).—The Chicago Blackhawks strengthened their hold on fourth place in the National Hockey league standings tonight as they battled to a 6 to 6 tie with the Montreal Canadiens before 12,144, the season's largest crowd here.

Two points still separate the Hawks and the fifth place Canadiens in their battle for a berth in the Stanley cup playoffs. Each has two games left on its schedule. The Hawks left immediately after tonight's game for New York where they will play the Rangers tomorrow. The Canadiens play Boston tomorrow.

Drillon Does Hat Trick.

With Gordon Drillon scoring three goals tonight the Canadiens held the lead until the third period when the Hawks took a one goal edge, only to be tied when Drillon drove home his final goal.

Joe Benoit, Toe Blake, and Elmer Lach added the other Montreal tallies with Lach's goal drawing a protest from Hawk Goalie Bert Gardiner, who claimed the puck had not gone in the cage but had struck the top of the net. However, Referee King Clancy allowed the goal.

Doug Gets No. 32.

Doug Bentley collected his 32d goal of the season and in addition to leading the league in that department took a one point margin in the scoring statistics, moving ahead of Bill Cowley of the Boston Bruins. Bob Carse also added two for Chicago with Mush March and Bill Mosienko scoring the others. Mosienko, a Hawk last year, was playing his second and last game of the season with Chicago. Canadian regulations prohibit him from crossing the border.

The Canadiens built up a 4 to 1 lead in the opening period with the Hawks coming back in the second to tie the game at 4 to 4. In the closing period the Canadiens stole ahead, 5 to 4, until the Chicagoans scored twice for a 6 to 5 lead. Then Drillon scored the final tally to renew the deadlock.

RICE LAPS FIELD IN WINNING 62D STRAIGHT RACE

New York, March 13 (AP).—Frank Dixon was crowned king of the milers for this indoor season tonight, but the gaudiest galloping of the metropolitan track windup was turned in by the monopolist of the two milers, little Greg Rice.

Apparently aiming at his own world record, the one-time Notre Dame ace lapped his entire field of seven rivals and turned in the fastest two mile trip of the year—8:52.7—to miss his target by just 1.6 seconds in the distance feature of the 24th annual Knights of Columbus meet in Madison Square Garden.

Largest Crowd of Season.

Altho Dixon's triumph in the Columbian mile in 4:09.6—a triumph that sewed up the season's honors for the New York university Negro—gave the biggest track turnout of the campaign, 15,000, a chance to howl, their roars were barely whispers by comparison with the way they let their hair down for Greg.

Rice hit the tape all by himself for his 62d straight victory. He had been presented the Bishop Donahue trophy and was on the way to the dressing room before the rest of the field straggled in, with George de George of the Army second and the IC4A champion, Glenn Masten of Colgate university third.

Gil Dodds Takes Second.

Dixon, running just off the pace set by Gil Dodds of Boston for three quarters of a mile, turned loose his kick in the last two spins around. Dodds was second, four yards behind.

The Casey 600 was a slow one, with Bob Ufer of Michigan making every pole a winning one and coming home by five yards in 1:11.4. The Wolverine whizz-bang came back later in the proceedings to anchor the Michigan two mile relay team to a 7:48.8 victory over Fordham.

NEWS FROM FISH AND GAME FRONT STIRS INTEREST

Outdoorsmen are finding March anything but dull as far as interest in fishing and hunting are concerned. Altho it still is too early for much fishing in the north central states, the news from the various fish and game fronts is so exciting that the boys have no time to relax. Hardly a day goes by that some surprising development affecting the outdoors doesn't make interesting reading.

Among the recent items which have the outdoorsmen wondering what's going to happen next are these: Iowa starts a pheasant hunting season tomorrow in the north central part of the state only. [Who would ever think that the month of March would bring a pheasant hunting season?]

Limit of Five Birds a Day.

This season will continue thru March 22. The limit is five birds per day of which two may be hens. The possession limit is 10. Any one who has a 1942 Iowa license can use it during this special March season which has been opened up solely to reduce the ringneck population. The farmers say that they are worried about the future of their corn crops because of possible depredations by pheasants, so hunters are asked to bang away with their shotguns and cut down the ringneck population. A non-resident of Iowa will have to pay $15 for a license to hunt out there between March 15 and 22.

From the national wildlife federation's meeting in the west comes word that limited supplies of ammunition probably will be available later this year. Louis W. Lipscomb of the public protection branch, government division, war production board, spoke at the meeting and predicted that in about three months a limited supply of 30-30, 30-06, and .22 rifle ammunition undoubtedly would be put on sale and also 12 and 16 gauge shotgun shells.

Pike Fishing Opens April 15.

First pike fishing of the season in Wisconsin starting April 15 in the Wolf river and adjacent waters is another "future" that appeals to outdoor fans. This is a special season only for the Wolf river drainage. A nonresident of Wisconsin needs a $3 license to go after wall-eyes up there. Two towns which get a big play from the pike fishermen are Weyauwega and Fremont where a little later the white bass fishermen congregate.

Will the annual smelt run this April be cut down because of baffling mass deaths that are taking smelt in large quantities? This is a puzzler which has many fishermen talking about the future of the April smelt run. Lake Charlevoix, Mich., reports that large quantites of smelt have died recently and already similar losses are affecting the haul in Green Bay waters. The cause of the deaths is not definitely known and the probable effect of the mortality on the spring spawning runs is not yet predictable.

One of the most important meetings for outdoorsmen that will be held this month is the annual convention of the Izaak Walton League of America. The "Ikes" are going to confer in Chicago, March 25, 26 and 27. At the same time, the Outdoor Writers Association of America will hold its annual meeting.

Racine Five Wins Crown in Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., March 13 [Special].—Racine Washington Park High school won the Wisconsin basketball championship here tonight by defeating Shawano, 40 to 23.

In the lead all the way except for the first two minutes, Park was not to be denied in annexing its first state title. Park dashed out in front, 6 to 4, but the score was tied at the end of the first quarter, 10-all. The new champs blanked Shawano in the second period as steady scoring gave them a 20 to 10 lead at half time. This margin jumped to 30 to 15 as the third period ended.

Bob Orwig with 12 points, Bruce Larson with 11, and Art Johnson with 10, paced the champs while Mel Peterson's 8 markers were high for Shawano.

Hurley won consolation honors by beating Reedsburg, 34 to 21. The Northerners stopped the losers with four points in the second half after trailing, 17 to 15, at the end of two quarters. Tom Dick paced the winners with 13 points.

Elgin, Big Eight champion, advanced to the state basketball finals last night by defeating Oak Park, 39 to 35, in the final of the Elgin sectional tournament.

The host team, which will meet Rockford West in the opening game of the finals Thursday morning in Champaign, held a 21 to 15 margin at half time, but the lead changed hands six times before Elgin was able to gain its 18th victory of the year. Three Oak Park and two Elgin players were disqualified on four fouls.

After a conventional first half Oak Park broke loose at the opening of the third quarter and counted four baskets, three by Dick Walker, to go ahead, 23 to 21. Then the teams started see-sawing until the final two minutes of play when Sammy Sauceda put the winners in front, 37 to 35. A pair of free throws ended the scoring. Lineup:

DYKES TREADS ON NEW CAMP STAGE WITHOUT PROPS

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

It isn't the kind of weather the White Sox may encounter later in the month at their French Lick, Ind., spring training camp that's worrying us. They'll get along one way or the other and probably be none the worse for the war time wear and tear. But we are concerned about what is going to happen to Manager James Dykes. The fellow will have to think up an entirely new act for himself and that's going to be tough, what with no California props to which he has become accustomed.

Papa Dykes, who was given that name by Zeke Bonura, will not have, so far as can be determined now, his spring time rocking chair. What with gasoline as it is, he probably won't have a car in which to roll from his hotel to within a few feet of the chair, if the chair was there. What's he going to do about that rubbing table on which he always loved to stretch? What, you can even ask, is he going to do about a ball team? The poor guy sure has his troubles.

On the Dykes Plan.

Dykes, if you haven't heard it before, always conducted his Pasadena training camps strictly on the Dykes plan. Everything was run leisurely. The boys worked, at least hard enough to satisfy the coaches who were on guard while Dykes was having one of his daily rest periods either in the rocker in the clubhouse gallery or on the rubbing board. Of course, he'd saunter out occasionally for a peek at what was going on and not infrequently would wind up in a wisecracking match with any spectator bold enough to invite his barbs.

At French Lick it is going to be different. There's that mile out and back between the hotel and the park, located in West Baden, and Dykes never did care about roller skates. There's no chair at the park and no place to spot one. Neither is there shelter, unless a shack is built there, for a rubbing table.

He's Resourceful.

Of course, even with all his California props missing, the manager, being a resourceful man, may be able to work himself out of his impending dilemma. Once he sees what's left of the squad he had a year ago in Pasadena, he might find it so easy to conjure up many new worries that he'll not miss his favorite habits of other springs. Then, too, he might, after seeing what material survives, crawl on the rubbing table, wherever it is, and never get up.

SCHLITZ TAKE 48 PIN LEAD IN BOWLING MEET

BY C. H. BEUKEMA.

The Schlitz Beers of Chicago, who have been trying out there on the Bowling Lanes ever since last September, finally clicked last night. It was in the Victory tournament being held this week-end in the Auditorium theater to raise funds to maintain the service men's free bowling center.

All the Schlitz did was knock down 3,046 pins in three games, in league bowling just a pretty good night's work, but it put them in front of the other 47 teams entered in the event; in fact 48 pins ahead of the next team in line, the Silver Seal Sodas of St. Louis.

The Schlitz five, defending champion of the Classic circuit, and in the current standings 10th in the 10-team league, opened with an ordinary 945 game. Next they came up with 1,033, then they finished with 1,068. A 630 series by their captain and anchor, Paul Krumske, and 629s by Ad Plunge and Jack Scott did most of the job.

Bobmeyer Rolls 701 Series.

The Silver Seals shot steady pins to go into the runnerup spot with 2,998—all, that is, except their anchor, George Bobmeyer. Bobmeyer opened with an impressive 240, proved that it wasn't any mistake by hitting 255 in the second game, then coasted home with 206 for a 701 series, individual high of the day. His three lines didn't show either an error or a split. He had help from Chris Sottrel, leadoff, who contributed 615.

The Monarch Beers of Chicago, like the Schlitz, did a remarkable job of finding the alleys after an ordinary start, finishing with 2,982. They opened with 900, then improved a mite by doing 1,033, and finally hit the tournament's high game, 1,079. Harry Ledene Jr., led the parade with 188, 248, 255, for 691, second high of the day.

Leaders Closely Bunched.

Only 10 pins separated the cluster of teams starting with the Monarchs and ending with the Chicago Budweisers, who had 2,972. Ace Woodworking of Philadelphia came up with 2,981; then came Deluxe Die, Detroit, 2,976; Heil Products, Milwaukee, 2,975; Chene Trombley, Detroit, 2,974; Hermann Undertakers, St. Louis, 2,973, and the Budweisers.

The end of last night's shooting found the Stroh Bohemians of Detroit, match game champions, tied for 10th place—which is last place in the prize list—with Western Tap Room of Peoria. The Strohs, who dropped the Chicago Budweisers by 461 pins when the Chicagoans attempted to lift their title the last two week-ends, finished just 22 pins back of the Buds, with 2,950. Most of the Strohs' power was furnished by Freddie Wolf, who found alleys 5 and 6 so much to his liking he took them a 278 game, high of the tournament.

Tourney Ends Tonight.

Of course that score between the Budweisers and Strohs, and the other 46 teams in the tournament isn't settled. Yesterday each bowled three games across six alleys. Today each bowls three more games across the other six of the center's 12 lanes. And at the finish tonight the team that has knocked down the largest total of pins will receive a check for $2,000. The second high will receive $1,000 and the next eight will be paid amounts scaling down to $100.

CAPE GIRARDEAU TAKES TITLE IN N. I. C. A. TOURNEY

Kansas City, Mo., March 13 (AP).—Jack Behrens' one handed shot gave Cape Girardeau Teachers a 34 to 32 victory over Maryville [Mo.] Teachers tonight in the final game of the National Intercollegiate Basketball tournament.

There were only seconds remaining when Behrens swished the ball thru the net for the points that brought the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic association title holders the championship. Cape Girardeau was ahead, 15 to 13, at the half.

North Texas State took third place by beating Murray [Ky.] State, 59 to 55, in the consolation game.

SPOTTING THE PINS

ANDY VARIPAPA, conductor of The Tribune's bowling school the last two seasons, has just concluded a 56 day run in Detroit tenpin centers—plus a week of appearances in the city's largest night clubs ending last night. During his school in Detroit under sponsorship of the Detroit News, he averaged slightly more than 209 in 365 games in 39 houses. He bowled an 807 series, one of 761, another of 755, and three of 728. His best game was 289.

Andy Varipapa.

Leo Faetz saw the Golden Gloves finals last week, but by being in the Stadium missed seeing his team, Jerry's Dine and Dance five, set down front running Scotty's Round Table in a Faetz & Son Major league match. . . . Goransons pulled into a second place tie, a game off the pace in the Greater Chicago Traveling league, by taking a full set from the leading Avondale recreations. A two game defeat suffered by Edelweiss, erstwhile runner-up, also helped the Goransons. . . . The Glenview naval air station team, anchored by Joe Detloff, is to meet the Playdium five at Playdium in a benefit match starting at 8:15 tonight. Glenview has won 9 of its last 10 matches and has rolled the highest total reported to the American Bowling congress by any service team this season, 2,888. A collection is to be taken at the match for the athletic fund at Glenview.

Those Hostlers Keep Right on Hustling.

Allstrand's Hostlers kept right on marching toward the top of the "400" league by winning two more—making it 12 of the last 15—while the first place Purchasers were dropping a pair to the Hoppers. Purchasers' margin is just two games now, with seven weeks to go. . . . Art J. Williams Jewelers hold a comfortable margin at the head of the Gold Coast Major, with two of their shooters, Lucky Ploch and George Calder, among the first four individuals. Les Kilbourne sets the solo pace with a 201 average. . . . The Gills are conceded to be just about "in" as champions of the Windy City Major, what with their average up to 1,025, highest in the 39 year history of the circuit. But there's still a battle for individual honors as Joe Sinke is averaging 210, Bill Hargadon and Jack Russell, 209; Ad Carlson, 208, and Buf Wright, 206. Tomorrow's schedule:

Budweiser vs Soper Bros.; Furmans vs. Gills; Cascade vs. Somuels; Be-Vac vs. Nonebetters; Kralovecs vs. Richmans; Vogels vs. Ace Fasteners; O'Keefes vs. Mineralites; Tomans vs. Meister.

The Red Cross is to be made the beneficiary of the second annual exhibition match in which the Old Dutch Cleanser team of Lake Forest is to appear. The match is scheduled Sunday evening, March 28, starting at 8:30 in the Lake Forest Bowling lanes, with Bob O'Farrell's Grand Bowl team as opponents for the Old Dutch five. . . . Medinah Country club's Tuesday league Divots captured the recent Chicago district country club title. Today the Medinah bowlers will battle it out among themselves at Gateway, with teams made up of the five high men in each of the club's three leagues putting on a special match. . . . The Longmores and Barretts each have won 43 games and lost 32 in the Tribune Nitehawk league and the circuit has just two more weeks to go.

Johnny Comes Marching Home—with $200.

Hyde Park's fourth annual sweep produced $200 for 20 year old Johnny McGrew of Roseland. Johnny shot 925 for four games in a field in which big names were numerous. . . . Louis Melinds won the roll-off of an 841 tie game with Rostenkowskis, but they didn't lead much beyond the pay-off frame of the deciding game, finishing with 732 to the Rostenkowskis' 918. It happened in the Stack and Ryan Commercial, where, also, the Athletic Shoe five not only won the roll-off of a 766 game from Art's Koffee Kup, but likewise took the other two games. . . . Fritzi Scheffs and Mee & Ramme did the high scoring in the Samuelson Major, the Scheffs shooting 3,079 with a 1,035 game to win two. The losers rolled 2,939. Wednesday's schedule:

CHICAGO GIRLS AND MUNDELEIN SPLIT FOUR GAMES

Girls' basketball teams from the University of Chicago and Mundelein college broke even in a four game round robin tournament in Ida Noyes clubhouse on the Midway yesterday afternoon, the Maroon B team beating Mundelein's A team, 7 to 6, and Mundelein's B's, 10 to 9, while Mundelein's A team defeated Chicago's A's, 16 to 8, and their B team beat Chicago's A's, 15 to 10.

Dorothy Neybert, forward on Mundelein's A team, won scoring honors with eight points in the first game and six in the second, in which her three baskets were the team's only scores. In the B team battle, Chicago won by virtue of a single free throw by Pat McKnight.

Chicago's A team hung on until the half in the game with Mundelein's B's, but Mundelein, led by Katy Cunningham, built a 9 to 8 half time lead with a 15 to 10 victory.

In Chicago B team's victory over the Mundelein A team neither scored in the second and third quarters and three times the game was stopped because of players' injuries. Louise Harvey's free throw in the final period won for the Maroons.

IRISH CAPTURE TEAM CROWN IN TECH RELAYS

Michigan Normal Wins in College Division.

Miami's record set the pattern for the relays in which 421 athletes from 36 colleges and universities were entered. Virgil Alston, Miami's great middle distance runner, led off and opened up a lead which his mates maintained thruout. Matt Donahue, Bill Evans, and Bob Blayney then carried the baton, respectively, for Miami. Blayney finished 30 yards in front of the Michigan Normal anchor runner.

The race was run in two sections, Western Michigan won the second race in 8:15.6, with Loyola university of Chicago, a close second. The disparity between the times for the races was so great, however, that Western Michigan received fifth place in the adjusted results and Loyola was unplaced.

Notre Dame's two mile relay team whipped the Illini for the second meet record. The Irish took the lead on the first leg, which was run by Frank Confroti, and never relinquished it. Subsequent Notre Dame runners, in the order of their half mile legs, were Frank Martin, Ollie Hunter, and Don Currie. Notre Dame's time was 7:46.7, displacing the 1940 record by Marquette of 7:52.4.

Currie Wins by Two Yards.

Currie started the anchor half mile with a 10 yard advantage over Bill Beile, Illinois freshman. Beile pulled up on the fourth lap and on the back stretch was even with Currie, but dropped back for the last turn. Currie then went on thru the stretch to win by two yards.

[illegible]'s time for the 70 yard high hurdles in which he tied the record, was 8 and 8/10 seconds. He had also tied the record in the afternoon trials. Alexander's time in the University high hurdles was 8 and 7/10 seconds.

Michigan State's sprint medley team tied its own meet record of 3:31.6 for the quarter mile, two 220 yard dashes, and an anchor half mile.

Alston, altho tired from his efforts in the record-breaking college two mile relay, had no difficulty winning the college mile championship. He stayed behind his most feared rival, Dave Clutterham of Cornell college, winner of the 1942 race, and sprinted on the last lap to win by five yards. Alston's time was 4:25.3.

Hunter Has Mile to Himself.

Hunter had the University mile to himself. He went to the front of the field of 14 at the half mile and steadily increased his advantage, defeating Bill Scott of Michigan State, the Central Collegiate champion, by 30 yards.

Jim Delaney of Notre Dame, Central Collegiate shot put champion, whipped Lou Saban of Indiana for the Illinois Tech title by one-half inch. Delaney put the 16 pound ball 50 feet, 6 inches. The Irish also took fourth and fifth places.

Missourians Run One-Two.

Missouri, the Big Six team champion, took first and second in the university 70 yard sprint. Joe Shy was victor over his team mate, Owen Joggoist, by less than a stride.

John Towle of Wisconsin was fourth and Hugh Davis of Michigan State finished fifth in the sprint. Shy's winning time was 7 and 3-10 seconds, identical with the winning time of Bill Cook of Wilson Junior college in the college division. Each mark was one-fifth of a second off the Illinois Tech relays record.

Wonch Wins Pole Vault.

Billy Moore, Drake university freshman, second in the National A. A. U. meet, failed in the university pole vault and could do no better than a second place tie with Herb Matter of Illinois and Jack Wiethoff of Notre Dame. These men cleared 13 feet. Ted Wonch of Michigan State was the winner at 13 feet, 6 inches.

Nazis Arrest 3 Ruuds for Daring to Ski

LONDON, March 13 (AP).—Four noted Norwegian athletes, including the three Ruud brothers known both in Europe and America for their skiing performances, have been placed in a concentration camp for participation in an unsanctioned sports event, the Norwegian telegraph agency reported today.

Birger Ruud.

Birger, Sigmund and Asbjorn Ruud and Johan Haanes, the foremost Norwegian tennis player, were among a group of 25 athletes rounded up by the Gestapo.

They Ignore Gestapo.

German occupation authorities forbade the annual ski jumping tournament, one of Norway's big sports events, but the contestants assembled secretly at a secluded spot in the mountains and finished their competition.

Birger Ruud won the Olympic ski jumping championship in both 1932 and 1936 and in the latter year also finished fourth in the combined downhill-slalom racing.

Brother Wins, Too.

In 1938 he and brother Sigmund went to the United States for a series of spectacular performances in ski jumping events from coast to coast. Birger broke numerous records with leaps of 181, 192, 194 and 216 feet. In several of the events Sigmund came in second.

[Birger won the Norge Ski Club of Chicago meet at Cary, Ill., on Jan. 16, 1938 with a leap of 181 feet.]

Meanwhile in the same year, 1938, the third brother, Asbjorn, won the world ski jumping championship at Lahti, near Helsingfors, Finland.

MICHIGAN GETS GOVERNMENT O.K. AS TRAINING SITE

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—The University of Michigan today was added to the list of educational institutions approved for possible use by the army and navy for war training programs. The war man power commission said the university had been designated for training in naval architecture.

At the same time the commission said that hereafter facilities on any single campus for a single type of training would be designed for one of the services only. For this reason, all advanced engineering facilities at Yale university were assigned to the navy department, and all advanced engineering facilities at Pennsylvania State college were assigned to the war department.

Placement on the list of approved schools does not necessarily mean the army or navy will use the college, but it does certify that a school is eligible to enter negotiations with the services for use of the school's facilities.

The Western conference revealed yesterday that contributions totaling $443,277.66 were made—in one form or another—to the United States government by the nine schools playing football last fall.

Maj. John L. Griffith, Big Ten athletic commissioner, reported $257,156.08 of this was paid the government in tax admissions to college games, $145,613.68 to the army and navy authorities as their share of the 50-50 split of receipts from games between college and service elevens, and $40,507.90 contributed by conference teams to army and navy relief funds.

Major Griffith also said five of the member schools appropriated from gridiron earnings $93,525 to defray expenses of hardening courses conducted for pre-inductees.

Purdue Still Leads in Big 10 All-Time Play

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Altho the University of Illinois finished the Western conference basketball season undefeated and its team has been acclaimed as the greatest in the modern era of sport, its record was not sufficient to disturb the all-time conference standings. Purdue continues to lead all teams in games won and lost and Chicago, which has not won a conference game since 1940, remains in ninth place ahead of the University of Iowa.

Purdue took the conference all-time leadership away from Wisconsin in 1938 by winning 10 of its 12 games for the championship. The Badgers had been on top since 1914 when the unbeaten Wisconsin quintet took the title and ousted Chicago from the leadership. The Maroons had displaced Minnesota in 1908. The Gophers now are in sixth place in the all-time standings while Wisconsin continues in second place behind the Boilermakers.

Indiana Improves.

Indiana, which continues in fifth place with a 1943 record of 11 victories and two defeats, didn't begin showing strength in the conference until the round robin schedule of 1924 and the Hoosiers have made their best drive toward the top since Coach Branch McCracken took over in 1938. Since then Indiana has jumped two notches in the standings.

Chicago dropped from eighth to ninth place in 1942, but retained this position this year by nine percentage points over Iowa. The Hawkeyes won three games and lost nine in the season just finished.

The all-time conference basketball standings follow:

Purdue	277	166	.648
Wisconsin	274	176	.609
Illinois	263	185	.589
Michigan	161	147	.523
Indiana	202	206	.492
Minnesota	218	235	.481
Ohio State	159	197	.447
Northwestern	170	236	.419
Chicago	185	279	.399
Iowa	146	228	.390

Illinois in Spotlight.

Much has been written of the records broken by the Illini. They won a second undisputed championship this season and became the first squad to achieve this mark since Wisconsin was undefeated in 1913 and 1914. The Badgers shared the 1912 title. Illinois also was the first team to win the conference championship with a perfect record since Purdue turned the trick in 1930.

The Boilermakers broke even in their season. To finish with six victories and six defeats they had to lick Indiana in the final game of the campaign. This loss would have knocked the Hoosiers out of the title race even if they had not been beaten previously by Wisconsin.

Lambert finished his 26th year at Purdue this season. After 1917 he missed a season because of the war and then returned in 1919 and has coached Purdue basketball teams continuously. Purdue has won 212 conference games and lost only 91 under Coach Lambert. Without exception Lambert teams hold the edge on all conference rivals from a slim 21 to 18 lead over Illinois to a robust 29 to 7 margin over Northwestern. Purdue did not play Illinois this season under the rearranged schedule that cut transportation by nearly 50 per cent.

Lambert's Big Ten Record.

	Won.	Lost.
Northwestern	29	7
Chicago	27	6
Michigan	20	8
Indiana	28	11
Wisconsin	21	9
Ohio State	26	11
Minnesota	20	9
Iowa	20	12
Illinois	24	18

Among the Purdue stars chosen on national quintets who have helped build up this quarter of a century supremacy are Don White, guard, 1921; Ray Miller, guard, 1922; George Spradling, forward, 1926; Charles Murphy, center, 1928-'29-'30; John Wooden, guard, 1930-'31-'32; Emmett Lowery, guard, 1934; Robert Kessler, forward, 1936; Jewell Young, forward, 1937-'38, and Fred Beretta, guard, 1940.

WAR DOGS' ARMY TRAINERS HAVE TO GO TO CLASS, TOO

Obedience Course Spares Needless Handling.

[This is the second of a series of stories dealing with the training of dogs for war.]

BY BOB BECKER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Fort Robinson, Neb., March 12.—Before an enlisted man stationed here to learn how to train and handle sentry and guard dogs goes into a class to work with a dog, the civilian trainers give him many sessions of dummy practice in obedience work.

Dummy practice, designed to teach a soldier in a hurry and spare the dog much unnecessary handling, is a complete course in how simple obedience commands are given and taught to animals. No dogs are used in this course. The enlisted man learns how to use his hands to put the dog in a sitting position, how to handle the leash in teaching the dog to heel, and other commands. After the men have had preliminary training of this type, learned about kennel maintenance, and proper feeding of dogs, attended lectures on the health and care of dogs, they are ready to start training.

Altho a few of the enlisted men are assigned six dogs for training, the majority have four. Each man works his dogs twice each day. During the first few days the dogs are taught only to heel and sit. The automatic "sit" command is taught by applying pressure to the dog's rear quarters with the left hand when coming to a halt, at the same time giving the vocal "sit" command in a brisk manner. The dog soon learns that he is expected to sit instantly at his master's left side when he stops.

After the fifth or sixth day of training the average dog learns both the "sit" and "heel" commands. [If a dog is slow and behind the class he's demoted to another group.] When the canine recruit has mastered the two basic commands he learns the more intricate "down" command which puts a dog in a prone position. Eventually the animal goes down on a hand signal. He also is taught the command "stay," which means he can't move from his position until recalled by his master with the command "come."

These are the basic commands which the guard and sentry dogs must learn.

Classes Continue All Day.

The classes which are conducted by civilian trainers to teach these basic commands to the dogs and school the enlisted men in handling their dogs start early in the morning and continue all day. One of the first classes that we watched out here was in charge of Civilian Trainer Oscar Franzen of Highland Park, Ill. He had a unit of 12 soldiers and 12 dogs. Two of the dogs were Dobermanns, the rest collies and German shepherds. Because the weather was pretty snappy this class was being held in a big building constructed especially for indoor classes.

The men walked with their dogs at heel. Without warning they got the command to about face and walk the other way, always keeping their dogs at heel. Sometimes they trotted with their dogs. Sometimes they walked Then the "down" command would be given and every soldier immediately repeated the command to his dog. As soon as this group of dogs had been given a thoro rehearsal, the soldiers were sent for another group of dogs and the same routine repeated.

Collie Is Star Pupil.

During a lull in the routine when the men were not occupied with the training program, Franzen called our attention to a crossbred collie which was obeying all commands smartly. Franzen lifted the head of the dog to show us a big scar on its neck. It was one of the dogs which had been shipped to camp with a tumorous growth which had to be removed by surgery. The dog recuperated quickly from the operation, and had regained its strength and weight and was one of the star pupils of the class.

SPRING DRILLS OPEN TOMORROW FOR TEN TEAMS

New York, March 13 (AP).—Spring training for 10 of the 16 major league baseball clubs will start Monday with the glamor and gloss of other years missing. Lineups of every club have been riddled by calls to military service and to essential war work leaving the managers with innumerable problems to be solved before the national and American league schedules open generally April 21. The teams getting under way Monday and their training sites are:

Weather May Be Problem.

Other clubs will start in this order: March 18, Chicago White Sox at French Lick, Ind., and Pittsburgh Pirates at Muncie, Ind.; March 20, Philadelphia Athletics [batterymen only] at Wilmington, Del.; March 21, Chicago Cubs at French Lick, Ind.; March 22, Boston Braves at Wallingford, Conn., and Boston Red Sox at Medford, Mass.

The clubs face the prospect of curtailed workouts because of the weather in the area north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers to which the major leagues have limited themselves.

Some of the practice will be done indoors. Several of the diamonds are makeshift affairs laid out on golf courses or vacant fields. Some of the hotels are overgrown boarding houses. At some of the sites the athletes will have to walk a mile or more to practice. The contrast with the easy days in Florida and southern California is evident.

Strong Clubs Hard Hit.

The world champion St. Louis Cardinals have to fill vacancies left by Pitcher Johnny Beazley, their world series star, and by Outfielders Enos [Country] Slaughter and Terry Moore. The New York Yankees, American league pennant winners, must replace Outfielders Joe DiMaggio and Tom Henrich, Infielders Buddy Hassett, Red Rolfe, and Phil Rizzuto, and Pitcher Red Ruffing. The Boston Red Sox must look to the future without Outfielders Ted Williams, Dom DiMaggio and Lou Finney, and Infielder Johnny Pesky.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, for instance, have seen Outfielder Pete Reiser and Infielder Peewee Reese enter the army and are not certain whether Outfielder Dixie Walker, a recreation director for a war plant, will play. Third Baseman Arky Vaughan and First Baseman Dolph Camilli have been detained in California and will report at the Bear Mountain, N. Y., camp early next month.

Riverland, in Form, Wins at Fair Grounds

New Orleans, La., March 13 (AP).—Riverland, the big black gelding which conquered both Alsab and Whirlaway last fall in less than a week, returned to top form here today with a victory over four of the best thorobreds at the Fair Grounds in a mile and a sixteenth $5,000 handicap.

Valdina Orphan from Emerson Woodward's string was second, and C. S. Howard's Mioland finished third followed by Marriage and Mioland's stable mate, Porter's Cap.

Disallow Foul Claim.

The 5 year old Riverland, owned by the Louisiana Farms, gained a good position on the backstretch and moved to second place as they rounded the last turn, a head behind Valdina Orphan.

Coming down the straightaway, Riverland bumped the leader, but apparently impeded himself as much as Valdina Orphan. He caught Valdina Orphan and stayed to win by a head, but the crowd of 7,000 booed when the foul claim was disallowed.

Riverland Pays $5.80.

Porter's Cap set the early pace and Valdina Orphan went to the top at the three-quarters and might have won but for the two pound weight advantage he gave Riverland.

Coward and Dupuy's Marriage, which beat the same horses two weeks ago in the $25,000 New Orleans handicap, never entered contention. Rounders was a late scratch.

Saratoga Race Meet Shifted to New York

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., March 13 (AP).—America's oldest thorobred racetrack became a war casualty today, its August meeting shifted to metropolitan New York.

To conserve automobile tires and gasoline, the month long meeting scheduled for the 80 year old Saratoga plant—famous for the Hopeful and Travers stakes, among others—will be held at Aqueduct or Belmont.

The decision was announced today by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey after a study of the New York racing situation prompted by National Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers' request "to prevent the opening of all suburban tracks until the end of the war or until the tire problem is solved." Officials of the state's five tracks and the state racing commission approved.

Accept Close Philosophically.

Residents of this northern New York town whose incomes depended largely on accelerated trade during the meeting accepted the closing philosophically—"our first interest is the return of our boys from the front."

But two officials, while approving the shutdown as a war measure, protested what they termed discrimination.

"I understand attendance at Empire requires a trip over subways, buses, and other common carriers whereas Saratoga provides living accommodations within a short walking distance of the track," Mayor Addison Mallory commented. "A good many persons live here the entire month."

Closed Only Twice Before.

W. Rowland Carr, president of the chamber of commerce, said: "We must take the closing as a war time casualty, but we still believe racing should be possible at Saratoga if tracks can operate in the metropolitan area."

Saratoga, long a gathering place of society and famed as a health resort, has been closed only twice before—in 1911 and 1912 because of a state anti-gambling law.

Last year, 243,390 persons attended the meet here. The mutuel betting handle was $12,247,256. The greater attendance potential in the metropolitan district should increase the state's racing income, which last year totaled approximately $10,000,000, turf followers believe. The state receives 6 per cent of all money wagered.

Racing officials also decided to close parking lots at Belmont, Aqueduct, Jamaica, and Empire, all reachable by subway or train.

MAJORS PLACE QUICK O. K. ON RECLAIMED BALL

Sphere Will Conform to 1939 Standards.

Representatives of both major leagues, meeting in Commissioner K. M. Landis' office yesterday, made short work of approving an official baseball for 1943. The new ball, which will be produced by the Reach company for the American league and Spalding for the National, will have a core of reclaimed cork surrounded by reclaimed rubber. This, in turn is coated with balata; then come the usual yarn and horsehide cover.

In ordering the ball, the two leagues specified it must conform to the standards of 1939. This clause was inserted because of reports the one in use the last three years was some 5 per cent less resilient than its predecessor.

The manufacturers assured league representatives ample supplies will be available for at least the next two seasons because the reclaimed cork and rubber, as well as the balata, a resilient substance resembling rubber, are noncritical materials.

Both Reach and Spalding officials said they would start producing the new balls at once and that within two weeks they would be available for use in spring training. All clubs, in the meantime, will have enough left over from last year's purchases.

Joliet Juniors Seek Share in Catholic Title

Catholic High of Joliet can clinch at least a tie for the Catholic league south section junior title by defeating St. Ignatius this afternoon on the latter's floor. Joliet Catholic is tied with Mount Carmel for first place with nine victories and two defeats and closes its sectional race today. Mount Carmel will complete its season at home Tuesday against De La Salle.

The Leo Lions also are contenders for the south section junior championship and by winning this afternoon from De La Salle and again on Tuesday from St. Rita could also tie for the title. The Lions have won eight and lost two, one each to Joliet Catholic and Mount Carmel. The Lions have defeated the leaders once each.

St. George Plays Loyola.

St. George, tied with St. Philip for the north section senior lead, will try to clinch at least a share of the title today when it opposes Loyola on the St. George court in Evanston. St. George closes its sectional schedule today while St. Philip will play Loyola Tuesday. Each has won nine and lost two.

Mount Carmel clinched the south section senior championship Friday night by defeating St. Rita 53 to 31, for its 10th triumph in 11 games. The Carmelites' only defeat was by Leo, the 1942 champion.

Playoffs May Be Necessary.

The Catholic league sectional races close Tuesday night and if two teams are tied for first place in either class a playoff will be necessary to determine the section's representative in the league's championship games. The playoffs probably will be scheduled for Thursday with the championship games on Sunday.

PHILS ASK LANDIS TO REVIEW ETTEN DEAL WITH YANKS

Philadelphia, Pa., March 13 (AP).—William D. Cox, new owner of the Philadelphia Phils, said today he has asked Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis to review the trade in which Philadelphia received Pitcher Allen Gettel, First Baseman Ed Levy, and $10,000 in cash from the New York Yankees for First Baseman Nick Etten.

Gettel has announced his intention to remain on his Virginia farm, and Levy, Cox said, has been fishing at Cocoa, Fla., and preparing to enter the army.

"It is getting to be one headache after another," Cox said, "but I can't figure this latest one. Maybe Landis can tell me where I stand or what I can do. We need players and can't afford to lose any.

"Ford Frick, National league president, told me that in his opinion the deal can be abrogated or at least we can get other players or cash to the value of Gettel and Levy."

Meanwhile, Manager Bucky Harris of the Phils announced purchase of Pitcher Charles Fuchs from Detroit of the American league for the waiver price of $7,500. He said only three players on the present roster, Levy, Pitcher Johnny Allen, and First Baseman Eddie Murphy, have not signed their contracts.

NAVY WINS MAT TITLE WITH FIVE CHAMPIONSHIPS

Philadelphia, Pa., March 13 (AP).—Navy's midshipmen won five individual titles and their first team championship in the eastern wrestling intercollegiate meet today.

Malcolm MacDonald of Tulsa, Okla., annexed the middies' first victory by defeating Howard McConnell, Pennsylvania, 15 to 4, in the 121-pound final. Another Tulsan and former Oklahoma A. & M. wrestler, Midshipman Bob Kitt, tallied the second triumph when he threw Penn State's Sam Harry in the 136-pound match.

Josiah Henson obtained Navy's third victory in the 145-pound encounter to clinch the team title. Clarence Creel added the fourth victory for the middies in the 165-pound class and Heavyweight Shufford Swift successfully defended the title he won last year to complete the middies' sweep.

Lebanon Five Beats Wallace of Gary, 48-32

Rochester made its only real bid after four minutes of the third period, pulling up within four points at 26 to 30. Thereafter Lebanon held the Zebras to one free throw until the sixth minute of the final quarter, when King and Bill Kreighbaum delivered the seven points that saved the Zebras from a period shutout.

Lew Wallace gained the evening game with a 37 to 25 triumph over Peru that was far more decisive than the point margin would indicate. From the start it was obvious that Peru not only was outweighed and outreached by the Gary kids, but also outsped. The big kids from the steel city gave the losers a minimum of shots, thanks to a defense led by Alex Holok. The Hornets were in front by quarterly margin of 9 to 5, 22 to 11, and 29 to 17.

BEDFORD REACHES FINALS

Vincennes, Ind., March 13 (AP).—Bedford overcame a first quarter deficit tonight to defeat Jasper, 46 to 29, and win a place in the state finals. John Brennan, Bedford's 6-foot 3-inch center, sparked the Stonecutter attack. It was the first semi-final tournament victory for Bedford since 1938.

Bedford jumped into a 7 to 5 lead in the first quarter with Viv Simmons pacing the attack, but the Wildcats held an 11 to 10 advantage at the end of the period.

FORT WAYNE WINS, 44-23

Muncie, Ind., March 13 (AP).—A game that had 7,500 fans in a frenzy during the first half turned into a rout in the final 16 minutes tonight as Central of Fort Wayne whipped Marion, 44 to 23, to gain a place in next week's finals.

Marion fought Central on even terms for the first half, making one brilliant comeback to take the lead, but couldn't keep up the pace, falling behind at the start of the third quarter. Then the Giants gave out completely when Joe Pfeiffer, star guard, went out on personal fouls midway in the third quarter.

BATESVILLE SURPRISES

Indianapolis, Ind., March 13 (AP).—A Batesville team tonight proved it was underrated by turning back the tall Greenfield quintet, 27 to 20, for its second upset victory of the day in the state semi-final.

The fact that the Bulldogs, who had won 16 of 23 games up to today, even were in the Indianapolis semi-final was more or less of a surprise, but when they slipped past both Madison and Greenfield it amounted to the biggest upset of the semi-finals.

Batesville held its two semi-final opponents to a total of 40 points. In the afternoon the Bulldogs eliminated Madison, 26 to 20, and Greenfield thumped Clinton, 53 to 37.

FULL SCHEDULE OF YACHT RACES WILL BE SAILED

Committee Is Resigned to Man Power Shortage.

The Lake Michigan Yachting association's schedule committee has planned a full season of sail racing for 1943 despite a shortage of man power for crews. Yacht clubs will sponsor the same open races and regattas as before the war, but are not expecting to be surprised if fewer boats turn up at the starting lines for some events.

One of the reasons for the normal schedule is that in case the navy department decides to continue its plan, inaugurated here last summer, to train Abbott hall midshipmen aboard local yachts, the craft will be in commission.

Open Events Scheduled.

The schedule of open events follows:

May 28—Chicago to Milwaukee, Milwaukee Yacht club.

May 30—Regatta off Milwaukee harbor, Milwaukee Y. C.

Aug. 5-7—Lipton, Nutting, and Gehrmann trophy series for R. S. and Tumlaren classes, off Belmont harbor, Chicago Y. C.

Sept. 3-6—Annual Tri-state race, Chicago to St. Joseph to Michigan City and return to Chicago; Columbia, Chicago, and Jackson Park yacht clubs, respectively.

Star Boats to Compete.

In addition to the above, the Star class fleets are expected to announce their 1943 schedule of open races and chamionship events soon. The international championship races probably will be sailed the week of Aug. 23-28, but the location has not been decided.

William Moore and R. F. Hatfield, who both retired last year as race committee chairmen of the Jackson Park and Columbia yacht clubs, respectively, have been prevailed upon to return to their posts for this season.

Lewis Makes Pro Debut in City Tomorrow

Roy Lewis, 1940 Chicagoland Golden Gloves featherweight champion, will make his first professional appearance in this city when he meets Jackie Nichols of Gary in a four round bout in Marigold Gardens tomorrow. The match will serve as a preliminary to eight round feature contests involving Tommy James, 1942 city Golden Gloves welterweight champion, and Johnny Rozina of Milwaukee, and Clarence Brown, former Catholic Youth organization heavyweight title holder, and Mickey Hayes, also of Milwaukee.

Dawson to Meet Hadnott.

Additional four round matches will bring together Fred Dawson and Berlin Hadnott, local featherweights, and Isadore Miner and Louis Jackson, welterweights.

James and Rozina will be fighting for another chance with Tommy Bell, Detroit boxer. Bell made a success of his debut in this city by stopping James on Feb. 1, the upset occurring soon after James had scored a technical knockout over Verne Patterson. Subsequently, Rozina surprised by holding Bell to a draw fight in the Marigold arena.

Brown Is Favorite.

Hayes hammered out a decision in six rounds over Frank Greene in Chicago Stadium Feb. 15, but if Brown's first round knockout of Jack Trammel is any criterion Mickey will be defeated.

Corp. Jimmy Ricci will oppose Ivan Kalmikoff in a featured bout on the wrestling program in White City tomorrow. . . . The Veteran Boxers' association of Illinois has postponed the date of its annual dance in Merry Gardens ballroom from April 28 to May 6.

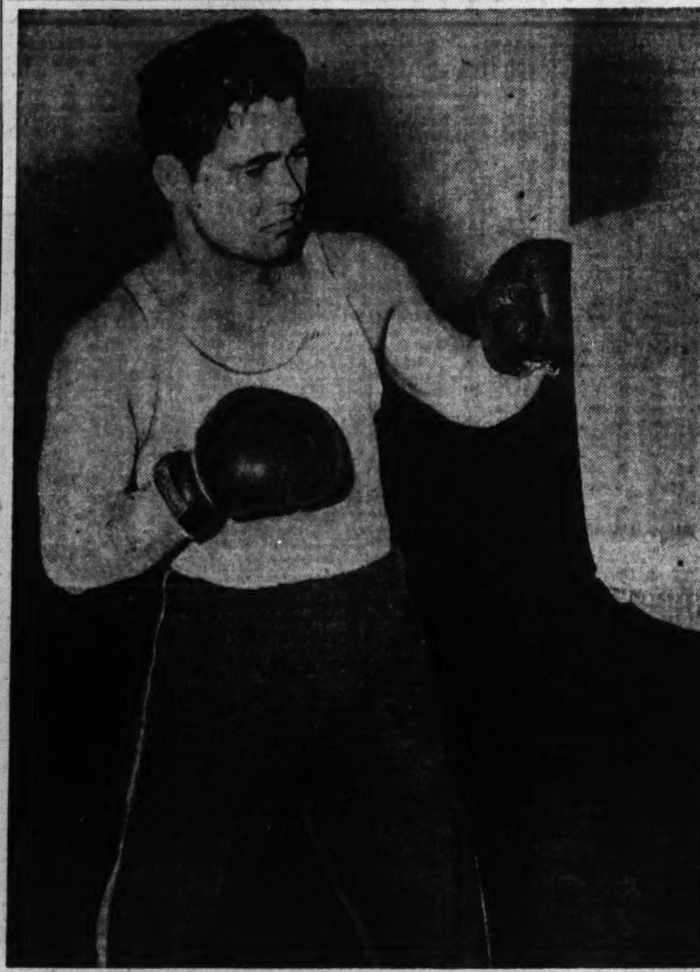
BIDDING FOR BERTHS



Choice of boxers for the eight alternation positions on the Chicago Golden Gloves team, which will meet the New York champions in the Stadium March 31 in the annual Intercity show, will be made after the entire squad of 32 has finished training. Among the contenders for selection in the heavyweight division as alternate to Champion Walter Moore of Chicago is Bill Anderson (above), champion of the Nashville, Tenn., tournament. Two others, Art McWhorter of Gary, Ind., and Ed Posage of St. Louis, Mo., also are in the running.

Harry Joyce of Memphis. He's in the running for the alternate assignment in the middleweight division. He was runner-up to Champion Samson Powell of Cleveland, O., in the finals in the Stadium this year. Still, he'll have to hustle to take the Intercity job away from the hard-hitting William Johnson of Chicago.

ments for the Intercity bouts—and there will be 32 on the squad. Choice of boxers for the eight alternate positions rests entirely with the coaches—Issy Klein and Fred Caserio. In order to keep the boys going at a good pace right up to the end of the training period, the announcement of the lineup will be withheld to the last day.

Battle of Heavyweights.

The struggle for position in the heavyweight class is expected to be wide open with Art McWhorter of Gary, Bill Anderson of Nashville, and Ed Posage of St. Louis going after the alternate place behind the champion, Walter Moore of Chicago.

Tom Attra, last year's light heavyweight champion, will have the inside track in the race for alternate back of Champion Reedy Evans in that class.

The rugged Harry Joyce of Memphis, runner up to Samson Powell of Cleveland for the middleweight title, will have to hustle to protect his position against the hard hitting and clever boxing of William Johnson of Chicago.

And so on all thru the eight weight classes, the contenders will be hammering away. Those who win places will have quite a responsibility because it will be up to them to wrest supremacy from the New Yorkers and restore the championship to Chicago which has taken it in eight out of the previous 15 meetings. New York has won four times and three of the encounters have been tied.

Best Show in Sport.

Regardless of which side wins, the spectators always find the Intercity matches one of the best shows in all amateur sport. The teams usually are so evenly matched that one bout often decides the outcome. Last season, for instance, the last fight of the evening gave New York its 9 to 7 victory when Jimmy Carollo won a very close decision over Chicago's Hubert Hood in a heavyweight battle of epic proportions.

New York has been as thoro in covering the eastern seaboard in its quest for amateur boxing talent as Chicago was in taking in all the territory from the Alleghenies to the Rockies and from the northern to the southern borders of the United States. Thus the Intercity matches will bring together the top amateur fighters of the entire country with the exception of the west coast.

Andy Phillip Voted Big 10's Most Valuable

A 23 man board headed by Maj. John L. Griffith last night put the official stamp on Andy Phillip as the No. 1 man in Western conference basketball when it voted the University of Illinois junior the third annual W-G-N trophy as the player of most value to his team during the record shattering 1942-'43 season.

Phillip's selection for Big Ten basketball's premier individual honor was announced by Jack Brickhouse last evening on the 6:15 W-G-N sports review, on which Phillip was interviewed. He is the first player outside of the University of Wisconsin to win the actual sized gold basketball trophy. Gene Englund, captain of Wisconsin's 1941 Big Ten and N. C. A. A. champions, won the inaugural award, and John Kotz of the same school was named the Big Ten's most valuable last year.

Nine Others Honored.

The committee voted on the final selection after each school, thru a ballot of its squad members, had chosen its most valuable player. In addition to Phillip the following were thus honored by their teammates, each to receive from station W-G-N a miniature gold basketball with raised school letter in the university colors: Rudy Lawson, Purdue; Ben Trickey, Iowa; John Logan, Indiana; Ken Exel, Minnesota; Bob Sullivan, Wisconsin; Dave Strack, Michigan; Hank Ellman, Chicago; Otto Graham, Northwestern, and Jack Dugger, Ohio State.

In addition to Maj. Griffith, the Western conference commissioner of athletics, the final selection committee included the 10 conference basketball coaches: Officials Ernest Krieger, Glenn Adams, Rollie Barnum, Lyle Clarno, Bill Haarlow, Carl Johnson, Nick Kearns, Gale Robinson, Russell Rupp, and Earl Townsend; W-G-N Sports Announcer Jack Brickhouse and W-G-N Sports Editor Grayle Howlett.

Graham Again Second.

Each member of the committee cast a first and a second place vote—first place votes counting two points and second place votes one point.

Phillip, who ran second to Kotz in last year's voting, took 17 of the 23 first place votes and five seconds for 39 points. Otto Graham, Northwestern forward, was second, three first place votes, and 13 second place votes for 19 points. Other first place votes went to Indiana's Logan, Chicago's Ellman and Iowa's Trickey.

Phillip, as a sophomore, lost the Big Ten most valuable honors to Kotz in a close race. The final point total was Kotz, 28; Phillip, 23. But there was no doubt about this year's selection, altho the 19 first place votes and 40 point aggregate of Gene Englund in 1941 still is unmatched.

Phillip was 21 years old on March 7 and is the oldest of the four boys who have become famous in collegiate basketball as the "Whiz Kids." The other three are Jack Smiley, Gene Vance and Ken Menke. Phillip is enrolled in the marine reserve. He is captain of the 1943-'44 University of Illinois team. During the last season, Andy scored 255 points in 12 Big Ten games.

Sparta Eleven and Slovaks to Play Today

BY OFFSIDE.

The Spartas and Slovaks, who were unable to decide their National Open Soccer Cup match last week on account of the weather, will make another attempt today in Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue. The winner probably will meet the Falk Corporation F. C. of Milwaukee, Wis., in the Western semifinals.

Last week's postponement dimmed the Spartas' chances of bringing another national title to Chicago, as George Hamous, their star half back, reported to the army at Camp Grant. Still hopeful of victory, however, Manager Raymond Swartzkopf has bolstered his team by the inclusion of Jack Thompson, James Shump, and James Psenicka, all seasoned and star players from the disbanded Cleveland Slavias.

The Slovaks will show no changes in the team that defeated the Vikings in the last round, 2 to 1. Ture Hallquist from the Linneas and all the rest of the team are in condition for their hardest test of the year.

The Necaxas, who have defeated several of the best teams, will face the pick of the Sparta and Slovak reserves in a curtain raiser at 1 p. m. The big match will start at 2:30 and will continue until a decision has been reached. The lineups:

Heading the women competitors will be Pearl Peterson, defending champion in the singles.

The veterans' doubles champions, William C. Lenhart and J. C. White of the Evanston Badminton club, will be back.

WRIGLEY PROFIT FOR YEAR DROPS TO $3.32 A SHARE

Sales, Down 4 Per Cent, Termed Satisfactory.

The William Wrigley Jr. company, Chicago, yesterday reported net income decreased to $6,519,523 in 1942 from $8,090,413 in the preceding year. Earnings per common share were $3.32, against $4.05. The company paid $5,473,400 in income and excess profits taxes last year, after deduction of $197,600 post-war refund of excess profits tax.

President Philip K. Wrigley said sales volume in 1942 was satisfactory "under existing circumstances," being less than 4 per cent under 1941 when sales were the largest in the company's history. This, however, means little from a comparative standpoint, Wrigley said, because "consumer demand for our product under war conditions has increased to such an extent that it is impossible to estimate what the picture might have been had we had unlimited production."

Zenith Radio Has Gain.

Zenith Radio corporation, Chicago, had consolidated operating profit of $4,048,495, during the nine months ended Jan. 31. This was after depreciation, excise taxes and reserves, but before provision for federal income and excess profits taxes of $2,678,951. In the same period a year ago the company reported a $1,598,450 profit before income taxes. The company said it did not know what effect contract renegotiation might have on profits.

Eastern Air Lines, Inc. had net income of $1,885,503 last year compared with $1,609,706 in 1941, Capt. Edward Rickenbacker, president and general manager, announced. Earnings per common share, after preferred dividend requirements, were $3.28,-against $2.81.

Tax Liability Doubted.

The company provided $627,904 for federal income taxes in 1942 and $3,150,000 for excess profits taxes, after deduction of $350,000 post-war credit. Capt. Rickenbacker, however, said it is the management's opinion that "an interpretation based upon intent of law" would exempt the company from liability for excess profits tax in 1942. If, after clarification of the point, no excess profits tax liability accrues in 1942, he said total provision for federal taxes on income will be reduced to approximately 2 million dollars.

Kennecott Copper corporation, the nation's largest copper producer, had net income of $46,140,121, equal to $4.26 a common share, compared with $49,251,857, or $4.55 a share, in 1941. Last year's profit was after a 2 million dollar reserve for contingencies and without consideration of a postwar refund of excess profits taxes estimated at $2,681,145. Total taxes increased to $53,421,024 from $42,024,599 in 1941.

FREE INDUSTRY OF SHACKLES TO AID WAR—I. M. A.

Recommendations Will Be Made to Congress.

Industry must be freed of its shackles and government interference reduced to the minimum absolutely necessary to insure maximum production for military and civilian needs, the Illinois Manufacturers' association said yesterday. The association has adopted a 24 point program for the stabilization of industry now and after the war, which will be presented at the annual convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in New York next month.

Also embodied in the program were recommendations aimed at the preservation of small industries, opposition to political contributions by labor unions and objections to post-war operation by the government of government owned manufacturing plants in competition with private capital.

Asks Freedom for Management.

James L. Donnelly, executive vice president of the association, said the report included post-war objectives to establish industry on the firm foundation needed to maintain employment of demobilized army and navy men.

The association asserted that effective production requires freedom of private industry to manage its plants without unreasonable government interference. It demanded adjournment for the duration of initiation or extension of so-called social reforms, legislation which would penalize private enterprise, and activities of government agencies and departments which harass industry.

Waste and extragavance both in nonmilitary and military expenditures should be eliminated, said the association.

Ask Check on Labor Boards.

In the field of labor relations, the association recommended that congress place the same prohibitions against political contributions by labor unions as now apply to corporations; to prohibit government agencies from requiring employers to compel membership in labor unions as a condition of employment, and to provide for court review of facts in national labor relations board decisions.

Other recommendations to congress included adoption of the Ruml pay as you go plan for income taxes, and that opposition be expressed to any program calculated to interfere with the freedom of the press.

TAKING INVENTORY.

Investors who keep their portfolios in first class condition follow a practice similar to the inventory policy of well managed manufacturing and merchandising enterprises. Annually or oftener, manufacturers and distributors of merchandise look over their inventories carefully to determine what items are not selling as fast as they should. When slow moving goods are discovered, prices are slashed drastically rather than face the virtual certainty that if the goods are held for sale at regular prices they will become obsolete and unsalable, meanwhile taking up valuable space and tying up capital. It is cheaper in the long run to clear out the slow merchandise at the first signs of sluggishness and replace it with fresh goods.

A well kept investment portfolio is given similar treatment. At least once a year, and preferably more often, the entire portfolio is examined thoroly. The purpose is not only to discover any really bad situations which may have developed, but to spot the relatively poor performers in the list. The poor performers, like slow moving merchandise, are ousted and replaced with securities offering better promise.

The winner of a contest held in 1925 on the problem of investing a widow's funds suggested 10 rules for investors to follow, and the 10th rule was this: "Once a year sell at least one stock, choosing the weakest on the list and having no consideration whatever for its original cost. Replace it by another good risk."

This was a drastic suggestion. The weakest in a list of securities is likely to have its weakness reflected in the market price, possibly by a decline in value. It is human nature to hang on doggedly to a bond or stock whose price has slipped, hoping for a comeback. If there is anything fundamentally wrong, of course, there will be no comeback, and by the time the investor realizes that something is amiss it may be too late to salvage much value.

The author of this rule on annual replacement advanced the argument that out of 15 or 20 companies on a list at least one is quite certain to become less attractive than the others in the course of time. Likewise, out of the hundreds of companies not represented on the list, at least one is fairly certain to become more attractive than the tailender of the list held. A rigid program of replacement, therefore, would keep the investment portfolio abreast of the times.

If adherence to some such rule accomplished nothing more than to force the investor to analyze his holdings carefully once a year, it would still be well worth while.

STOCK MARKET TURNS UNEVEN; GAINS IN WEEK

Trade Second Biggest for Saturday Since 1941.

New York, March 13 (AP).—Further profit cashing held stock averages at a standstill today, but the market managed to emerge with a small net advance for the week and new highs for two years or longer were plentiful.

Prices were irregular from the start today as the lengthy upswing caused some customers to stand aside to await a possible sizable "correction." Favorites were resistant, tho numerous leaders slipped into small declines. Large blocks of low and medium priced issues made for the second largest two hour turnover since late 1941. Volume was 829,830 shares, against 787,800 last Saturday.

Bell Aircraft jumped 1¾ on a pleasing earnings summary. Commonwealth & Southern was the liveliest issue, opening on a 22,500 share trade. It closed unchanged at ¾.

Dipped at Week's Start.

The market gave ground Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, altho offerings dwindled and losses generally were mild. Selling to obtain funds for the March 15 tax deadline was a factor in the decline, but brokers suggested this was much lighter than in preceding years.

A strong rally developed Thursday as investment and speculative demand revived and activity expanded. The upturn carried thru Friday, with the averages reaching best levels in 34 months.

Helping the rebound which started late Wednesday was general bullishness over the war outlook, despite the less favorable news from Russia. Wall street sentiment also was aided by the assurance of Stock Exchange President Emil Schram to President Roosevelt that the market was in a healthy condition.

CHICAGO PRICES RISE.

Prices advanced on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday in trading of 25,000 shares. Volume leaders included Miller and Hart, and Central and South West Utilities, both unchanged; Electric Household, up ⅛ to 5⅜ after touching a new 1942-'43 high of 5½, and North American Car, up ⅛ to a new high of 13. In the final half hour Libby declined ⅛ and Standard Brands rose ⅛ from the New York close.

BONDS CHANGE LITTLE.

New York, March 13 (AP).—Price changes were generally narrow in today's bond market, and activity fell below that of recent Saturdays.

Rails, measured by the Associated Press average, were unchanged at their high for several years. The utility and industrial averages were slightly lower. United States government loans were steady.

Commodities

Cotton futures yesterday advanced 25 cents to $1 a bale in New York. The March position made the largest gain altho May and July contracts drew mill and New Orleans buying. The rise was attributed partly to the absence of offerings after declining prices of preceding days. New Orleans prices advanced 25 to 55 cents a bale.

CORN CEILINGS SLASH PRICES IN CASH MARKETS

Futures Rise to New Maximum Levels.

Permanent price ceilings on corn at lower levels than had been anticipated created confusion in American grain markets yesterday. The new ceilings were announced late Friday by the office of price administration. Corn futures rose ⅛ to 4¼ cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade to their new maximum prices and cash corn declined 1 to 5 cents because of the new regulations which severely penalize shippers of grain that contains more than 15½ per cent moisture.

Wheat declined 1 cent or more and oats and rye dropped 1⅝ cents at the opening on selling believed induced by disappointment of traders over the new corn ceiling, in which an increase of 6 to 8 cents a bushel had been expected. Altho all grains rallied strongly from the day's lows, wheat finished at losses of ⅛ to ⅝ cent; oats ⅝ to ½ cent lower, and rye unchanged to ⅛ cent lower.

Most Corn Brings Less.

Trading in cash corn was at a standstill for several hours while brokers studied the new regulations, and it was not until late in the session that receivers attempted to make sales. A few cars of No. 2 yellow sold at the ceiling price of $1.02 a bushel, but most offerings brought 1 to 5 cents less than the same quality grain had sold for Friday.

The new cash market ceilings drew a wave of protests from farmers, country grain dealers, shippers, and industries who said they were in many cases far below those permitted in the temporary freezing order.

Some experts estimated that 80 to 90 per cent of the corn held by farmers will bring less money under the new regulations than previously. In establishing the ceiling price the OPA used a moisture content of 15.50 per cent as a base. All grain must be discounted ¾ cent a bushel for every ½ of 1 per cent of excess moisture. No. 4 yellow corn containing 18.50 per cent moisture which sold at $1 Friday brought only 97½ cents yesterday.

Farm Dealings Under Rule.

Farmers, heretofore exempt from price ceilings on corn in dealing among themselves, will be forced to conform to maximum levels in the future. The OPA announced that producers could sell only at the nearest terminal or basing point price, less the freight rate to the terminal. Also if a farmer sells his grain to a trucker he must lower the price 2 cents a bushel more. Brokers contended that this provision will penalize distribution of corn thruout the live stock feeding area.

Large industrial users of corn were reported alarmed at the prospect that supplies vital to their operation will be shut off by the lower prices. Shipments to some markets last week were so small that the Commodity Credit corporation was understood to have sold corn to prevent a shortage.

Holdings of corn by the government agency are estimated at less than 20 million bushels, which elevator men believe could be sold within a week if offered freely.

Predict Many Evasions.

Brokers predicted the new price ceilings would result in many illegal dealings between farmers buying feed, and may lead to organized violations of the order on a large scale.

The order was reported to have brought a rift between the OPA and Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard. A spokesman for the department of agriculture was quoted in Washington as saying that the new regulations were a temporary expedient and would be changed shortly.

WORLD PARLEY URGED TO AID FOOD PROBLEM

New York, March 13 (AP).—Paul S. Willis, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, today said that a conference on food by representatives of all the allied nations should be held at once to decide "a situation daily becoming more acute."

"At present, demands upon the American farmer and the food industry are like commands to fill a bucket with no bottom," Willis said. "The more we produce, the greater the shortage."

He said farmers grew record amounts of food in 1942, which still was not enough, and that the government has a program underway to encourage farmers to grow more but "does not tell us how farmers can raise more and more with fewer men and less equipment," nor "how the food industry can process, pack and distribute more and more food with less and less equipment and man power."

OPA Booklet Tells 'Fear' of Farm Prices

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—In the midst of a controversy over the new subparity price ceilings on corn, an official office of price administration pamphlet came to light today saying, "Failure to stabilize farm prices may well break down the entire stabilization program."

The pamphlet was prepared by OPA's research division for guidance of officials about a month ago. A copy was made available today to the Associated Press.

Altho the pamphlet had no direct relation to the corn controversy, it reflected, apparently, OPA's general attitude toward that type of situation.

Attacked by Farm Leaders.

The new corn prices, which technically put on a more permanent basis temporary ceilings in effect the last 60 days, have been attacked bitterly since their issuance yesterday by farm leaders because the prices on a market basis amount to about 92 per cent of parity.

OPA contended this is permissible because government benefit payments to corn farmers exceeded the difference between the price ceiling and parity.

A bill already has passed the senate and is awaiting house action which would forbid this method of computing maximum prices.

The pamphlet said, "Further increases in farm prices mean further increases in the cost of living at a time when the pressure for wage increases is already explosive.

Could Destroy Program.

"Failure to stabilize prices may well break down the entire stabilization program. If this happens, there is the very real danger that the farmer's experience during the last war will be duplicated — that prices paid by farmers [for clothing, machinery and so on] will rise to such an extent that present gain [in farm incomes] will be reduced or wiped out."

The pamphlet also attacked the frequent claim of farm leaders that higher farm prices are necessary because of the higher cost of farm labor and other production costs. The pamphlet said that altho wage rates on farms rose from 1939 to 1942 by 58 per cent, wage costs per unit of production increased only 28 per cent; that all farm production costs together, including wages, increased on the average 18 per cent per unit of production while prices of farm products increased 71 per cent.

The Borden company, large dairy concern, paid $16,098,322 during 1942 in Illinois to farmers for dairy products, to employés for wages and salaries, and to the various taxing bodies within the state, the company announced yesterday.

In 1941 the company paid $14,857,327 for this list of items in Illinois. The statement disclosed the company has 2,142 employés and 3,459 stockholders in the state.

February Building Total Is Smallest in 8 Years

New York, March 13 (AP).—Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today the total of building permits declined during February to the smallest for any month during the last eight years. Its report for 215 cities showed $28,676,672 for February, only a shade under the January total but 67.6 per cent under the $88,564,969 of February, 1942.

WAR SPENDING RISES TO DAILY PEAK OF 253 MILLION IN FEBRUARY

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—War spending reached a new high rate of $253,400,000 a day last month, the WPB reported today. Total war expenditures for February were 6 billion 81 million dollars, which was 2.8 per cent less than in the longer month of January but two and one-half times the outlay of February, 1942.

The daily rate in February exceeded the January rate by $12,900,000. Daily overage expenditures are reckoned on the number of days on which checks were cleared by the treasury. There are 24 such days in February and 26 in January.

From what is generally recognized as the start of the "defense program" in July, 1940, the government had spent 80 billion 500 million for war activities thru February.

Coal Miners Urge Owners to Negotiate

New York, March 13 (AP).—An official of the United Mine Workers of America told Southern coal operators today that the union is not ready to suspend collective bargaining "and that means you had better sit down and make a wage agreement—the thing you came here to do."

Sam Caddy, UMW president of district 16, Kentucky, made this reply to the proposal of the Southern Coal Producers association, rejected yesterday, that negotiations for a new wage contract be adjourned until three months after the war ends.

"If you came here to pretend to make a wage agreement we might as well know it," said Caddy. "If you came with the attitude that Uncle Sam or somebody else is going to do it, it will be a great monumental blunder."

Demands Bargaining.

Caddy asserted that the operator proposal and the war labor board's little steel formula would kill collective bargaining. The formula would limit wage increases to 15 per cent to cover living cost rises between Jan. 1, 1941, and May 1, 1942.

"I doubt if 650 million tons of coal will ever come out of the mines of America by the use of a great big stick in place of collective bargaining," he said. "The best way to get 650 million tons is to negotiate an agreement."

He said the little steel formula not only denied a wage increase, it denies collective bargaining. He said it was outdated and "a great injustice" to the miners.

"Miners," he declared, "are not going to give it up [collective bargaining] without a damn good fight somewhere along the lines."

Lewis Is Reëlected.

The union is holding separate conferences with northern and southern operators to negotiate wage contracts. Union leaders have threatened to halt work if a new contract is not signed.

Reëlection of John L. Lewis to his 12th term as international president of the UMW was announced by the union. Lewis, who has been president since 1920, was unopposed in the election, which was held Dec. 8, as were John O'Leary, vice president, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer.

Commerce Secretary Aid for Small Business Sought

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Sen. Alexander Wiley [R., Wis.] and Rep. Evan Howell [R., Ill.] said today that they would introduce bills Monday calling for creation of an assistant secretary of commerce for small business.

Lamont Takes Over Helm of Morgan Bank

New York, March 13 (AP).—Thomas W. Lamont was the chief executive of J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., today, the first time in the history of the world famous banking house that it has not been headed by a Morgan.

Thomas W. Lamont.

Lamont, 72 years old and long regarded as the "elder statesman" of the Morgan concern, came officially to the helm on the death of J. P. Morgan, by virture of his office as vice chairman of the board of directors. Morgan was chairman.

Expected to Get Post.

The vice chairman acts in place of the chairman, and altho a new chairman must be chosen eventually, sources close to the Morgan bank believed Lamont would be elected.

Lamont spent two years on the staff of the New York Tribune, after graduating from Harvard in 1892, then entered the importing and exporting business. In 1903 a banker-neighbor, the late Henry P. Davison, urged him to become secretary and treasurer of the Bankers Trust company.

Davison was known as an excellent judge of talent, and in 1911 Lamont followed him into a partnership in J. P. Morgan & Co., two years before the death of the elder Morgan.

Aided U. S. Liberty Loans.

Lamont had had international experience both in commerce and banking and, with the outbreak of the World war, took an important hand in the negotiations for allied loans. He advised the United States treasury during the Liberty loan drives, and at the close of the war acted as financial advisor for the American mission to negotiate the peace.

His brilliance and personal charm soon made him one of the key men in the Morgan organization, along with such famous men as Davison, the late Dwight Morrow, Thomas S. Gates, and others.

People and Events

George T. Wruck of Chicago yesterday was appointed manager of the Cepro division of the Rahr Malting company of Manitowoc, Wis. The Rahr company recently produced a new product, Cepro, a coffee substitute. Wruck formerly was advertising manager of the John F. Jelke company, Chicago margarine manufacturer.

P. L. Henriquez, manager of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch western advertising office in Chicago since 1922, will retire April 1. He will be succeeded by Ernest M. Roscher, who has been associated with him for more than 20 years.

John M. Rodemeir has been appointed supervisor of group sales for the Continental Assurance company and will be assistant to Robert Weddell, assistant vice president in charge of group production.

Dr. Ernest Martin Hopkins, president of Dartmouth college, has been elected a director of Continental Can company, succeeding the late J. F. Hartlieb. Dr. Hopkins has had a long career in industrial personnel work and business administration.

CANADA LIMITS WAR DEBT RISE BY HEAVY TAXES

Meet Half of Costs; U. S. Pays 30%.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Canada will close its fiscal year this month with a record of having met from current revenues 50 per cent of its total expenditures. By contrast, the United States is meeting less than 30 per cent of its expenditures from taxation.

The per capita debt of the United States, already larger than that of Canada, is rising faster than that of the dominion. The combined federal and state indebtedness of the United States is equal to $1,310 a person. The combined federal and provincial debt of the dominion amounts to $1,190. This is a reversal of the relationship that existed as recently as 1938. Traditionally the United States has had a low per capita debt.

Not until the big spending began under the New Deal did the per capita debt in this country begin to creep upon that of Canada, eventually passing it.

Investors Are Attracted.

Because of its war time finance record, its debt position, and other factors Canada again is becoming an attractive field for investment of American capital.

In the early months of the war Canada's big purchases of materials in this country, without a commensurate expansion in her exports to the United States, put a severe strain on the Canadian dollar. Since the United States entered the war, however, this strain has lessened and the Canadian minister of financee recently asserted that shortage of American dollar exchange no longer is a problem to the dominion.

That the significance of these developments is appreciated by United States investors is indicated by recent large investments of United States money in high grade Canadian bonds. Educational institutions, insurance companies, and other large investment organizations have shifted large sums of money into Canada in recent months. Better yields have been available on certain Canadian bonds than on United States securities of comparable grade.

Position Termed Strategic.

Canada's post-war economic prospects are considered to be favorable. One aspect of economic outlook for Canada was emphasized in Chicago this week by James H. Macdonnell, president of the National Trust Company of Toronto.

The air development of the future, Macdonnell said, will find Canada in a strategic position geographically. Canada will be on the path of the important air routes from Europe and Asia to America.

"We are beginning to realize," he said, "that the world is packed tightly around the north pole. This will become increasingly apparent with the further development of air commerce. In that development Canada, because of its geographical location, is strategically placed."

I. C. PRESIDENT SAYS DIVIDEND IS STILL DISTANT

Altho net income rose from $10,578,195 in 1941 to $24,914,091 in 1942, as previously reported, the Illinois Central railroad will pay no dividend out of the larger earnings, J. L. Beven, president, said yesterday in a letter to stockholders.

Distribution of the profits included payment of 10 million dollars to the Reconstruction Finance corporation on principal of loans obtained during the last decade, expenditure of $6,700,000 for additions and improvement to property, $4,600,000 for the purchase of the road's own bonds with face amount of 10 million dollars, and a million dollar increase in materials and supplies inventories, Beven said. The remaining $3,700,000, he said, was added to working capital, more of which is needed because of the record breaking passenger and freight traffic being handled as a result of the war.

Indiana Soft Coal Prices Hiked to Cover Added Cost

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Bituminous coal prices in district No. 11 [Indiana] were increased an average of 20 cents a ton today by the office of price administration because of overtime costs of the six day work week and other increased operating costs.

Government Sets Meat 'Take'; Subsidy to Vegetable Raisers

Fixes Percentages

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard today ordered all live stock slaughterers operating under federal inspection to set aside specific percentages of their meat output for government war uses for the period March 14 to April 30.

Those percentages by classes of meat were: Beef, other than canner and cutter grades, 40 per cent; canner and cutter grades [steers, heifers, and cows], 80 per cent; veal, 30 per cent; lamb and mutton, 35 per cent; pork, 45 per cent.

Remainder for Civilians.

Wickard said the unreserved part of packers' production would be available for civilian consumption. He said that quantity should be sufficient to permit the sale of about the same quantity of meat to consumers as packers are permitted to sell for civilian consumption under regulations of the office of price administration.

Consumer rationing of meats will go into effect March 29 with an average civilian allowance of about two pounds a week.

For Military and Lend-Lease.

Meats set aside for government use under Wickard's order will go to the army, navy, and the lend-lease program.

The reservation order does not apply to small local slaughterers or packing plants which do not operate under meat inspection services of the agriculture department. Those slaughterers, however, are subject to OPA restrictions on the sale of meats for civilian use.

Grower Gets More

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—The government announced today a combination price support and subsidy program designed to assure growers of canning vegetable crops 20 to 50 per cent more than they received last year, but protecting consumers against corresponding price increases.

Processors will pay farmers prices stipulated by the agriculture department. Those prices range 20 to 50 per cent higher than last year, depending upon the type of vegetable.

The department's commodity credit corporation will then go thru the technical procedure of buying the raw vegetables from processors or canners at the same prices paid by them. It then will sell the vegetables back to the processors and canners at last year's prices. The differences, in effect is a subsidy and will be borne by the government.

The crops are tomatoes, sweet corn, snap beans, green peas, lima beans, beets, carrots, and cabbage for kraut.

Flat Ceilings to Be Set.

Later the office of price administration will set flat dollars and cents prices for these canned vegetables. These prices will be by regions and will be determined by grades, can sizes, types, and styles. An announcement from the OPA said the ceiling prices would remain approximately at the same average level as prevailed in 1942 under the individual canner ceiling prices which were in effect that year.

Assails Plans to Put Science in Straitjacket

Two pending senate bills which would put scientific and technical efforts under a national director would be disastrous to the American war program and would do the axis more good than 100 army divisions, Dr. Gustav Egloff, Chicago scientist and president of the American Institute of Chemists, told the Washington, D. C., chapter of the institute last night.

Dr. Gustav Egloff.

Dr. Egloff referred to senate bills 607 and 702, known as the Kilgore bills. He said bill 607 "has as its objective a complete reorganization of our civilian and war program so that it would be directed by a single office of war mobilization, under the supervision of one director." It could only result in a chaotic condition, disrupting present functioning of organizations that have gone thru development difficulties and are doing a good job, Dr. Egloff said.

Termed Germany's Weakness.

Germany has regimented science, technology and industry, and will lose the war as a result, he said, at the same time warning America against taking a step that would obliterate "the mainspring of competition and initiative."

"The disruption of present machinery for administering the war program would be worth far more to the enemy than to us," Dr. Egloff declared. "It is not too much to say that passage of the bills might well be worth a hundred divisions to our enemies."

He said bill 702 "seems to have been written with no knowledge of existing governmental bureaus which have mobilized and are still mobilizing scientific and technical man power and the laboratories and equipment."

Would Destroy Initiative.

"Should this bill pass," he said, "there would be a totalitarianism unrivaled by our foes. In a democratic state which has been made as magnificent as it is, based on the free play of initiative, inventiveness and competition, the passage of this bill would obliterate all the initiative that is present in our way of life.

"The bill goes over into the peace period, with no provisions for cessation of its effectiveness. It aims at the heart of the patent system, without which the inventions that are turning the tide of war today would have been impossible.

"Passage of these bills would be devastating in their effect on our war production. We are fighting the axis powers and should not fall into the trap of operating our own economic system of free enterprise on the basis of totalitarianism."

OPA SAYS U. S. IMPORT RULE WILL CUT PRICE OF BEST QUALITY TEA

Washington, D. C., March 13 (AP).—Prices of high grade tea will come down, the OPA announced today, because of a new system under which the government-owned Commodity Credit corporation will handle importations from Ceylon and India.

Just how much the saving at retail will be cannot be determined yet, but OPA said maximum prices which the corporation will charge qualified distributors will be 12 cents a pound less than previous prices.

Only the best types of tea will be imported, however. Persons accustomed to buying cheaper grades will find part of the anticipated price increase offset by the higher quality, OPA said.

157 WAR ORDERS GO TO CHICAGO AREA COMPANIES

One hundred fifty-seven war contracts, the largest amount in months, were awarded 85 Chicago area companies last week, Leverett S. Lyon, chief executive officer of the Chicago Association of Commerce, announced yesterday. The contracts totaled $12,477,000 and brought the volume since the beginning of the war production program to $2,065,231,000.

Chicago Bank Clearings Decline, but Top Year Ago

Last week Chicago's bank clearings were $433,300,000, compared with $441,400,000 in the preceding week and $403,800,000 in the corresponding 1942 period, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The report follows:

FOOD INDUSTRY FACES CHANGES IN DEHYDRATION

Predict 'Revolution' After War.

BY CHARLES GOTTHART.

Food dehydration, already expanded tremendously thru the necessities of war, promises to affect the American food industry on a scale as revolutionary as canning and freezing, the major developments of the recent past. Experts in food processing said yesterday that the full force of the new development will not be felt by the housewife until the war is ended.

Then, the experts agreed, processors will offer commercially many of the foods—squeezed of their water content to conserve shipping—now produced almost exclusively for military and lend-lease purposes.

Dehydrated products already introduced commercially are assured an expanded post-war market. The success of others will depend on their ability to match the quality of the natural product, competition of other processes such as quick freezing, and consumer acceptance.

Relax, Steak Is Safe!

There should be no apprehension, however, over the likelihood of post-war foods being offered in some unrecognizable or unsatisfactory form, because the new trend will leave some items untouched.

For example, there is no thought of offering dehydrated versions of roast beef or juicy porterhouse steak. But officials of the American Meat institute foresee a post-war market for dehydrated corned beef hash, hamburger, and similar meats in which quality and not appearance is the deciding factor for retail buyers.

Dehydrated meats will be particularly attractive to consumers without adequate refrigeration facilities, and are expected to be in demand for hunting or fishing trips.

At the same time, they will compete with an expanded production of frozen meats as a result of improved home refrigeration equipment. A good start already has been made in the marketing of frozen meats in convenient sizes for home use, and packers are prepared to expand this market many fold.

Leaves Waste to Packer.

Leaving the bones and waste products in the packing plant results in their efficient utilization in the manufacture of glue and other by-products, but may have far-reaching effect on the trade, especially from the standpoint of labor.

In dairy products, where dehydration has had a phenomenal growth, experts assert that an important post-war shift is certain. An expanded commercial utilization of powdered milk and eggs will be paralleled by increasing use of dried products for home baking and other uses, it is said.

If they compete with the whole egg on a price and quality basis, scrambled eggs made by adding water to the dehydrated product are likely to become an accepted breakfast table item, just as they are in England. If powdered milk is cheaper or more convenient to use, it will replace fluid milk in the home for many purposes, the experts contend.

Soup Marketing Planned.

Added to the other varieties on the market for some time, dried cream soups were developed recently, and manufacturers are planning exploitation of the market when a letup in government demands permits large scale commercial use.

The importance attached to the development was illustrated a few days ago when Theodore G. Montague, president of the Borden company, said: "Dehydrated foods seem destined to become one of the most important developments in the history of the food industry."

Millions of dollars have been spent in equipping plants for dehydration since the United States assumed its rôle as world bread basket, and virtually no food seems incapable of the process.

Will Purchase for Cash Manufacturing Enterprise

We represent a substantial manufacturing company now preparing its post-war program, in which connection they are interested in acquiring for cash a large or medium sized business now profitably engaged in war work and having good peace-time possibilities.

While this company prefers purchasing a concern engaged in some branch of the electrical industry, consideration will also be given to a business in unrelated lines . . . in either case, however, preference will be given a situation in which present competent management will be willing to remain. Negotiations confidential.

UNITED BUSINESS SERVICE

100 OUTSTANDING STOCKS

A Special Statistical Study by one of the Country's Leading Financial Advisory Services

JUST PREPARED is one of the most unusual Reports on value stocks ever issued by an investment advisory organization. Rising inflation, growing confidence in Allied victory and persistent strength in stocks have brought thousands of investors back into the market. During the past sixty days, our Investment Staff—working overtime—has answered over 3200 letters requesting information on securities. To help answer the many questions investors are asking today we have prepared this Special 100-Stock Report.

100 Stocks selected from 2215 Listed Issues

These 100 stocks, selected after extensive research from 2215 listed Stock Exchange and Curb issues, represent outstanding values in five classifications:

20 Growth Stocks With New Products. Like Motors, Chemicals and Radio after the last war, these issues have possibilities of becoming future market leaders.

20 Dividend-Payers For Over 40 Years. Investments for backlog funds, yielding from 4% to 10%. Nine have paid dividends each year for over 60 years.

20 Preferreds With Large Back Dividends. Large current earnings are making possible the pay-off of accumulations. These preferreds have from $8 to $84 a share in accumulated dividends.

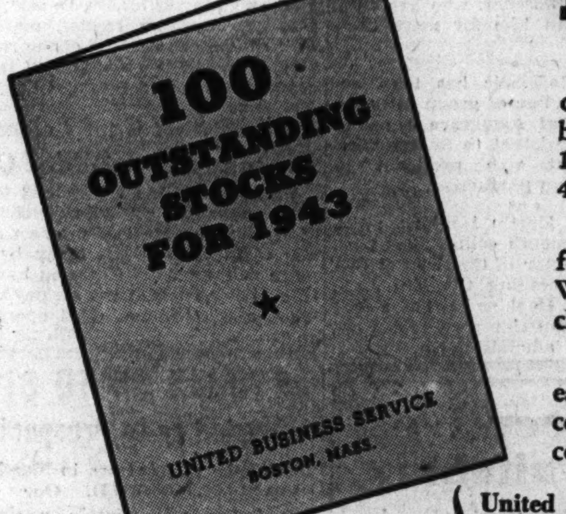
Stocks Rise as Victory Nears

In all previous wars since the time of Napoleon, stock prices have anticipated victory many months in advance. In World War I, stock prices started up some ten months ahead of the Armistice. This advance which started from 70 in the Dow-Jones Industrials in 1917, rose steadily in 1918 and topped out in a dynamic post-war inflation rise in 1919 that carried the Average up to 119, a total advance of 70%. The same factors which caused the 1918-1919 rise—inflation and increasingly effective Allied striking power—are now coming into evidence and can again result in another broad market advance.

Broadening Opportunities Ahead



The present Bull Market has been in progress for only ten months. A major rise once begun usually continues in the same direction for a considerable period, subject to occasional corrections. In the last bull market, for example, stocks rose from around 99 in the Dow-Jones Industrials in 1938 to 156 in 1939—yet this was a subnormal bull market interrupted by the war. The previous major advance ran from 43 in 1932 to 194 in 1937.

How high prices will rise in this new Bull Market, no one can say, but it is clear that powerful forces are working on the side of higher prices. Inflation is a bullish factor of growing importance. Wholesale prices have advanced 40% since the outbreak of war in 1939. If this upward spiral is not checked, it is likely to result in an explosive advance in stock prices similar to the inflation boom of 1919.

Other factors to consider are the low level of stock prices compared with prewar years—the high earning power resulting from capacity operations in many lines—the large income return available on common stocks compared with the low yield offered by most other investments today—the growing confidence in ultimate United Nations victory.

United Business and Investment Service, backed by a 23-year record of success, now serves the largest clientele of any investment advisory service in the country today.

Field Representative

MARKETING SURVEYS

Due to the expansion of our organization and the war we are adding three young women [25-35] to our field staff.

These positions start with a training salary of $130 per month and range up to substantial monthly earnings in line with ability.

Field positions are primarily for the duration, but also offer permanency and unusual advancement potentialities. Positions are based on salary only.

Location will be away from Chicago [semi-permanently] and a reasonable amount of traveling is required. Full travel expenses and moving costs are borne by our company. At present, a car is necessary, with allowances based on a fixed monthly payment, plus a mileage rate. Further rationing of gasoline and tires will NOT affect our operations.

The three successful applicants will be given a thorough 2 to 3 months' course in our own field training school [at full salary]. Our field work does NOT entail selling, but requires the ability to meet all types of people easily. Some mechanical aptitude is helpful and the capacity to organize and handle details is essential.

Please give us a complete outline of your business experience and details of your age, marital status, education, and religion. Include your telephone number for an immediate personal interview.

Our company is the foremost in its field and offers an unusual opportunity for a young woman to associate herself with an outstanding national organization.

Day by Day on the Farm.

Save by Killing Rats.

March 13, 1943.

OF ALL the mammals on farms, in cities and suburbs the common house rat is the most harmful. Rats consume and spoil millions of dollars' worth of foodstuffs every year. It costs about $2 per year to board and room a rat. Some farms lose hundreds of dollars to rats each year.

Of all the years when farmers and suburban gardeners should wage an unusually heavy offensive to exterminate rats this is the one, because 1943 brings us face to face with food shortages. We need to conserve every ounce of food we can. One practical way to save food is to kill the rats which are destructive "saboteurs" constantly attacking our supplies.

Because rats are in many cases consuming food designed for human use, rat control will play an important part in our war effort, scientists say. It has been estimated that three rats eat as much as two laying hens. One hundred rats will consume 100 bushels of corn and at the same time contaminate another 300 bushels.

Harmless to Dogs.

For years the best way to exterminate rats has been by means of a poisonous powder known as red squill. Squill is a perennial bulb that grows wild along the coast of the Mediterranean sea. It is deadly to rats but harmless to dogs, cats, hogs, chickens, horses and other farm animals. It has been used on the Wheaton farm for years, and it has hurt nothing but rats. When processed, red squill has an acrid taste, highly objectionable to most animals.

F. E. Garlough, biologist, division of predator and rodent control, fish and wildlife service, says that the war naturally has interfered with imports of red squill, but fair supplies still are available. However, the squill on the market may not be as potent because the shipments coming is now probably have been stored for some time.

How to Use Squill.

Red squill may be mixed with fish, meat and cereals to make rat baits. One pound of cheap ground fish mixed with 1.6 ounces of squill powder will make many good baits. The same amount of powdered red squill mixed with a pound of the cheapest ground meat also gets the rats.

We used to dust red squill powder over bread spread with lard to make baits used on the Wheaton farm. They were eaten readily. Put out food without squill for several nights to give the rats a "treat," then use the same materials dosed with squill. This routine gets results. It's smart to distribute more squill baits than you think will be necessary. The idea is to get every rat [if possible] in the first offensive.

MONEY FOR INCOME TAXES
$25 for 30 Days Costs Only 75c
Higher taxes and larger pay roll deductions may make it difficult for you to meet the March 15 deadline this year. If so, get the cash you need from Commonwealth. By repaying in monthly instalments tailored to your individual needs, you are relieved of the burden and inconvenience caused by large lump sum payments, like taxes. The cost is based on a monthly rate of 3% on balances of $150 or less and 2½% on that part of the unpaid balance over $150, and is, as illustrated above, quite moderate for short-term loans. Get any amount from $10 to $300.
FREE INCOME TAX BOOKLET: Written especially for the taxpayer in the low and medium income brackets, this pamphlet suggests numerous ways to reduce your taxes. It may save you money. For your copy, call in person at any Commonwealth office.

NAVY AIR STATION IS COMMISSIONED AT OTTUMWA, IA.

BY HARRY McCLAIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ottumwa, Ia., March 13.—Twelve Iowa farms on which the tall corn grew last summer today became a naval air station of 1,440 acres. Formal commissioning of the station was directed by Comm. Dorris D. Gurley in a ceremony that interrupted operations only 30 minutes.

The rich farm land has been leveled, runways have been built, and 100 aviation cadets who arrived here only last Thursday started their training as soon as the ceremony was over. When completed the station will cost 18 million dollars.

This station will have facilities for the training of 800 cadets. To operate the plant the navy will have a permanent complement of 350 officers and 1,800 enlisted men. Comm. Gurley also has requested a company of 150 WAVES to work in the headquarters.

In addition to this station the navy also will have 15 auxiliary landing fields in a radius of 15 miles. Cadets sent here from pre-flight schools will complete their primary flight training in 90 days and then will be sent to other stations for advanced training and carrier landing practice, soon to be started at the Glenview, Ill., naval air station.

Negotiations for selection of the Ottumwa naval air station were started April 15, 1942, when a board from the naval bureau of aeronautics met with David Nevin, mayor of Ottumwa, and Horace A. Brown, chairman of the Ottumwa airport commission.

Built in Fast Time.

Approval for construction of the station was given last July and ground was broken four weeks later. Within six months work on the station had progressed to the point where Comm. Gurley was able to land a plane on the first 5,000 foot runway which bisects the station.

Unlike the Glenview air station, the Ottumwa field is not contemplated as a permanent base. Buildings are constructed of wood and hollow tile, and can be removed from the land when no longer needed. Lt. Comm. Hugh C. Wilson of the navy's corps of engineers directed construction of the station and it was from him that Comm. Gurley took over the property today.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—The rubber capital of the world moved from the Amazon valley to the western Pacific in 1914, the first year of the first World war. It was only 39 years ago that the production from plantations of British and Dutch colonies first exceeded the output of wild rubber, mainly from South America.

The dominance of world markets by empires' possessions was rapid. By 1934 the brown and yellow subjects in territory conquered by Japan last year were producing 90 per cent of the world's supply of this strategic material.

1910 Peak for Wild Rubber.

The peak year for wild rubber was in 1910 when it accounted for 83,000 tons of the year's total harvest of 94,000 tons. Half of the wild rubber came from the Amazon, a fourth from Africa, and most of the remaining fourth from Mexico.

In 1934 the world bought 1,019,000 tons of rubber. The sources were as follows: British Malaya, 467,000 tons; Sumatra, Java and Dutch Borneo, 380,000 tons; Siam, 18,000 tons; French Indo-China, 20,000 tons; Burma, 12,000 tons; Ceylon, 79,000 tons; Brazil, 9,000 tons; Africa, 3,000 tons, and the remaining 2,000 tons in dribbles from tropics thruout the world including the Philippines, New Guinea, and Mexico.

The movement of this profitable tropical crop to the western Pacific was slow in getting under way until after the first decade of the present century. In 1876, the same year that Dr. N. A. Otto of Cologne invented the internal combustion engine which was to create the tire market, Henry A. Wickham, an Englishman, smuggled 70,000 seeds of the hevea rubber tree from Brazil in behalf of the government of India. This is the tree, native of the Amazon valley, which produced 97 per cent of the world's rubber before Pearl Harbor.

Seeds Carried to London.

The seeds were carried to London in a chartered ship. There, 2,397 were successfully germinated. Most of the seedlings were transplanted to a nursery at Ceylon. Other seeds later were smuggled from Brazil, but Wickham's exploit is generally credited with the birth of the hevea in the orient.

For the next 10 years government and private industry experimented with hevea and other varieties of rubber producing trees, shrubs and vines. There was uncertainty as to which would be the best. In the wild rubber boom years, hevea accounted for only a third to a half of total production.

The superiority of hevea was established by an English botanist in 1895 in developing a new method for tapping without injuring the tree. By this method, penetrating no more than the outer bark, it was found that the hevea could be milked of its latex every day or two, whereas other varieties of rubber plants had to be killed to get their rubber or could be tapped no more than once a month or once a year.

Plantings Made in Florida.

The preference for hevea was world-wide by 1900 with experimental plantings in Florida, Africa, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Dutch Guiana, Trinidad, Tobago, Haiti, Hawaii, New Guinea, Samo, Fiji, Solomon Islands, and the Philippines. The ventures were stimulated by reports, mainly exaggerated, of impending rubber shortage owing to depletion of wild sources.

In 1905, 100,000 acres of hevea were planted in British Malaya, twice the total of the previous three decades. The development was stimulated by a Brazil manipulation that raised prices to $1.25 and $1.50 a pound. By 1908 the western Pacific plantations produced 1,796 tons. This was only 2.7 per cent of the world supply and the unworried South Americans continued to boost prices, reaching a peak of $3.06 a pound in 1910. The average for 1910 was $2.06 a pound.

Money markets of Europe and America were mad with rubber speculations. It was like the stock market craze of 1928 and 1929, only worse, every one making rich paper profits on honest and dishonest promotions of rubber companies.

Production on Increase.

The plantation production in the meantime began to grow by leaps and bounds—30,130 tons in 1912, 60 per cent of the world's output in 1914, doubled in 1916, and doubled again in 1919. Prices skidded correspondingly—$1.41 in 1911, $1.21 in 1912, 82 cents in 1913, 65 cents in 1914 and 1915, 72 cents in the war years of '16 and '17, and 39 cents in 1919. Paper profits were lost early in this price skid.

Prices continued under 30 cents after 1919 except in 1925, '26, and '27 when the British monopoly withheld exports to inflate prices $1 a pound. In recent years growers have profited at prices around 16 cents a pound.

The plantations in these colonies of the European empires became the producers of almost all of the world's rubber principally for three reasons. Soil and climate were favorable. Brown and yellow labor was cheap. And thirdly, the colonial governments were not as venal as governments in rubber growing areas of Africa and Latin America.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Edward L. Cleary, manager of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, has been made a member of the post-war planning committee of the Automotive Trade Association Managers, a national organization of trade group executives serving the automobile industry. Cleary states that post-war problems which the organization will take up include factory-dealer relations, used car trade-in policies, and service operations. Cleary recently was presented with a certificate of merit by the Illinois Automotive Trade association for his service in getting recruits for the army ordnance truck units. Ben T. Wright, president, and Lynn S. Snow, secretary, of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, were given similar awards.

T. E. Lyons, formerly manager of the Western-Devon Buick company, has become associated with Cross Town Motors, 4655 Washington boulevard, Ford and Mercury dealers, as sales manager.

Commenting on the intricate manufacturing process behind production of completed bombers — now one of the assignments of the auto industry, E. F. Fisher, general manager of the Fisher body division of General Motors, said that when an ordinary person looks at a plane he sees two wings, the main fuselage, the engine, landing gear, and a few other parts.

"What he doesn't see," said Fisher, "are the thousands upon thousands of small parts, subassemblies, attaching parts, controls, heating and ventilating ducts, and hundreds of similar items. All of them combine to form the plane and each, in its proportionate way, is as vital to that plane as any other.

Fisher said that in the Detroit Aircraft unit alone, not including the company's main aircraft plant and other plants also manufacturing items, some 5,000 detail parts are being manufactured for each bomber.

Illustrating the extent to which salesmen are dependent upon automobiles, the Chicago Motor club reports that a recent survey disclosed that out of 800,000 salesmen, 507,000 traveled more than 300 miles a week, while 328,800 traveled in more than 25 cities. A total of 290,800 traveled outside their state of residence, and 263,840 covered territory where cities are more than 75 miles apart. Only 183,860 salesmen reported that they can use train or bus to cover their territory.

INADEQUACY OF REPAIR SERVICE BECOMING ACUTE

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 13.—Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, wrote me that he is concerned over the inadequacy of automobile maintenance and repair services as more mechanics are drafted and as irreplaceable cars become older.

Two government agencies here have taken steps to alleviate this condition. However, from reports thruout the country, garage and service station proprietors can be more effective than the burocrats in assuring adequate maintenance and repairs for private automobiles. They can hire and train women and draft ineligibles to replace mechanics needed by the army and navy to fight this mechanized war.

Schools for Mechanics.

The office of defense transportation has announced that it is sponsoring establishment of automobile maintenance advisory committees thruout the nation. They are to aid in conducting schools for new mechanics and to coöperate with local officials of the office of price administration in locating used parts and new parts for vehicles.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the selective service system, recently notified local boards that repair and hand trade services are essential to support the civilian economy and that certain occupations are grounds for deferment. Automotive body repairmen, automotive electricians and mechanics, tire retread moldmen, and foremen supervising repair services were placed in this category.

May Be Considered.

Men in these lines are not automatically exempted from military service, the selective service order pointed out, but persons in those categories can be considered by local boards for occupational deferment "to the extent and in such numbers as may be required to meet the minimum essential needs of the community."

The responsibility of calling the attention of the draft board to the essential nature of the work being done by a mechanic falls to the employer, who may file form 42A for automobile mechanics who are single with collateral dependents or for married men who have no other dependents. Form 42B is filed for those with wives and children.

VOICE OF TRAFFIC

GOOD POLICE WORK.

Chicago, March 7.—About three years ago you published a letter of mine complaining about the parking of private automobiles in the alleys between Clinton and Jefferson streets, from Madison street north. Monday morning, following the publication of this letter, a police squad cleared the alleys and they have remained so to this day, for which every driver is most grateful.

In the hope that similar improvements can be made, I would like to mention three places where police intervention can be most helpful:

Thirteenth street, between State and Wabash, long has been a bottle neck because of double parking in a narrow street.

At Racine avenue and Washington boulevard and at O'Brien and Halsted streets a fruit merchant is allowed to use half of the street, with cars parked on the opposite side, leaving a small lane for two-way traffic. Hoping you can find space for this— A. D. M.

DISCUSSES USE TAX.

Chicago, March 4.—What is being done about the federal use tax on automobiles? The law requires the purchase of a $5 stamp to cover the period from July 1, 1942, to June 30, 1943, yet many cars are on the streets without this stamp, even tho eight months have gone by.

Yesterday, at noon, I counted four out of the first 10 cars parked on Wacker drive, between State and Dearborn streets, that didn't have the stamp, and at my suburban railroad station each morning there are six to eight cars without it.

A CAR OWNER.

COMPLAINS ABOUT "KIDS."

Chicago, Feb. 28.—While proceeding east on 79th street, near Loomis boulevard, about 10 p. m., a car with six young "kids" [four boys and two girls] passed me up. I noticed that they were drinking beer out of a half gallon bottle. Apparently finishing the contents, they deliberately threw the bottle in the street. I narrowly missed running over it.

It seems to me that the parents of these young vandals could give them a long lecture on the serious rubber shortage plus the fact that we are in the war and defense workers must get to their jobs on the tires they have.

A RUBBER SAVER.

Plan 300 Homes in Southwest Area

WILL SERVE BIG DODGE-CHICAGO ENGINE PLANT

Use Priorities Taken Back by FHA.

[This is the third of a series of stories on recent new home construction for war workers in the neighborhood of Chicago's four big outlying war plant areas.]

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Priorities for 300 war homes have been allocated to builders for construction in the southwestern part of Chicago where the huge Dodge-Chicago plant is under construction, Edward J. Kelly, state director of federal housing administration, said yesterday.

They are part of 1,100 priorities allotted to builders last year which were never used and which have been recaptured by FHA and redistributed to concerns that can assure immediate construction.

Three hundred of the 1,100 recaptured priorities have been allotted to the Douglas area; 400 for war homes in the western area, and 100 will provide living quarters in the southeast area.

Kelly said that because many of the new homes have three bedrooms [the third convertible into a dining room] the 300 homes allocated to the Dodge-Chicago area will house about 750 workers. The entire 1,100 will accommodate an estimated 3,000 war workers, it was said.

New Homes for Chrysler Village.

The largest housing project near the Dodge plant is Chrysler Village, an 80 acre privately financed development bounded by 63d and 65th streets, and Long and Lavergne avenues, with an ultimate goal of 900 home units.

J. E. Merrion & Co., which is completing 100 row house units on both sides of Long avenue, between 63d and 65th streets in Chrysler Village has been granted priorites for 50 more. They will be built on both sides of Lorel avenue, between 64th and 65th streets and will include 11 duplex buildings containing 22 home units, and seven row houses each containing four units. Work will be started this week.

The Fred J. Walsh company also has been granted 50 priorities and will build on both sides of Lorel avenue, between 63d and 64th streets in Chrysler Village. The plans include 17 duplex buildings and four row houses of four units each. Both Merrion and Walsh have applied for more priorities to continue the building program.

Shekelton to Build 50 Units.

Shekelton & Co., which has built 270 home in the last few years in the area bounded by 51st street, Central, Archer, and Austin avenues, has been given priorities for 50 more in that area near the Studebaker plant. All will have three bedrooms and will be for rent. Work will be started in about two weeks.

E. C. Mahoney & Co., active home builder in western suburbs and now finishing 64 in Gary, will use priorities recently awarded him to build 40 row house rental units on 82d place, just east of Talman, and on 83d street, west of Talman. They will be built by the Modern Construction company, owned by Mahoney.

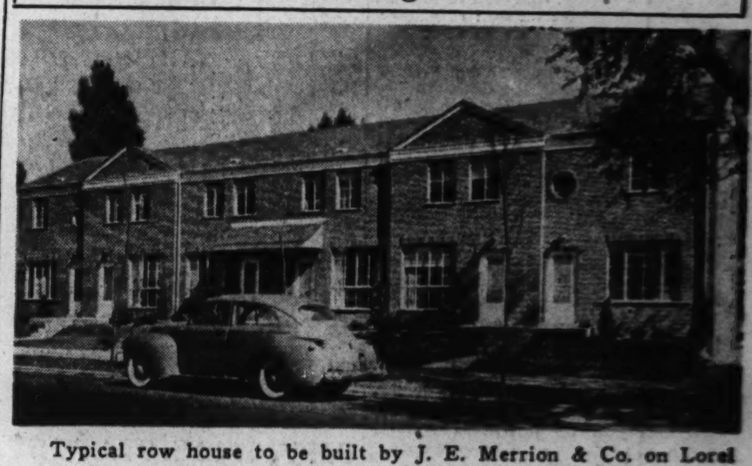
Plans 10 Homes on Kedzie.

Joseph O'Connor, head of the O'Connor Realty corporation, who has built 150 homes since 1939 in the area west of Beverly Hills, has been given priorities for 10 homes which he is building on the east side of Kedzie avenue, between 108th and 109th streets.

Priorities for 11 homes have been received by Fred H. Saul & Co. He will build on the east side of Menard avenue, north of 55th street.

Priorities for approximately 100 homes in this area also have been given in smaller allotments to other builders.

Residences for Dodge Plant Workers



Typical row house to be built by J. E. Merrion & Co. on Lorel avenue, between 64th and 65th streets, in Chrysler Village, an 80 acre development within walking distance of the Dodge-Chicago plant.

Chicago Area Home Building Makes Big Gain

With recaptured home building priorities put to actual use, residential construction in the Chicago metropolitan area during February increased 100 per cent in value and nearly that much in number of new living units above January. The monthly building survey by the Bell Savings and Loan association said last month's home permits totaled 192, valued at $800,623, compared with 101 in January, valued at $397,325.

The comparison of February's home building with the same month last year, however, showed a big decline in both number and value. In February, 1942 there were permits for 704 homes, valued at $3,852,803.

Build Homes in Eight Towns.

Eighty suburban communities reported that no permits for new homes were issued during February. Following are the eight towns where there was some residential building activity:

	Number.	Value.
Melrose Park	48	$192,000
Broadview	38	171,100
Lansing	21	105,350
Hammond	10	48,000
Franklin Park	9	45,500
Park Ridge	6	36,200
Gary	8	26,690
East Chicago	1	2,000
Total	141	$626,840

Suburban Activity Increases.

Suburban home building last month was more than double that of January when only 62 permits for homes valued at $300,550 were issued in nine communities.

All types of building in the metropolitan area last month totaled $5,968,677. This compared with $8,521,039 in January, and $5,393,344 in February, 1942.

MacARTHUR—A YEAR IN AUSTRALIA

GEN. DOUGLAS MacARTHUR this week marks the first anniversary of his arrival in Australia from the blood-stained battlefields of Bataan. He doubtless will spend the day at his desk or in the field, but if he pauses to recast the events of the last 12 months he will find the picture in the southwest Pacific greatly changed from the hectic day when a Flying Fortress put him down on an airdrome in the bleak desert of northern Australia.

Australia then was a nation filled with alarm and despondency, with the Jap hordes leaping unchecked from island to island toward her frontiers. Now this British dominion, altho still threatened by the enemy, greets the future with a new confidence sprung from the quietly capable leadership of the hero of Bataan.

The general has seen the confused military situation in Australia slowly untangle itself into a smoothly working military machine staffed by his own officers brought from the Philippines and Australian veterans from the middle east, Greece, Crete, and Malaya. He has seen the Japs invade Papua, and he has seen his troops drive them back into the sea.

General MacArthur's first 12 months as supreme commander in Australia have not been marked by any smashing, large-scale victories. The enemy's war machine is still a formidable force to be reckoned with. But all during the year MacArthur and his men have faced only one way—forward.

In attempting to drive the Japs out of the southwest Pacific the general has made full use of many of the latest methods of warfare.

It was he who took the first American air-borne troops into a combat area, and it was he who first supplied an infantry operation almost entirely by aircraft. Both took place in the victorious Buna campaign.

General MacArthur, who has a knack of surrounding himself with able staff officers, owes much to Lt. Gen. George Kenney, a hard-hitting, straight-talking Irishman who, like MacArthur, believes that the way to fight a war is to fight it.

Without a navy, or even ships in which to transport his troops, MacArthur made fullest use of the air. In doing it he put the Australian air lines out of business for a time by commandeering all their planes for military service.

Over the 13,500-foot Owen Stanley range MacArthur and Kenney carried troops, supplies, artillery, ammunition, and everything else that was needed to sustain the campaign. There weren't enough aircraft; often the troops were short of food or munitions, but the operation went on. When it was over MacArthur was convinced that the large-scale use of aircraft and ground troops, working in closest coöperation, was the answer to the problem of how to roll the Japs back to Tokio.

MacArthur, at 63 a tall, immaculate military figure, is a hard worker. He arises at 7:30 every morning and after breakfast reads over reports brought to him by his staff. He usually gets to the office around 10, passing thru the small knot of people who gather daily to watch him enter his office building somewhere in Australia. Sentries spring to attention and throw him a snappy salute.

Navy Pier—Specialists' School

By WALTER SIMMONS

THIS IS the story of Navy pier—a place that takes plain bluejackets and marines and turns them into specialists for a great and growing fleet.

Not so long ago the pier was a place where family parties with lunch baskets disembarked from the Grand avenue cars. Penny arcades, merry-go-rounds, grand opera, art exhibits, jive orchestras, national trade conventions—all these perched on its 3,000 foot spine at one time or another.

Built in 1916 to halt the decline of Chicago's water borne commerce, the pier remained for years one of the most popular recreation centers on the lake front. In summer its natural air conditioning brought relief from the heat to thousands.

But the war emergency changed all that. Long before Pearl Harbor the navy department, represented by Rear Adm. John Downes, commandant of the 9th naval district, working in coöperation with Mayor Kelly and the city of Chicago, arranged a lease so the navy could gradually acquire space on Navy pier according to its needs.

At first only the upper level of the pier was used, but shortly after Pearl Harbor the entire pier came under navy control.

The ship's company (operating personnel) was housed in the former open air arcade. The lower deck — once warehouse space—became a labyrinth of classrooms and maintenance shops. The upper deck was sectioned off by bulkheads (walls) and both sides were made into quarters for men. The west headhouse, where steamship companies, the harbormaster and customs collectors had their offices, became the navy's administrative center. Chief petty officers were quartered where concession stands were located. A block long mess hall, hangar, and 500 foot drill hall were built. The auditorium, which seats 2,700, was left unchanged.

These changes made, Navy pier became one of six large aviation specialists' schools under the jurisdiction of Rear Adm. A. C. Read, chief of the naval air technical training command. Adm. Read has his headquarters in Chicago.

The average bluejacket or marine who comes to Navy pier is 21 or 22 years old. He has attended high school. Perhaps he was a plumber's or welder's apprentice, or he was a boy who liked to be around filling stations and garages in his spare time. If he came from a farm he enjoyed tinkering with tractors or other equipment.

The navy detected his mechanical bent by aptitude tests which all recruits receive during their "boot" training. Thousands like him are learning at Navy pier to be aviation machinist's mates, aviation metalsmiths and Diesel engine operators. Every week hundreds of new men arrive. Every week several hundred freshly trained specialists are dispatched to the fleet. The enrollment of the school is not announced, but before the war it was projected as 10,000.

"Aviation machinist's mate" is a hazy generality to the public. We may well follow one of these men thru the months of training which turns him into a petty officer. The story of Navy pier, after all, is not in the pier itself, nor in the great school it houses. The story is in the men—the raw material it takes—and what it does to them.

Elmer Johnson (as good a name as any) came to the Great Lakes Naval Training station from a little town in southern Illinois. After several weeks of "boot" training he was selected on the basis of intelligence and mechanical aptitude to receive further training at Navy pier.

There he found life about the same—reveille at 6 a. m., breakfast at 6:30, cleanup of quarters at 7, colors and mustering in at 8, school call at 8:15. In the morning he worked four hours in the shop, then took on noon chow. At 1345 (1:45) he went to classes which related to his shop work of the morning. Lectures, recitations and demonstrations continued two hours. There was an indoctrination period in which he learned how to be a good petty officer. Company hour followed. This might bring a number of things—drill, physical education, gunnery, and ordnance, signaling. At 1730 (5:30) came supper. At sunset he stood, wherever he was, and faced in the direction of the lowering colors. The evening usually brought some kind of entertainment. Taps sounded at 2100 (9 o'clock) unless the evening's movie ran past that hour.

In the early stages of his new training Elmer and his classmates studied simple mathematics—merely a review for many of them—and mechanical drawing as applied to blueprint reading. They learned to make layouts and they talked of tolerances.

This was the beginning of the basic course, which is also given to aviation metalsmiths. In the final week of this course the men were introduced to the bench and vise, and a few simple hand tools — combination square, hacksaw, hammer, dividers, scriber, punches, cold chisel, various kinds of files. They also used more complex tools, such as airplane snips, riveting hammers, bucking bars, taps and dies, screw extractors, and pneumatic riveting guns.

Elmer tried his hand by making a slotted anchor plate with a tolerance of 1/32 of an inch. Next he made a hinged fitting within 1/64 of an inch of accuracy. He learned how to extract broken studs and how to rivet a patch on an airplane's tough aluminum hide.

The aviation machinist's mates and metalsmiths parted company after this. Elmer went into a week's intensive study of aircraft controls.

Observing the mockup of a tail section with controls exposed, he learned how it operated, how minor repairs could be made, how cables were spliced. Then he began a study classified as "structures"—the framework of a plane, its assembly and its tearing down.

The next phase took over the study of fabrics, and Elmer learned how to sew a fine seam (8 to 10 stitches an inch, baseball style usually) in repairing holes. He learned there were rips like a "T," like an "L," and like an "X," to say nothing of round holes like a dot. He was soon able to cover a wing section by the envelope (slip on) or the blanket (sew on) method. He "doped" fabrics and he sprayed them. He thrilled when he painted the air force's blue and white insignia on the side of a plane.

He was introduced to hydraulics—a difficult subject—during a study of landing gear. Wheels, braking systems, and tires, their ailments and how to cure them, made up this course.

Elmer was absorbing new knowledge at a prodigious rate when he started the course on propellers. He found there were variable pitch types — ground adjustable, hydraulically controled and the new Curtiss electrically controled variety. He was impressed with the importance of smoothing out nicks and scratches, lest they catch the air and eventually cause the propeller to fail in flight. Virtually all propellers are now made of metal, and when damaged they are scrapped at once to guard against a poor repair which might cause vibration.

Hydraulics, a subject the navy would like to spend more time on, occupied Elmer next. He studied the powerful, reliable forces which operate an airplane's hydraulic struts, the retractile landing gear and wings.

Then, like college courses, came Structures 2 and Structures 3. In these two courses youngsters must learn how to disassemble a plane till only the skeleton remains, then rebuild it. This knowledge is not required under actual combat conditions, but is necessary in the case of men assigned to certain bases. Patching and replacement of parts theoretically shot away is also learned.

At this point, almost half way thru his many weeks of study, Elmer had time to catch his breath. Altho he had been working hard, good food and exercise made him fitter than ever before. The galley, expertly managed (sample menu—cream of tomato soup, fillet of mackerel, boiled potatoes, buttered lima beans, bread and butter, apple cobbler, coffee) had done its part. (The galley uses 7,500 pounds of meat at a meal, 9,000 pounds of potatoes, 1,400 pounds of butter. And every day it serves 4,500 pounds of bread, 1,700 gallons of milk, 1,500 pounds of onions—among other things.)

But the physical education program was responsible for whipping Elmer's newly augmented poundage into shape. This program was created by Maj. Richard E. Hanley of the marine corps, former football coach at Northwestern, and Lt. Jim McMillen, former All-American guard. Daily it packed the pier's drill hall, 500 feet long and 100 feet wide, with thousands of students going thru conditioning exercises. Boxing and tumbling led to football, then to judo. Then came a course in general mayhem—logging camp techniques.

The evenings brought welcome relaxation from the duties of the day. Often there were motion pictures, but sometimes it was boxing or a hotel or night club show, brought from coöperative Chicago. On Thursday nights from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, civilian time, there was (and is) the pier's own radio show, broadcast from the pier by W-G-N and starring the 22 piece swing orchestra directed by Lt. (j. g.) Orrin Tucker, in addition to his military duties, and the 40 voice glee club, made up of bluejackets and marines. The show revolved around a typical sailor, known only as Mac.

In the afternoons there was frequently a session of skeet shooting, seemingly an unrelated sport. But aviation machinist's mates must know how to shoot when they go along on the big bombers. They learn as a detail of their studies that the principle of "leading" a clay pigeon (shooting ahead of it) is the same as that involved in shooting at an enemy plane.

• • •

The next session of study was devoted to top overhaul—meaning the partial disassembly (as distinguished from major overhaul) of an engine. Cylinders, pistons, valves, piston rings, and pins were removed, checked, and replaced. Valves were ground and parts replaced where necessary.

After this Elmer and his mates were brought in contact with airplane instruments. Tho actual repair of these devices is left to more skilful hands, he

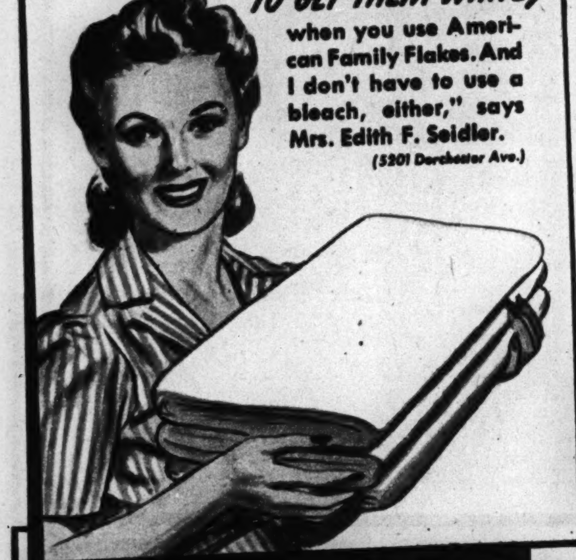
Amazing New Survey Reveals
American Family Flakes Preferred 3 to 1
Over All Chips, Powders, and Granulated Soaps

READ WHY BELOW:



"NO NEED TO RUB LIFE OUT OF CLOTHES TO GET THEM WHITE, when you use American Family Flakes. And I don't have to use a bleach, either," says Mrs. Edith F. Seidler. (5201 Dorchester Ave.)

"MY COLORED THINGS LOOK BRIGHT MUCH LONGER, since I stopped using strong granulated soaps and turned to American Family Flakes," writes Mrs. Elizabeth Kaufer. (4919 Wabansia Ave.)

"MY CLOTHES ARE IN THE WASHER LESS TIME, and seem to last much longer since I gave up less efficient soaps," says Mrs. Eleanor M. Stewart. (1112 Hinman Ave., Evanston)

NO OTHER SOAP CAN MAKE THIS CLAIM

Right here in Chicago, women actually voted American Family Flakes their favorite 3 to 1 over all chips, powders and granulated soaps! Here are three of the reasons why: First, American Family Flakes' rich, hard-working suds get clothes sparkling white without ruinous rubbing, or harmful bleaching. Second, colored washables stay bright and gay much longer than when strong, granulated soaps are used. Third, 'washer-wear' is cut amazingly because clothes are in the washing machine less time than when less efficient soaps are used. That's why clothes last longer the American Family Flakes way. So, every washday use American Family Flakes and give your clothes the wartime protection this great soap affords.

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

ONCE EVERY six months at least some critic makes grudging announcement that "Hollywood has grown up." Usually it's a sort of back-handed slap for an unusually intelligent picture.

As a writer I've always considered a statement of this kind dangerous. Just when one goes on record with full acknowledgment of the town's adult state the play boys and girls start running riot on the front pages again, or another producer gives out with a couple of paragraphs that wouldn't win space in McGuffey's Reader, and bang, we're back in the adolescent age!

Take the current attitude of most studios on this year's new crop of leading men. The "hushed mouth" policy on these newcomers being moved up into the front ranks to replace the headliners who have donned khaki or blue is as immature a piece of thinking as you'll find anywhere outside an incubator.

Recently Magazine Writer Kyle Crichton wrote about the alarming number of male stars trading in grease paint for gunpowder. "Hollywood Gets Its Teeth Kicked In," said Mr. Crichton—but it was the feminine film public who said "Ouch!"

Another piece should be written—but it probably won't be—titled "Hollywood Comes Up Fighting." It would have to give facts about the new heart-throbs who are being feverishly signed to save us from a maleless screen. Hollywood, generally speaking, isn't ready to give out this information. We're too busy playing ostrich again.

Columbia studio has a trio of new leading men—handsome, stalwart fellows signed for their talent, personality, and other qualifications for screen success. They were also signed because each, altho of draft age, has a legal and moral right to be out of uniform. At least Columbia is willing that the public know all the facts about them.

The President has said that the Clark Gables, Bing Crosbys, Tyrone Powerses, and Bob Hopes are more valuable to their country's treasury and morale than they are to its fighting ranks. Yet, while ruling motion pictures an essential industry, the man power commission has failed to dignify actors with an "essential man" rating. While this condition exists the list of actors forced out of spots they are most qualified to fill by a fear that the public might call them "slacker" will grow apace.

There are dozens of examples. Take John Payne, who enlisted right after returning from an entertainment tour of the marine camps. A studio aid who went with him told me he's sure this actor will never sweat facing the guns as he did standing on a platform before those fellows in uniform.

Mickey Rooney's taking lots of criticism for failing to do his bit on camp entertainment and canteen service. Truth is, Metro's box office king is scared stiff of a hiss or a hoot from the audience. There's no denying that Mickey can spray the whole country with heart-bolstering laughs much quicker than he could turn a machine gun on a Jap or German, but he's scared to take the chance. He needn't be. I've talked to hundreds of men at the Hollywood canteen, and they all say, "We just work like hell and live for the few days' leave and this wonderful free entertainment given us here." They all say: "Please try to keep the rest of the stars here. We need them."

There's a case in point at every studio, but on almost every lot newcomers are being moved up to face defenselessly the barrage of public opinion that even the established favorites have found themselves unable to take. Why? Because, harking back to illusions dead as the dodo, the movie makers have decided, "We don't want the public to think we're handing 'em a lot of 4F romance!"

BILL CARTER

A major lot recently signed a promising youngster, not only because he was handsome but because he had asthma. He was rushed into a picture, given a publicity buildup. After a month of it he called a studio executive.

"I notice you're not printing anything about why the army rejected me," he said. "Today a fellow asked me how come I'm just starting in pictures when I ought to be just starting in in service. Give me a break, will you? Tell 'em I've got asthma, please."

"It's a subject we'd rather not discuss," the executive said.

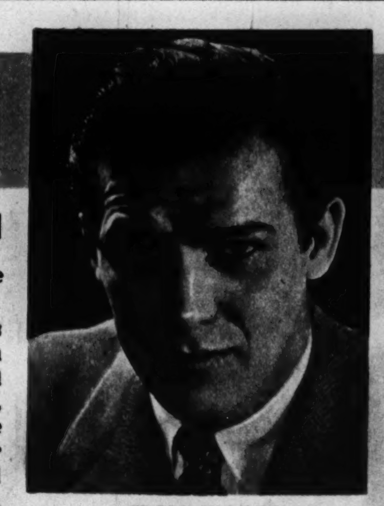
"You can't expect women to fall for a guy with a broken ankle," is the way another studio explained it. "As far as these fellows are concerned, we'll just have to forget there is a war!"

Jess Barker, at Columbia, is a hot bet. He's an importation from Broadway, has worked with Lenore Ulric, Ina Claire, and Tallulah Bankhead. The fact that he began his career with a two-year romantic lead in "You Can't Take It with You" was far from prophetic. Jess has brought "it" right along to town. He's blond, blue-eyed, with a baritone manner that has every femme on the lot doing nip-ups and is certain to cause palpitations among the public.

• • •

Jess is 24, unmarried, and has three brothers who are sergeants. Some time ago, without invitation, he presented himself to both army and naval authorities. The recruiting officers took a look at his six feet and yelled, "Eureka!" The medical boards took a closer look at a knee injury he's carried since a child and said, "Sorry!"

The Barker lad's acting has charm and character. He's got the lead opposite Claire Trevor in "Right Guy."



CRAIG WOODS

Then there is Bill Carter, six feet two, dark hair, blue eyes, white teeth flashing in a well weathered tan. The Carter family is well known on England's stage, and young Bill is married to Nancy Deere Wiman. His muscular build got featured in Billy Rose's Aquacade. He had his own swimming shows on the road and in Mexico.

In filling out his questionnaire Bill made two brief statements. To "What do you dislike most?" he answered, "Marmalade." To "Did you ever have a lucky break?" his reply was, "Yes—getting back from Tobruk alive."

Carter was among the first American volunteers to go to Africa for battle duty. Following the fall of Tobruk he was listed as killed. In reality he and Christopher Morley Jr. escaped by hiding under the waters of the Mediterranean. After an almost impossible swim they wandered foodless for days until they stumbled on a cache of tins. Every tin was filled with marmalade!

Bill's invisible wounds included broken ribs and bayonet stabs in the neck, sufficiently serious to earn a discharge and several recent rejections from other branches of service. He's a sure bet for screen romance, and the public will know why he can't be fighting.

ROBERT RYAN

RKO has Robert Ryan, who was brought out by Pare Lorentz for "Name, Age and Occupation," the picture that was shelved when half finished. Ryan gets his first break in "Bombardier," in which he plays a flying officer—and that's an ironic touch, because he tried to enlist in the air corps and was turned down on account of a heart ailment. He's tall, handsome, and husky looking. Is now playing a Flying Tiger in "The Sky's the Limit," with Fred Astaire.

• • •

Craig Woods will soon be seen in "Destroyer," with Edward G. Robinson and Glenn Ford. Young Woods is as masculine as a sock in the jaw. The talent scouts found him dejectedly dealing out gas at a service station on the Sunset Strip. The dejection was due to a recent honorable discharge from the army air corps. A born flyer, Craig took the count because of a mysterious allergy the best army doctors couldn't seem to locate.

There's another dispenser of gasoline up on the Strip who should have a job in pictures. He has personality plus, and in a day when every service station is understaffed (gone forever are the days when handsome college men ran your errands, wiped your windshield, did everything but run ribbon thru your fresh laundry displayed on the seat beside you!) he asks you to bear with him if you have to wait a few minutes longer. I must try and get him a screen test.

The current scheme of blandly announcing, "Here are our new heroes," and then ducking while the newcomers await the grapefruit, just isn't going to work out. Not when every new actor represents an investment that isn't going to pay off at the box office unless the public can accept him whole-heartedly and without reservation.

Consider the remark of a midwestern newspaper woman anent last year's Victory Caravan, with such perennial favorites as Pat O'Brien, Bing Crosby, and Charles Boyer, who insisted on looking their age.

"There," she said, "is the greatest collection of hairless Hollywoodians ever to brave the spotlight!"

There has been no noticeable falling off in the box office of any of these males who chose to sacrific their toupees to their country's good will. Why not give our newcomers the same chance to hold their chins up?

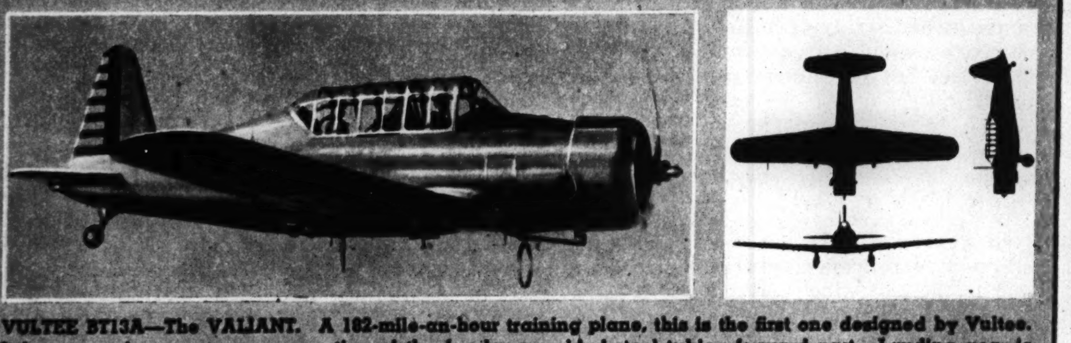
Fighting Planes of the Army and Navy

DOUGLAS A20—The BOSTON. This three-seat day bomber has a top speed of about 320 miles an hour at its ideal operating altitude. The British use it as an intruder fighter, and also have a two-place version called the Havoc.



VULTEE BT13A—The VALIANT. A 182-mile-an-hour training plane, this is the first one designed by Vultee. It has a semi-monocoque rear section of the fuselage, welded steel tubing forward part. Landing gear is fixed, tanks in wing center section.

CURTISS O52—The OWL. An all-metal standard army observation plane, the Owl has slots and flaps to enable it to operate from small fields. Its landing gear retracts manually. Now used for reconnaissance, too, it is similar to an old navy fighter.

PASTRY is TASTY!

By MARY MEADE

MORE OF US are making our own rolls and breads these days. Refrigerator doughs are a wonderful convenience, because we can make three or four batches of biscuits from one kneading of dough. Refrigerator doughs require more sugar and shortening than mixtures which aren't to be chilled, but even so aren't extravagant with sweetening and fat.

These are "everlasting" biscuits, made from a refrigerator yeast dough, which will also make coffee cake.

EVERLASTING BISCUITS
(Refrigerator dough)

2 cups scalded milk or milk and potato water
½ cup fat
½ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon soda
2 tablespoons lukewarm water
1 cake yeast
1 cup riced cooked potatoes
Flour (about 6 cups)

Add fat, sugar, and salt to scalded milk and cool to lukewarm. Add soda. Soften yeast in lukewarm water and add with freshly riced potatoes to milk. Add two cups of flour and beat until smooth. Let rise until light, then stir down and add enough more flour to make a stiff dough. Knead on a lightly floured board until smooth. Round up and place, in a greased bowl with a tight cover, in the refrigerator. When ready for use remove as much of the mixture as you wish and keep the remainder tightly covered. Shape into biscuits, place in greased pans, and let rise until bulk has doubled. Bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, until browned, 15 to 20 minutes.

This kind of dough also can be used to make coffee cake, cinnamon rolls, and other similar treats.

Now and then we like to go extravagant and make a pie—lemon custard pie in a corn flake pastry crust, we'll say. This pie won't take any rationed products except sugar, so perhaps it's not so extravagant after all. If you make up a big enough batch of pastry mix you'll have it handy any time you feel in a pie-making mood.

CORN FLAKE PASTRY MIX

4 cups corn flakes
7 cups sifted flour
1 tablespoon salt
2 cups lard or other solid fat

Crush corn flakes into fine crumbs. Mix well with flour and salt. Cut in shortening with pastry blender until mixture looks like cornmeal. Store in closely covered container in refrigerator. For one pastry shell use 1¼ cups pastry mix and about 3 tablespoons cold water. Sprinkle water over mix, blend, and roll dough ⅛ inch thick. Line pie plate and bake shell at 425-450 degrees about 15 minutes. Cool and add filling.

LEMON CUSTARD FILLING

1 cup milk
¾ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
4 tablespoons cornstarch
½ cup water
3 eggs, separated
1 tablespoon butter
6 tablespoons lemon juice
6 tablespoons sugar for meringue

Bring milk, sugar, salt, and lemon rind to boil over direct heat. Dissolve cornstarch in cold water and add. Cook in the top of a double boiler for 10 to 15 minutes, stirring constantly. Beat egg yolks until light. Remove cooked mixture from heat and add egg yolks, stirring rapidly. Add butter and lemon juice. Cool and pour into pie shell. Top with meringue made by folding the 6 tablespoons sugar into the stiffly beaten egg whites. Brown in a 300 degree oven for 15 minutes.

How to make your folks like liver

It's all a matter of knowin' how to fix it. An' that sure is good news, isn't it?

For liver's something you want to serve at least once a week. It supplies lots of vitamins an' iron for good red blood, besides. An' you don't have to buy expensive calf's liver. Beef, lamb or pork liver is real tasty an' appetizin' cooked like this. An' remember, foods fried the Spry way are so digestible a child can eat 'em.

Fried Liver Patties

1 lb. liver (beef, lamb or pork)
½ cup onion, chopped
½ cup fine crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons milk
1 egg, slightly beaten
3 tablespoons Spry

Remove membrane from liver and grind coarsely. Mix ground liver with onions, crumbs (cracker or bread), salt, pepper, milk and egg. Melt Spry in skillet until hot. There's no unpleasant smoke or smell when you fry with purer all-vegetable Spry shortening. Drop liver mixture by tablespoons into skillet. Fry until nicely browned on both sides (about 2 minutes). Let Spry cool and strain into a can. You can use it over and over again for frying. It's very economical. Recipe makes 18 patties.

"Cavalleria Rusticana"

The opera "Cavalleria Rusticana" will be presented Saturday, March 20, from 8 to 9 p. m. (C. W. T.) on W-G-N and Mutual's Chicago Theater of the Air, starring Marion Claire, soprano prima donna of the series.

IN 1889 AN Italian musical publisher named Sonzogno offered a prize to the composer who would write the best one-act opera. This proved to be the break that turned a little-known Milan music teacher into one of the best-known and most successful composers of his time.

The composer was Pietro Mascagni, and the winning one-act opera was "Cavalleria Rusticana," which created a furor when it was first introdûced at the Costanzi theater in Rome on May 17, 1890, and has continued popular.

Mascagni was born in Leghorn, Italy, in 1863. He received most of his musical training at the Milan Conservatory of Music. At the time he heard of Publisher Sonzogno's opera contest Mascagni was teaching music and conducting the town orchestra at Cerignola.

Success came overnight at the presentation of the opera. Neither this work nor any of its several successors commanded critical commendation, but "Cavalleria Rusticana" gave the composer a firm hold upon Italian popular interest. Mascagni's success served to stimulate the production by others of numerous brief, exciting, and "veristic" dramas.

In recognition of the success of "Cavalleria Rusticana" Mascagni received the order of the crown and was invited to make numerous tours as guest conductor of various civic orchestras. In 1902 he made an ill-starred tour of America, and in 1911 he visited South America with better success.

One of the general's first duties is to approve the daily press communique. He receives the "sitrep" (situation report) from land force headquarters, under command of the Australian Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, a draft of the proposed communique from his own G2, or military intelligence, and another from his chief press relations officer, Col. Le Grande Diller, who came out of the Philippines with him.

Usually he approves Diller's draft, but announcements of special importance he writes himself. They are always recognizable for their somewhat lurid, melodramatic style. He writes them in longhand on any piece of paper that is handy.

MacArthur works in a large office that gives him plenty of room to pace up and down as he mulls over the problems of the day. When visitors come he moves out from behind his neat flat-topped desk beneath the picture of George Washington and sits down in a leather-upholstered, overstuffed chair. The visitors sit on a leather divan.

The general usually opens a conversation by offering his visitors a cigaret from a box on a small table, smoking one himself in a long black holder. Sometimes he prefers a cigar.

He goes home about 2:30, returns two hours later, and works until 7. Often he comes back later in the evening and works until midnight.

The general has not sought publicity in Australia. On the contrary, he has tried to keep out of the limelight. He has opened no bridges, kissed no babies, and laid no cornerstones. The Australians were so relieved when he came that they built him up as a superman—a circumstance not entirely to his liking. He knew that the higher a public figure is built the farther he may fall.

MacArthur is still a hero to the Aussie, even tho the allied nations' global strategy appears to have relegated the southwest Pacific to the rôle of the stepchild in this war. He has never had enough troops, aircraft, or ships to demonstrate what he could do, but he has not failed with what he has had. He has turned in victories at Milne bay, at Goodenough Island, on the Buna-Gona front. MacArthur has gone forward.

The general has adopted a philosophical attitude toward the global strategy that has made Australia an also-ran in the war picture. His associates say he feels his forces should be stronger, but he is first and last a soldier, and if his superiors ordered him to attack Rabaul armed only with water pistols he'd try to do it.

Mrs. MacArthur and her son, Arthur, in Australia.

The general has not forgotten the Philippines. "I shall return," he says grimly.

No interviews have been given to the press by the southwest Pacific commander. He has had two off-the-record press conferences and has seen a few correspondents privately, but not for quotation. He keeps out of Australian politics, and neither he nor his wife participate in the social life of the country. Unable to accept even a small percentage of the proffered invitations, Mrs. MacArthur has solved the problem of not hurting anybody's feelings by using the legitimate excuse that the war demands all of her husband's attention and she would not be able to accept without him.

Aside from the war, MacArthur seems to be interested chiefly in his wife and his 5-year-old son, Arthur. The boy is cared for by his Chinese amah (nurse), Ah Chiu, who speaks only pidgin English, but the general and his son frequently are seen walking or motoring together and are very devoted to each other.

If MacArthur feels that his talents are being wasted on a secondary front he gives no sign of it. He is, as his troops say, "sweating it out" in Australia, just as they are sweating it out, hoping for the day when they'll be able to roll the Japs back where they came from.

THE AUTHOR

E. R. Noderer

THE author of this story, E. R. Noderer, returned to America after covering the jungle campaign in New Guinea which led to the capture of Buna and Gona. His dispatches from the field, and later from the headquarters of General MacArthur in Australia, have appeared in The Tribune.

Noderer left Chicago on May 6, 1941. Since that time he has visited Hawaii, New Zealand, Australia, Java, Singapore, Burma, India, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Turkey, Iraq, and Iran (Persia). He was in Malaya soon after the Japs invaded it, and followed thru the Malayan, Singapore, and Java campaigns.

He was born in Elyria, O., Dec. 15, 1907, went to Pennsylvania State college, and after a period of work on Pennsylvania newspapers joined the staff of the Paris edition of the New York Herald-Tribune in 1938. In 1939 he became a member of The Chicago Tribune's London staff, later serving in its Berlin office.

DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

This is another in a series of biographical sketches of America's historical celebrities appearing every week in the Graphic Section. The illustrations are taken from a famous work, "The National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans," published in 1865.

ANTHONY WAYNE, famous military leader, was born Jan. 1, 1745, at Waynesboro, Pa., and at the age of 16 enrolled as a student at a private academy in Philadelphia, where he became sufficiently grounded in mathematics to qualify as a surveyor.

At the age of 20, in the employ of a land company, he supervised the surveying of 100,000 acres in Nova Scotia. Returning to Pennsylvania, he went to live on his family's estate, which he inherited in 1774 on the death of his father.

Early in January, 1776, he was appointed by congress to the command of a regiment raised in Chester county, Pennsylvania. The following spring he was sent with Gen. William Thompson's Pennsylvania brigade to strengthen the American expedition in Canada. At Three Rivers Wayne's regiment engaged the main force of the British army operating in that area and later covered the retreat of the Americans to Ticonderoga. At the conclusion of this campaign he was put in command at Ticonderoga.

In February, 1777, he was elevated to brigadier general, and in the following April he joined Washington's army at Morristown, N. J., and took command of the Pennsylvania troops there. He had a conspicuous part at the battle of Brandywine (Sept. 11, 1777), but was forced to retreat when his command was flanked by the enemy. Nine days later he was defeated at the battle of Paoli. Accused of negligence in this engagement, he demanded a court martial and was tried and acquitted.

At the battle of Germantown (Oct. 4, 1777) he led a spirited attack that almost but not quite brought victory to the Americans. Wintering with Washington and his army at Valley Forge, he was in the field early the next spring and led the advance at the battle of Monmouth (June 28, 1778).

When the continental army was reorganized late in 1778 he was transferred to the command of a separate corps of light infantry, and it was with this corps that he surprised and captured Stony Point on the Hudson river on July 16, 1779. This perhaps was the most spectacular exploit of his career. As a reward congress ordered a medal struck and presented to him.

It was Wayne's prompt movement with a force of men in 1780 which prevented the British from seizing West Point after Benedict Arnold had attempted to turn this stronghold over to them. In the mutiny of certain Pennsylvania troops it was Wayne who interceded and obtained redress for them thru congress. At Spring Valley, Va., on July 6, 1781, Wayne with only 800 troops attacked a British force of about 5,000 and was able to withdraw without suffering heavy casualties. After the surrender at Yorktown he served under Gen. Nathanael Greene and was sent into Georgia, where he defeated hostile Indians and brought them to peace terms. In 1783 he retired from active service as brevet major general.

For nine years thereafter Wayne engaged in civil pursuits, serving in this period in the Pennsylvania general assembly and in the convention held in that state to ratify the federal Constitution. In 1791, after having been presented with a large plantation in Georgia, he was elected to congress as a representative from Georgia. He had served little more than a year when, on March 21, 1792, his seat was declared vacant because of irregularities in the election and a question as to his residence qualifications.

Called back into military service by President Washington to subdue the warring Indian tribes of the Maumee and Wabash valleys, Wayne defeated the aborigines at the battle of Fallen Timbers, fought near the present site of Toledo, O., on Aug. 20, 1794. This led to the complete submission of the Indians and the signing of the treaty of Greenville, Ohio, in August, 1795.

Reluctant Boom Town in Pacific

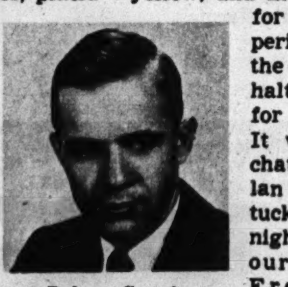
By ROBERT CROMIE

Somewhere in the Pacific.

PERHAPS the best way to describe this picture postcard port is as a reluctant boom town. There are more people crowded within its narrow limits than ever in history, new buildings are going up on all sides—many literally overnight—and there are traffic jams along the tree-shaded roads at least faintly reminiscent of Skokie highway on a Sunday afternoon.

True, the cruise ships that used to make this a port of call are now traveling without fanfare on grimmer errands, their shining paint hidden under protective gray. But in their place sleek warships put in, and other craft bring their cargoes to add to the bustle and hurry of the docks. And the tiny railroad, its rusty track long unaccustomed to the click of wheels, is enjoying a war time revival.

Despite the increased tempo, however, the pre-war residents still pedal their bicycles, placidly yielding right of way to the ubiquitous peeps, or chug along in their right-hand-drive cars. Altho there are hundreds of enlisted men who spend money with an abandon that would alarm a forty-niner, there has been no attempt to modernize the stores, and the afternoon siesta is as immutable as the tides that whisper along the smooth white beaches.



Robert Cromie

The shopkeepers complain about having nothing to sell and hint darkly of eventual ruin, but with postcards of French movie stars selling for 15 cents each, photographic folders that would cost a dime at Woolworth's for 65 cents each, and ice cream at 25 cents a dish (and mostly water at that), the dough keeps rolling in.

Small establishments specializing in soft drinks, sandwiches, or the French version of ice cream have mushroomed all over the place. Typical is one at the main corner called Jus de Fruit du Soldats, which does a land office business in lemonade, French cookies, and such quaint items as asparagus sandwiches.

These shops for the most part don't close for an hour or so each afternoon, as everything else does. At first their blankly shuttered windows annoy you mightily when you want to buy something during this rest period. But after while the lotus gets you. You're content to laze along the sidewalk past little Tonkinese and Javanese women with curious pyramidal hats, wrap-around skirts or slacks, some carrying large baskets balanced on their heads, erect as ramrods as they walk along, others with infants suspended at the hip in a sort of bandana sling.

Among the passersby, too, are uniformed French soldiers or sailors—the latter with red-topped berets; dusky colonial troops, or fighting men from Australia, New Zealand, or the United States, often with a bit of local talent or a nurse in tow.

French textbooks or phrasebooks are popular with the visiting Americans, while the French are learning English with charming results. Even the older officers—whose primary aim is educational and not romantic—are studying French in earnest. One navy officer, when not censoring press copy, studies irregular verbs from a homemade list pasted on the wall beside his desk.

The townsfolk and the lads from the United States get along excellently together, and the only part of the town that's out of bounds is the Tonkinese section—a tenement district behind the mills—where a couple of soldiers got into trouble one night with some suspicious husbands.

The Tonkinese New Year, involving a three-day celebration, ended a couple of evenings ago. Newsmen, after brief explanations to the military police, attended for a while, watching a Tonkinese drama and gambling games of several sorts, one apparently a sort of Chinese bingo, the other resembling dice.

Until a day or so ago (the military police seem to have stepped in) American crap games were a commonplace in the huge town park, each game drawing dozens of crapshooters and stacks of folding money. Other daytime recreational opportunities include several officers' clubs, the Red Cross canteen and reading room, swimming, or (for the enlisted men) tracking down illegal supplies of liquor or visiting places where more personal items are sold.

At night there are French movies and many open-air American movies, at which the audiences sit on hillsides under the stars.

The French cinema is worth attending even if you know no French, just to watch the cosmopolitan audience—white, black, yellow, and indeterminate—and for the unusual experience of having the feature suddenly halt in the middle for an intermission. It was there, while chatting with a Harlan county (Kentucky) marine one night and confessing our ignorance of French, that we were advised to "get one of them books and go courtin'."

There are no street cars or buses in town, and while it's possible to rent a car—with luck—the best mode of travel is thumbing one's way. Housing, too, is a problem, with apartments unobtainable and the several hotels either nothing you'd care to sleep in or taken over by the military.

• • •

The one where we're currently staying (five correspondents) falls into the latter category. Once without doubt an attractive spot—with a fountain bubbling happily in the courtyard, Hollywood style balconies, and a wall around it—this particular hostelry now has three or four guests to a room, two sittings for the dining room (many of whose dishes—as Sergt. Eddie Buttlar of Dedham, Mass., the steward, ruefully admits—are made in Japan), and mosquitoes so ravenous that they travel in packs like wolves.

Luckily no one has yet thought to tear down guestroom notices posted during quieter days, which bear such strictures as:

"Telephone is free of charge for any conversation with the Town but a fee of 1 franc 50 centimes is due for a conversation with any part of the interior of the Colony."

"During day time travellers are invited to see that their children are kept by preference in the yards or in the gardens of the hotel and not to allow them to play in the rooms or under the verandahs during the hours of the siesta."

"All Travellers are requested to conform to the following rules:

"Not to throw anything out of the windows.

"Not to use the big bed for infants.

"Not to bring any animals such as cats, dogs, or birds into the hotel.

"To put out all lights and to close firmly doors and windows when boarders intend going out.

"To avoid incendies travellers are requested not to use in their apartments stoves of any sort."

As this is written American trucks rumble along the roadway fifty or so yards away, American voices murmur in the darkness, and in the dining room near by they're showing Robert Taylor in "Johnnie Eager," which was popular in Honolulu months ago.

In fact, if you imagine hard enough you can imagine yourself back in the United States. But with plenty of coffee, sugar, clothes, shoes, gasoline, meat, and practically everything else here, who'd want to be back in the United States?

Just everybody you talk with. That's who.

Teeth-It's Wonderful!

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

"THE TOWN Without a Toothache" sounds like a tale out of Hans Andersen to the rest of decay-suffering humanity, doesn't it?

Such dental Arcadia is claimed for Hereford, Tex., where even an old dog, for all his 16 years of barking, biting, and tail wagging, still has his teeth. Among the older residents there is virtually no tooth decay, it is reported.

To a superabundance of phosphorus in the soil, obtained from the soft, porous caliche rock which underlies the area, goes credit for the happy state of being, but whether the phosphorus alone is responsible, researchers are not yet prepared to say. Fluorides, sunshine, and calcium may, on further research, prove equally influential.

Teeth of sound enamel and body being the million-dollar possessions they indisputably are, can't you visualize a stampede in the direction of the reported Elysian fields?

A certain authority has said that every tooth in the mouth is worth a thousand dollars. A meager estimate, we'd say. We like better the musings of a multimillionaire reviewing the paucity of big-money reward. Said he: "What's it all worth to me? A million dollars would not buy me a sound, new tooth!"

Set your own value, therefore, on those incisors, bicuspids, and molars of yours, but keep it so high they'll be cherished as possessions of such inestimable value that no pains, care, effort will be too much to preserve them.

We have learned of late from the best of dental sources that the former recommended way of brushing the teeth with circular motion is now deemed improper; that when using the circular motion, with stress put on the horizontal action of the brush, you may cause gum irritation that bodes ill for the teeth. The now approved practice is to use an up-and-down motion in tooth brushing, stroking from gums to biting surface. This method, it has been proved thru clinical study, better removes food particles that may become lodged between the teeth and furnishes better stimulation of the gums.

Great emphasis is laid upon the clean, healthy toothbrush as the weapon best adapted to promote tooth and gum health. A good, healthy tooth, it is said, may survive the use of an unsterile toothbrush, but the sensitive gums have no such resistance, and in large degree the health of the gums dictates the health of the teeth.

In addition to the thrice-daily cleansings, with extra time and energy expended on the pre-retiring brushing, there is the mouth rinse to remove any and every particle of loosened food débris after the use of dental floss. Better not to use dental floss at all, the best authorities argue, than to use it inexpertly. Some people have a tendency to jam the floss against the gums, a dangerous practice, since it contributes to gum recession, exposing more tooth surface for germs to feed upon. But, with it used without forcible pressure on or contact with the gum surface, you have the best way known to remove stubbornly lodged food particles.

A highly recommended mouth rinse, within the reach of the most tightly budgeted pocketbook, is made of one-half teaspoonful of salt to a glass of warm water. Swish it around thoroly. Sometimes an equal portion of salt and bicarbonate of soda is used. This solution should be made no stronger for fear of injurious drying effect. Even warm water with thoro swishings, several times repeated, will serve.

One toothbrush in operation is no longer deemed enough unless it is rinsed and sterilized after each use. But two brushes—three or four are infinitely better—used in rotation, so that there is always complete freshness and cleanliness of implement.

In face of the conflict concerning causes of tooth decay there is general agreement among authorities that along with keeping teeth clean, "exercising" the teeth and gums thru chewing a mixed diet is required.

That teeth need their vitamins has become an axiom, for the food nutrients are known to have important influence on the growth and healthful condition of the teeth. Deficiency of vitamin D (or of sufficient calcium) affects the enamel, and lack of sufficient vitamin C may cause considerable changes in tooth structure both as to nerves and pulp, along with the condition of the dentine.

Then there is the vital matter of tongue cleanliness. Bacteria flourish on its surface. The tongue should therefore be included in oral hygiene. The portion farthest back is suspect, therefore to be reached in the tongue brushing operation, which should be done gently. Should we eat more of raw, rough, hard-chewing foods, both tongue and teeth would be submitted to a self-cleansing process.

An accurate working scale model of H. M. S. Hood, England's huge battle cruiser that was sunk by the Bismarck, is the invention of Oliver Read (left), editor of Radio News. Thirty-two operations are controled by the radio transmitter in the background. The model is 7 feet 4½ inches long, weighs 120 pounds. Read put in 1,800 hours in constructing it. Even the deck is made up of individual planks. When finished and floated the ship came within 1/16 inch of the estimated water line. Inset above shows details of one turret's two guns.

This is the control box by which the model ship is operated. Details of the radio system cannot be revealed, as they are being developed further for other uses. Turns of the dial will, for example, fire real ammunition from any gun or combination of guns, swing the turrets, start or stop the ship, sound a siren, weigh the anchor, release four torpedoes, or lay a smoke screen.

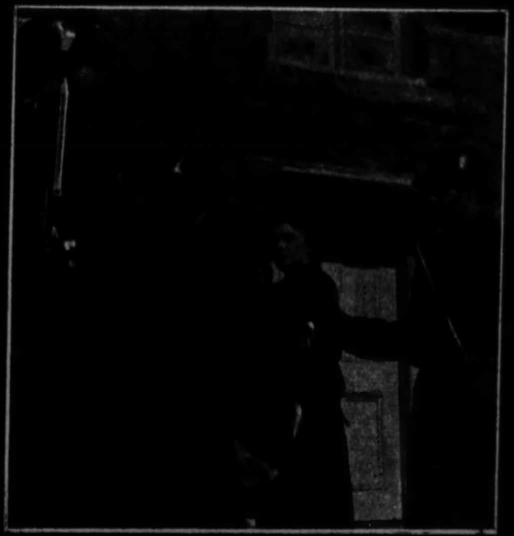
1 With the aid of Fifth Columnist George Corell (E. J. Ballantine) the Nazis have captured a small Norwegian mining town. The German [illegible] Lanser (Sir Cedric Hardwicke) appropriates the home of Mayor Orden (Henry Travers), explaining that he intends to keep the mine in operation. Philosophical Dr. Winter (Lee J. Cobb) quietly warns the Nazi that when the people recover from confusion they will know what to do.

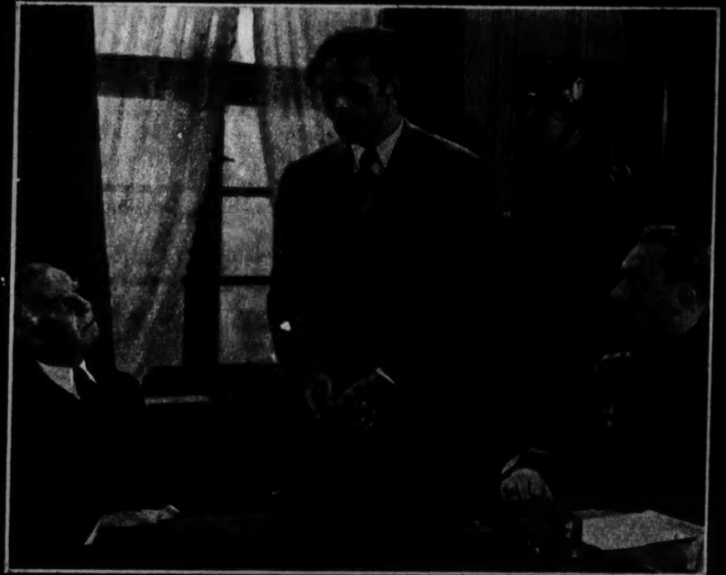
2 Daily the miners are herded to work, but slowly there appears a [illegible] pattern of resistance. Colonel Lanser [illegible] [illegible] knowing it will only increase the [illegible] appeals to Berlin.

3 During one slowdown a ruthless Nazi officer, Captain Bentick [illegible], threatens to starve the men's families. Alex Morden (William Post) protests, and when Bentick spits in his face, Morden kills the officer.



4 Alex is imprisoned, and when his wife [illegible] [illegible] fears, too, that the villagers will [illegible].

5 Colonel Lanser orders the mayor to sentence Alex to death. "You [illegible] but you will never conquer us," replies Orden. [illegible] history is a record of defeat because its leaders never could understand how free men feel.



6 Captain Loft (Henry Rowland) reads the murder charge and the sentence. "Are you afraid, Alex?" asks the mayor. "Yes, sir," says Alex simply. "Ah, so would these young gods of war be, too," the mayor sighs. "But know, Alex, that because of you they will never rest peacefully."

7 Alex is shot as an example to the other villagers. In reply they signal to British bombers which [illegible] able the mine. In retaliation the Nazis select at random five citizens to be shot in public. The men sing bravely as the guns start firing—their weeping friends turn their backs.

8 Among the Nazi officers is one, Lieutenant Tonder (Peter van Eyck), not thoroly inculcated with the party ideal. He is lonely; the villagers scorn him. Finally he becomes hysterical, is slapped by Captain Loft.

9 Desperate, Tonder goes to Molly and pleads with her just to talk to him. Revolted at first, Molly suddenly relents. Going to her room, she picks up a pair of sharp shears. She calls softly to Tonder. A moment later Alex is avenged—a life for a life.

10 Finally Corell gets authority from Berlin to overrule Lanser's objection to ruthless killing. Lanser is forced to order the arrest of the mayor, Dr. Winter, and five others as hostages.

11 In fierce defiance, the other villagers again blow up the mine. Immediately the hostages are taken to a public scaffold. "I am not a very brave man," says the mayor, "but I am glad to go this way if it will make the people braver." The villagers burst into their national anthem. A silence. A scream. Then the song resumes, strengthened by the bravery of seven who died. (THE END.)

Maker of Modern Miracles!

The accompanying article is the first of a series of three that discuss one of the world's most amazing chemical organizations and its numerous contributions to industry and to the country at war. The Dow Chemical company, the parent plant of which is located at Midland, Mich., is, by reason of its pioneering in the field of chemistry, one of the nation's most valuable strongholds on the home front. The second article of this series will discuss the subjects of plastics and magnesium, the wonder metal of war; a third article the development of Thiokol, a rubberlike synthetic that offers great promise to a country cut off from natural rubber sources, and other Dow products.

By PHILIP HAMPSON

IN THE LATE 1880s a young man just out of college went looking, in a manner speaking, for a "creek"—actually for so simple a thing as the salt on your table. He found his "creek"—his salt. But without realizing it at the time he had discovered a mighty river of chemistry—a river, with vast tributaries, filled with the riches which chemistry bestows on the modern world.

The young college man was the late Dr. Herbert Henry Dow, founder of the $153,000,000 Dow Chemical company of Midland, Mich.—the nation's fourth largest chemical organization.

From the chemical river discovered by Dr. Dow, now flow many products invaluable to the nation in war as well as to peacetime living. There are plastics which are almost magic-like because of the many uses to which they can be put. There is magnesium, vital to war aircraft and for other military uses. From it comes a component of Thiokol, a rubberlike material which is expected to help keep America's automobiles rolling during the war; chemicals essential to the war, aspirin, and hundreds of other things.

• • •

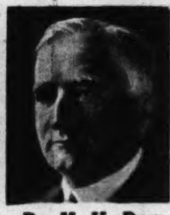
The birth of this mighty chemical enterprise resulted from an interest Dow developed for brine (just plain salt water) while preparing a thesis in his last year at the Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland. Later this interest led him while a young professor of toxicology and chemistry at a Cleveland medical school to develop a cheap way to extract bromine from the brine thru the use of electricity.

The Germans at the time sold a large part of the bromides used in this country for medical and other purposes. Dow thought he could get a share of this business.

There were some preliminaries, but 1889 found a small bromine plant being operated by Dow in Midland—a town that had seen its best days as a lumber and bromine center. Heavy costs resulting from antiquated methods were causing the bromine business to slip. The lumber business already had dwindled.

There was a reason for Dow to locate in Midland. For under it and extending across Michigan from Lake Huron to Lake Michigan are vast reservoirs of brine—enough, it's said, to last a thousand years. Brine now is brought to the surface from wells 1,200 to 1,400 feet deep, and there's more farther down at 4,000 to 5,000 feet. Hundreds of wells today dot the landscape in the area around Midland. They resemble, somewhat, the oil wells in downstate Illinois.

Besides bromine, the Michigan brine is rich in calcium, magnesium, and sodium chlorides. And should the Michigan source ever fail, the company has an ace in the hole—the oceans.



Dr. H. H. Dow

One cubic mile of sea water contains 9 billion pounds of magnesium alone, it is estimated. In fact, the riches of the oceans already are being tapped by the Dow company at seaboard plants.

In a few years Dow's bromine plant was on a profitable basis, so he sought to ultilize another of the chemicals found in his brine. He worked with the chlorides to produce chlorine, applying an extraction method similar to that used for bromine. There was trouble at first—an explosion caused considerable property damage—but Dow persisted and presently chlorine was a Dow product.

In going after chlorine (used for bleaching and other purposes) Dow had a rich prize in view. Britain and Germany in 1895 sold America 104,417,968 pounds of chlorine—a substantial business to gain for the nation. And Dow got it.

This, in brief, is the early history of the Dow company. It had its troubles in those early days. But the energy, perseverance and ambition of its founder—backed by private capital—brought it thru its growing period. Its success is an example of the effectiveness of private initiative and enterprise in the highest degree.

As stated, brine is the main stream in the company's production from which has flowed an ever increasing variety of products. The chemicals found in the salt solution were broken into a number of base materials, some of which in turn became fathers of new chemical lines. There were marriages between chemicals and their derivatives found in the brine and other chemicals obtained from other sources, such as petroleum. Thus were formed many chemical unions whose offspring took the form of new products for the use of Americans.

Dr. Willard Dow

The whole Dow chemical line was broadened greatly when petroleum was found in substantial amounts in Midland county in 1925. To the derivatives of the brine were added the many derivatives of petroleum.

Today brine, petroleum, coal, sulphur, wood, and charcoal may be said to be the vertical strands in the Dow chemical fabric. Technical skill, exhaustive research, and business ability might be considered as the cross fibers.

Research and technical skill were giving the Dow name a growing prestige even before the first World war. A sister company, purchased by the main company in 1914, manufactured sulphur chloride and reacted it with carbon bisulphide, producing carbon tetrachloride, which was then treated with iron in the presence of water to produce chloroform. This is reputed to be the first synthetic organic chemical process on a commercial scale in America.

Just before the first war carbon tetrachloride became important commercially as a solvent, a noninflammable cleaning fluid, and a fire extinguisher. Other chemicals came forth, insecticides, calcium chloride for refrigeration, and magnesium chloride for use as a building material.

The first World war shut the door to many European chemicals—a situation which stimulated activity at the Dow works. Production of phenol (carbolic acid), a derivative of coal tar, was stepped up enormously because of a serious shortage in this chemical. Phenol is the father of a long line of products, including such items as aspirin. A new process was developed for the manufacture of synthetic brominated indigo from which blue dyes are made. By-products from the manufacture of indigo and phenol were used to make artificial flavors and perfumes.

A spoiled child for Dow during the days his company was expanding and developing was a metal called magnesium, about which there will be more later. He lavished his attention on that metal at a time when most other Americans paid scant attention to it. Not so on the other side of the Atlantic where a certain warlike people gave it every thought and attention—the Germans.

Dr. Dow died in 1930. His place was taken by his son, Dr. Willard H. Dow, now president, general manager, and chairman of the board of the Dow Chemical company. (Henceforth in this article to differentiate between father and son the founder will be designated as Dow Sr. and the present head of the company as Dow Jr.)

Dow Jr. was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1919 and went directly to work in the Dow factory, working side by side with the older employés. He learned the chemical business from the ground up. Growth of the company since he has headed it has been notable.

Looking at the Dow company from the position of this year of war, it may be viewed from three points of view.

First, there is the formation and early growth. Then a steadily expanding operation during which it contributed substantially to the enrichment of American life thru an ever increasing volume of products. Pearl Harbor found the company in a strong position.

Second, the company is seen from the viewpoint of the present—a period in which America is engaged in one of the most menacing wars of its history. Here is a virile essential company which is making an extremely important contribution to America's war effort. It is interesting to note, commented Dow Jr. recently in his Midland office, that this company does not itself make a single thing used directly to kill the foe. It does, however, make chemicals used by other companies in the manufacture of explosives. And possibly 85 per cent of everything that Dow now makes is used for war purposes, either directly or indirectly.

Third, the company may be considered from the viewpoint of the future. It possesses the means, once the war is won, to send Americans back to work producing entirely new things—some products that didn't exist before the war or else were just beginning to come into production. Others, tho in use for some years, are susceptible of great expansion. Among these are the plastics—themselves barely 20 years old. The wide range of products which may be made from plastics is unlimited. Plastic products of the future stagger the imagination.

One reason for the success of the Dow company is the maintenance of a large research staff of highly trained technical men. This costs a lot of money. Normally the Dow company spends about 20 per cent of its profit on research and about 20 per cent of its force at Midland is engaged in research, engineering, and management. Here is private enterprise with its own departments of "brain trusters," but "brain trusters" who are giving the country a show for its money. Ph. D.'s are numerous at Midland.

More than 500 products are now being produced in Dow plants thruout the land. Military secrecy and censorship now veil information on production, number of employés, details as to manufacturing processes, details regarding the plants and other points.

It may be said that the Dow company for the most part produces raw materials out of which other manufacturers and fabricators process the various items that go eventually into the consumer's hands. (The government is now the No. 1 consumer.) Dow production may be divided roughly into four main divisions:

1. Plastics.
2. Magnesium and Dowmetal (a trade name used by the company to designate its magnesium alloys).
3. Thiokol, a synthetic rubber developed by the Thiokol corporation, an independent New Jersey enterprise.
4. Chemicals—the major activity of the company.

The four activities will be discussed with comparative brevity. First in the order outlined above are the plastics — materials of a thousand uses which have been in general use thruout the world for only about 20 years. Plastics—as the word indicates—are materials capable of being molded. That's a simple definition for so complex a material. The raw materials from which they are made exist in the greatest abundance.

The future may see automobiles and airplanes made of plastic materials. Houses may be built of plastics—houses which may be replaced easily as styles change and new inventions and developments arise, just as the family car is replaced every year or so by a better car. Even the synthetic rubbers about which we are all talking may properly be described as plastics.

Dow's entrance into the plastics field may said to have resulted from the company's financial necessity of keeping its chemical production in balance. To produce one chemical, large amounts of raw materials were required to get one item. The one item having been extracted there frequently remained as waste surpluses of the basic raw material containing other chemicals. The economic thing to do was to use the "left-over" chemicals in the waste.

Because of the nature of their operations the technical men on

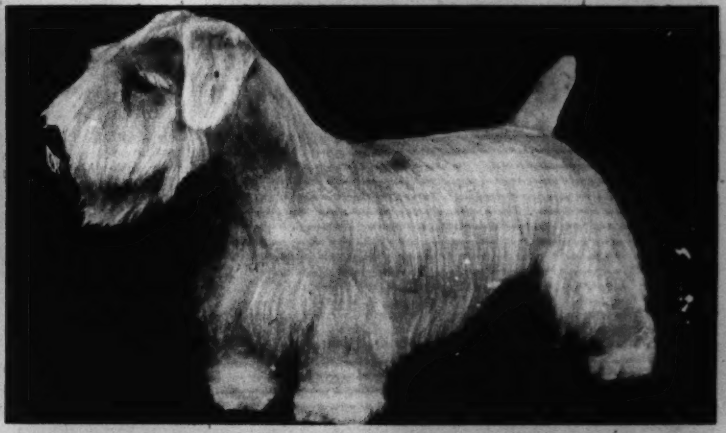
MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

WHEN the roll is called for game terriers that have been bred for pluck, endurance, and the zest to fight vermin, the short-legged Sealyham must be included. This breed has been exceedingly popular in England along with the wire-haired terrier and the cairn, tho it isn't nearly as well known in this country.



This Sealyham terrier is Drumadoone Design, owned by Dr. and Mrs. Noel Young of Lake Forest, Ill. It won its championship in five shows.

The Sealyham was developed by an eccentric sportsman named John Owen Tucker Edwardes, who died in 1891. He lived at Sealyham, a small country place situated within a stone's throw of an English river named Sealy. Edwardes wanted a terrier that would be a useful ally to his pack of otter hounds with which he hunted the Sealy river.

The dog that could hunt with the hounds had to be small, game, and active. Some dog historians believe that the breed was known as early as 1848.

The Sealyham today is quite different from those early dogs, which were not much for looks. Modern Sealys are wiry-coated, short-legged, with impressive heads and keen dark eyes. A male will weigh around 21 pounds. Because of their short legs you might think these little terriers would be clumsy. On the contrary, they are extremely agile and quite fast. Obviously a clumsy dog would have little chance to live in fighting vermin.

Because of his size, the Sealy fits well into the home. An extremely commendable attribute of this terrier is his good sense. He isn't a highly nervous, flighty dog that has to be watched every minute.

The Staffordshire once had many names, including "pit bull," before it was given its official name. This good looking specimen is Ruffian Our Teenie, owned by Lettie Harriman, Detroit, Mich.

One of the traits of the breed that should appeal to many dog fanciers is its temperament. It likes people, enjoys roughhouse play around the home, keeps an eye on what's going on in and around the home, and is loyal to the family it loves. Some breeds of dogs are self-confident and show it. Others do not display much aggressiveness. The Sealy belongs to the former group.

The fact that they like to play, are quick to learn, and have such gay, happy-go-lucky dispositions makes them ideal pupils for learning tricks. The Sealy (Ch. Redlands Defiance) that we brought into our home when he was about 6 years old had to be taught house manners and a vocabulary at that age, because he had been a kennel dog. But age was no drawback to this dog in his education. He became quite a comedian, if not a showoff, always good for some laughs.

Around a suburban home or farm the Sealyham can become an efficient ratter and vermin killer. In the dog we have we see this intense love for killing vermin, an inheritance of those days when Sealys were bred solely to work outdoors. Snap a mousetrap near our dog, tell him to hunt, and he's all business. Give him a chance on ground squirrels and he'll move cubic yards of earth to get at one. A good Sealyham has a powerful, punishing jaw, and he knows how to use it when he's hunting. Because this breed can do something useful for its keep, sincere admirers of the breed hope that it will not be allowed to lose its zest for working as a ratter.

Altho the Sealyham is gay, intelligent, quick to learn, and easy to keep, in fairness to the breed this point should be mentioned in any discussion of it: Like all wiry-coated terriers, it must have its coat trimmed occasionally in order to keep it looking smart and also if the owner is going to be able to keep it clean.

learned to remove and install mechanical, electrical, and vacuum instruments, replace damaged wiring, bulbs, fuses, and switches; know the functions of all speed indicators, chronometers, tachometers, oil and fuel pressure gauges, oil temperature gauges and altitude indicators, to name but a few, and understand the theory of electrical circuits in addition to methods of locating shorts and grounds.

Then he concentrated on ignition. His dreams were filled with wiring plans, magnetos, distributors, ignition timing out of order, breaker points in need of cleaning, dirty spark plugs, difficult splices. Then, at breakneck speed, he was led into the mysteries of airplane accessories—baffling complexities of the carburetor, starters (hand-turning inertia, combustion, electrical), generators, and batteries.

The study of accessories was followed by lubrication — the contemplation of fittings and tanks, pumps, filters, coolers, strainers, valves, gaskets, gauges, and piping. The trained lubrication man knows how to drain and replace oil and is alert to indications of danger in oil. He watches for sabotage and knows that in aviation small things are the most important.

Ignition 2 follows lubrication, altho the order of Navy pier courses varies with different classes and even from week to week. Study content is varied to incorporate the lessons learned in war. Special attention, for example, is paid to the making and inspection of ignition harnesses (conduit framework which surrounds the engine). Former students, writing back from combat zones, have stressed the importance of this.

An additional course in top overhaul, during which students learned to "embalm" and "disembalm" engines, virtually brought the instruction proper to a close. An engine is "embalmed" when it is prepared for shipment or storage with special greases and adjustments.

Elmer got a chance to test his new knowledge in a phase labeled "power plant trouble shooting." In a room where 12 engines had been set up on test stands, special problems were created by the instructor. One engine wouldn't start. Why? Another failed to develop full power. Still another "missed." One refused to idle properly. And another refused to stop when the switch was turned off.

This was an exciting period, for it brought the class its first opportunity to see aircraft engines in actual operation. Fully equipped instrument panels were connected with each engine. Gasoline was piped in and exhaust gases were drawn out of the shop.

After "trouble shooting" Elmer and his classmates were veterans. Along the way they had picked up the proper functioning of pneumatic rafts, oxygen equipment, fire extinguishing and de-icing equipment, chutes, and harnesses, forced landing gear, and safety belts.

The final session of squadron operations brought the course to an end. Wearing the navy's warm "paper vest," Elmer frequently performed repair work outdoors in the winter cold of the Chicago lakefront. This gave him practical experience. He doped fabric wings, patched metal surfaces, repaired holes punched by instructors, changed oil, filled fuel tanks, started and warmed up engines, handled, spotted and stowed planes, removed and replaced power plants, performed repaint jobs and repaired cowling. He filled out the navy's daily, 30 day and 60 day inspection forms.

In doing the actual work of an aviation machinist's mate in a combat zone he had the privilege of working with the latest planes, fresh from the assembly line. For months Navy pier students were forced to use obsolete planes, bought, begged, and borrowed from civilian and military sources. When United States plane production increased to a point where the school could not be accused of robbing combat zones, the educational department, headed by Lt. Comm. C. C. Cavaney, U. S. N. R., and supported by Capt. Edwin A. Wolleson, U. S. N. (retired), commanding officer of the school, insisted upon and received new planes for training purposes. As a former battleship commander (he once commanded the Tennessee) Capt. Wolleson knew the value of training with the actual equipment to be used later.

Squadron operations taught Elmer Johnson the value of safety precautions in the hangar or on the line. The "bull horn," a speaker system audible above the roar of a hundred engines, was employed to direct operations and report fires. Instantly every engine would be stopped.

The men topped off their training with a few days on board the Wolverine, the navy's aircraft carrier used for training on Lake Michigan. Then they were ready for graduation.

Because of careful selection to begin with, more than 90 per cent of the incoming class finished and received petty officer ratings as aviation machinist's mates, third class.

These graduates are needed badly by the fleet. Most of them go to shipping centers and then to receiving ships—east, south and west. Outstanding students frequently are sent to "B" schools for further training.

Navy pier is an "A" school except for Diesel operators. It conducts an advanced "C" Diesel school to supplement its "A" course. Twenty per cent of its Diesel men go out with the high rating of motor machinist second class, 30 per cent as firemen first class, and 40 per cent as firemen second class.

More than 90 per cent of those who enter the metalsmith's school go out as aviation metalsmiths third class. After a basic course their training is divided into courses dealing with sheet metal work, welding, refinishing and squadron metalsmith work. These men also have actual war equipment to work with. An example is the wing of a giant PBY, riddled by Japs at Pearl Harbor.

But we are getting away from Elmer Johnson, aviation machinist's mate third class, graduate of Navy pier and a specialist who will be welcomed by the fleet. We have accompanied Elmer thru many hard weeks of training. He has helped us to understand Navy pier at war. For, after all, Navy pier's story lies in the men it turns out.

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph.D.

OUTDOOR picture taking need not end when the sun goes down. There are plenty of opportunities to take interesting photographs at night.

There are no secret formulas for getting good pictures after dark. All you have to do is set your shutter for a time exposure and leave it open for from one second to three or four minutes, with the camera mounted on a tripod or some other solid support. If you load up with fast panchromatic film an exposure of 30 seconds or so will do for an average street scene. A trial or two will show you just what to expect.

Busy street scenes with many lights and flashing signs provide striking material for night photography. Here the time exposures can be very short. A few seconds will do if you use fast film. Avoid showing people walking in the foreground, or they will be hopelessly blurred. Figures standing still, however, will add interest to your pictures if they are silhouetted against the light.

The lighted windows of tall buildings make interesting patterns for photography at night. Where power saving and dim-out regulations have cut down illumination there are new picture possibilities that did not exist before the war. Buildings that once were floodlighted now raise their heads in darkness—and offer something new in pictures. It is best to make certain you are not violating war time restrictions in taking pictures of this kind.

There are many fine picture opportunities far from tall buildings and busy streets. A single street lamp provides plenty of light for a time exposure right down at the corner of your block. You can show the light source in your picture if you wish, or hide it behind a tree by careful placing of the camera. People do much to add interest to pictures of this sort, and you can add a fine touch by posing a couple beneath the street lamp. If they are over 15 or 20 feet from the camera they will be able to remain sufficiently still for a short time exposure. At shorter distances, however, their unavoidable slight movement would be likely to cause blur.

Beware the lights of moving automobiles when you are taking night shots outdoors. They will register as white streaks in the picture. Pedestrians will not show at all if the exposure is more than a few seconds and if they keep moving all the time.

You don't need street lights and electric signs to provide enough illumination for photography at night. With an exposure of several minutes you can photograph a landscape by moonlight alone. This calls for the fastest film and for patience to try again if the first trials do not give satisfactory results.

Clear nights are the most comfortable ones on which to go out for pictures, but they don't necessarily yield the best results. Rain puts shining reflections on buildings and paved streets. Fog creates a misty circle around every light.

Outdoor night pictures with flash or flood bulbs can be taken by following the exposure rules for indoor ones. The only difference is that the lens should be opened slightly to compensate for lack of reflected light.

There is one valuable trick you can use here. Hide the light source in the picture whenever it is appropriate. A flash or flood bulb can be concealed in a make-believe campfire or can replace the regular light in a watchman's lantern or a porch fixture.

There are a few restrictions governing night photography in war time. Don't take pictures showing large areas of a city at night. If they fell into the wrong hands they might be used to guide enemy bombers in a sneak raid. Don't take pictures of defense plants. Blazing factory windows and the glow of blast furnaces are fine pictorial subjects, but they are taboo for the duration.

Any camera will take a night shot like this if the exposure is sufficiently long and if the camera is placed on a solid support. Light streaks on roadways are caused by passing cars.

Science

the staff of such an enterprise as the Dow company must ever have three important problems before them. In the past the work done in trying to meet the problems was an important factor in giving us plastics. The work that must be done in the future holds the promise of a continued flow of new products. The three broad problems are:

1. The need for keeping plant operations in balance—of seeing to it that products are made in economic amounts—that there is no waste.

(A simple example of what all this means may be found in a hypothetical chlorine production. To extract chlorine from the brine it's necessary to produce caustic soda (lye). It's a part of the process. Now all that may have been wanted was the chlorine, but the fact remained there was a lot of caustic soda on hand after the chlorine was produced. It would not make good sense to pour the caustic soda into the river as waste (and maybe the law would prohibit it, anyhow). So the thing to do was to find uses for the caustic soda.

(After uses are found for the caustic soda thru the addition of other materials to make new lines of chemicals it is found that other forms of waste put in an appearance — there are more leftovers. So the technical men have to find ways to use the new forms of waste material. It all revolves in a circle, with the technical men striving to balance their production so there is no waste to eat up the company's profits.)

2. An especial need for finding complete use for those raw materials which are processed in the greatest amount—products in which the company is "long." The technical men must use even the "squeal" in the chemical pig just as the research boys do with the live pig at the Chicago stockyards.

3. The need for keeping step with industry. The technical men must watch industry and new developments closely to make sure that the Dow plant is not producing something that's no longer needed. They must be alert to satisfy the demands of industry for new materials. And finally it's desirable to produce and introduce new products.

These problems must ever remain before the chemists, scientists, engineers, and economists now at work at Dow headquarters.

It will be recalled that during the first World war there was a shortage of phenol (carbolic acid). Dow developed a method of producing it thru the use of chlorobenzene, a product in which an important constituent comes from the chlorides in Dow's salt water (brine). By-products of phenol are myriad and not the least of them are plastics.

Later petroleum from the nearby oil fields brought forth ethylene—another raw material of plastics as well as a constituent of other products.

So with the necessity of keeping product at its plant in balance and with abundant supplies of basic raw materials at hand, it was perfectly natural for the Dow organization to turn its attention to the field of plastics. There were years of research and experimentation in the laboratories. Finally, out of these activities came three plastics to which Dow gave the trade names: Ethocel, Styron, and Saran.

Next Sunday — The plastics and magnesium.

Broken Heart? Break It Up!

By MAUREEN DALY
(Author of "Seventeenth Summer.")

TRYING to act yourself out of a broken heart just doesn't work. So from the moment you begin to get unhappy from the inside out it's best to cut the dramatics. Trying to ease the hurt by placing yourself as the lead, stage front and center, for one of the world's great love affairs just because your girl is wearing some one else's class ring won't get you back to normal any faster.

A 17-year-old boy, a senior in high school, wrote about what he calls his "problem." It is not only his problem but the problem that crops up before every one at least once a lifetime. He says:

"I'm in love with a girl my own age. I've known her about six months and like her very much. We have exchanged pins and wear them always. We also bought the same sort of plaid shirts and wear them to school together.

"All the teachers and students know that I like her and that we go out together. But now her girl friend informs me that she is to get an engagement ring soon from her old boy friend. I don't know whether it's true or not. And I don't know how to ask her. Now I go around in a gloom, arguing with everybody, and I guess I'm letting the greatest thing of my life slip away.

"She told me that we shouldn't be seen together so often. I asked her why. I am supposed to be the commanding officer of the military unit at our school next semester, and she thinks that she is standing in the way of my ambitions. I'm in doubt whether this is the real reason or if it is because she is about to get engaged. If she is to get the ring I won't know how to face all those students and teachers. Even tho I've tried, I just can't forget her. Any song that comes on the radio reminds me of her. The only way I can think of to get her out of mind is to join the navy. You see, she is the first girl I loved. . . ."

It is the first girl he has ever loved and probably won't be the last. It is a sad thing to find that some one you've been dating and liking—liking to the point of wearing the same plaids together!—is giving you the run-around. But just brooding won't help.

That rumor of an engagement ring may be nothing but a whistle in the dark and probably is. If the unhappy-hearted one has been dating the girl constantly for the last six months, when was she seeing her "old boy friend"? Any sincere affection is based on friendship, and on that basis it should be easy for the boy to ask the girl frankly whether or not it is true she is expecting a ring from another boy. Under the circumstances, who has more right to know?

With spring coming on and high school life as much fun as it is, a fellow shouldn't wait around in a state of gloom wondering whether he rates as steady heartbeat or whether he's about to be asked to be a best man! And met face to face with the question, the girl will have to answer honestly. If the ring story is only a story—well, so they'll live happily ever after. But if she is planning a lend-lease arrangement for her third finger, left hand—well, so he gets himself another girl—but quickly.

Apparently the boy is as much afraid of what his friends and teachers will think of the brush-off as he is of the actual whisk. If he finds out the truth right away he can start dating other girls before the day when his present heart throb comes out with her sparkler—if it is saving face he is worried about. Besides, dating other girls will help him forget the one who apparently is well on her way toward forgetting him already.

As for the songs on the radio that bring back unhappy and haunting memories—he has only known the girl for six months and can probably forget her almost as soon as those present songs are off the hit parade. He should get a new girl with a new theme song and give himself some fresh memories to play with.

Friends and teachers won't show more than a mild curiosity in the splitup—especially if the boy is dating other girls and not sobbing out his woes into any convenient babushka.

About joining the navy to forget—it is true that Uncle Sam does need good men, but he doesn't require them to join up pre-heartbroken. What would be the good of a lot of long-faced gobs moping in their hammocks?

He should get a new girl with a new theme song and give himself some fresh memories to play with.

Private Fay on Parade!

This is another report from William C. Fay, on leave from the Tribune sports department, about his life in the army.

HE WAS a brand new second lieutenant, fresh from officer candidate school, and he was making his first march with the company. We reached our final assembly area, checked equipment, dug our slit trenches, crawled in and pulled brush over us for aerial camouflage.

The second lieutenant, a model of efficiency, examined the area trench by trench, questioning the men and checking their camouflage. He warned the men to lie in the shade. It was amazing, he said, how sunlight reflected from a soldier's face can be picked up from the air.

Questions spilled out of our second lieutenant. Was Private Sloan deep enough? Did he know where the platoon sergeant was? Had he checked his rifle? And so on.

Most of the men contented themselves with yessir answers, but not Private Masters, who had found an abandoned slit trench comfortably filled with a bed of dry leaves. Lying back against his pack-pillow, Private Masters was completely at ease and half asleep when the second lieutenant found him.

Our young lieutenant was red-faced now. He had traversed several hundred square yards of timber land, complicated by snarls of felled trees. He was breathing heavily. A branch had ripped his brand new shirt.

"And how," he gasped, "is your position, Private Masters?"

Private Masters opened his eyes. He stretched luxuriously. "Very comfortable, lieutenant, very comfortable."

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Oxford, Miss.

ALL SOUTHERNERS refer to the University of Mississippi, even in print, as Ole Miss, without benefit of quotation marks. That's the subtitle, so to speak, that has become its household name. The derivation of it also explains it. "Ole Miss" is not a drawled abbreviation of the state's name. It is the old-time colored servant's title, respectful and affectionate, for the white lady of the house. As it applies to the university it has all the connotations—and more—that would make it just about synonymous with the familiar alma mater.

Ole Miss of Oxford is a venerable southern lady, full of years, serenity, and tradition, ensconced in a square mile of charming campus at Oxford, about 70 miles from Memphis, Tenn., with a harmonious blend of old and new buildings. The heart of the old section and of the school itself is the Lyceum, housing the administration offices. The center section of this building, red brick, with magnificent white stone columns, dates back to the school's beginnings in 1848. During the Civil war, when the school closed—all its men, known as the University Grays, marched to war as a unit—this building was utilized as a hospital; another tiny building, still standing and used now as a faculty house, served as a morgue. There is also a little brick-walled Confederate cemetery on the grounds.

The impact of another war is felt at Ole Miss today. Its boys are disappearing in great numbers, and as the civilian boys move out the uniformed forces are moving in. There is an army adjutant general's administration school on the newer part of the campus, plus a contingent of navy men in elementary pre-flight training.

These temporary military and navy guests find much to wonder at and admire at Ole Miss. They are shyly delighted, for example, when the girls, true to Ole Miss tradition, give them, as to all strangers on the grounds, a smiling "Hello." And they are fascinated by Blind Jim, the colored vendor of candy and apples, who has been a surprisingly nimble fixture at Ole Miss for 44 years. Blind Jim, who has appointed himself "dean of the freshman class," is beloved by all Ole Miss students and alumni. It is the obligation of his freshmen to buy him a new suit for each home-coming game, one of a splendor as befits a man who attends all the games.

Most of Ole Miss' enrollment comes from within the state, but there are a handful of northerners who are among its most enthusiastic sons and daughters. Highest social honors on the campus for a girl is her selection, on the basis of popularity, as "Miss Ole Miss," an honor that this year, interestingly enough, went to a "Yankee"—Bette Congdon of Kenosha, Wis. She is a junior and a Kappa Delta. She also holds one of the highest student offices, the secretaryship of the Associated Student Body, the student government group.

Tampax makes it available to women generally for monthly use

Women who use Tampax naturally think of themselves as modern and up-to-the-minute. In this regard they are correct. The scientific principle of Tampax has long been known to physicians and it was a doctor who perfected Tampax for women's monthly use. Don't delay in starting to use Tampax. Millions of other women refuse to go back to older methods after just one period of this internally-worn sanitary protection. For that is the Tampax principle—no belts, no pins, no pads, no bulging. Pure surgical cotton is hygienically sealed in a one-time-use applicator. Chafing and odor become things of the past and there is no bulge for anybody to "notice." The disposal problem also has disappeared. Tampax comes in 3 absorbencies: Regular, Super and Junior. You can buy it at any drug store or notion counter. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

GREAT TRIUMPHS OF MEDICAL HISTORY...

SOME of us older folks still remember those days when a prowling killer, never seen by mortal eyes, was pouncing upon whole families . . . each year responsible for one out of every seven deaths.

Grimly—relentlessly—the hunt was pressed for the deadly marauder which caused this "Great White Plague." Many insisted "Tuberculosis must be the work of some stealthy germ." But microscope lenses searched and searched . . . and answered "No!"

Forever the world will be grateful to one immortal doctor, who tracked the killer to its lair and dragged it out of hiding . . . who forced the guilty germ to reveal itself in the open, where all the world could guard against it, war against it . . . and win.

On March 24, 1882, Dr. Robert Koch electrified the world, by proving he had discovered the long-sought tubercle bacillus. A true hunter and explorer, whose happiest boyhood day dreams were of thrilling tiger hunts, had captured the fiercest of all man killers . . , a monster that measured from end to end less than one fifteen-thousandth of an inch!

Today, thanks to this pioneer's work, Tuberculosis can be diagnosed in its very early stages. And in its early stages it nearly always can be cured. And, thanks to the war being waged against this disease by Medicine and Enlightenment, the nation's No. 1 killer of past generations has already dropped into 7th place!

1898— RELIEF of pain!

1898—just 16 years after Koch's great discovery—is another famous date in the pages of medical history—in the great battle against pain. For a group of brilliant scientists discovered a relief from headaches, painful discomforts of colds, and muscular aches and pains . . . maladies which cause even more suffering and loss of time than do all the serious diseases combined. In 1898 they discovered Aspirin.

Whenever men of medicine fight suffering and pain, Bayer Aspirin is trusted not just for dependability, but for the rapid relief it brings. So for relief that's reliable and also swift, ask for Bayer Aspirin by its full name. And be sure the tablets you buy are stamped "BAYER"—the famous name in Aspirin.

BAYER

COLDS—To relieve headaches, pains and aches from colds, take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a glass of water. Repeat in 2 hours. For a sore throat from a cold, dissolve 3 tablets in ⅓ of a glass of water and gargle.

HEADACHES—Next time a headache comes, take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a little water. Relief follows quickly. Economical to use. Try Bayer Aspirin, too, for fast relief of neuralgic pain.

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

In 2 to 3 seconds after a Bayer Aspirin Tablet touches water, it is disintegrated and ready to start work. That's what happens in your stomach when you take Bayer Aspirin.

ALBUM OF THE AIR

This is the seventh of a series of pages presenting players and craftsmen of popular radio programs. Portraits of other radio personalities will be reproduced in this section next week.

Bing (Harry Lillis) Crosby, crooner extraordinary of radio, movies and juke box, is the favorite son of Tacoma, Wash., where he was born on May 2, 1904, and of Spokane, where he grew up and attended Gonzaga university. Fifteen years ago he left Spokane with two shirts, a pair of socks, and a battered automobile running on borrowed time. When he went back five years ago to receive an honorary doctor's degree and the key to the city, he had a yearly income of $500,000, a trunkful of scenic shirts, and a string of racing horses. The shirts and horses still are good for a laugh on anybody's radio show. Three years of crooning with Paul Whiteman were largely instrumental in rocketing the Spokane singer to fame. He has been kingpin of Bing Crosby Music Hall since 1936.

Trudy Erwin, soloist with the Crosby show, was born at Los Angeles, Cal., on Aug. 12, 1918, began her vocal career while in high school, attended the University of Southern California, had her first professional engagement at a Hollywood hotel, sang on Kay Kyser's College of Musical Knowledge, and has been seen and heard in several movies.

John Scott Trotter, Crosby's orchestra leader, was pianist with the original Hal Kemp orchestra. His score for a Crosby film, "Pennies from Heaven," brought him to Bing's attention and favor.

Marjorie Anderson shares starring honors with Bill Johnstone in "The Shadow," W-G-N and Mutual thriller heard Sundays from 4:30 to 5 p. m., CWT. She attended Miss Fuller's school, New York, spent three years as a social worker in New York. Later, working in a shop opposite the offices of a radio company, she arranged with a studio engineer to wave a handkerchief from a window when certain auditions began. One day a customer found herself left with a bolt of linen in her hands. Marjorie had seen the signal, dashed to the studio. She came away a radio actress.

Six years ago Bill Johnstone took over the role of "The Shadow." His predecessor was Orson Welles. Born 30 years ago at Paisley, Scotland, Johnstone was brought to the United States when he was 3 years old. He made his theatrical debut in a walk-on part in a Helen Hayes play at the Guild theater, New York; there remained through 24 plays; from that experience, went directly into radio.

Ken Carpenter, Crosby's announcer, was born at Avon, Ill., on Aug. 21, 1900; attended Lombard college, Galesburg, Ill.; made his debut as an announcer at Los Angeles, Cal., in 1929. Other Carpenter assignments are "One Man's Family" and "Unlimited Horizons."

SHE'S ENGAGED!

She's Lovely! She uses Pond's!

LIEUTENANT PROCTOR ADJUSTS CIVILIAN GAS MASK—Jacqueline recently completed a year of volunteer work with the famous Massachusetts Women's Defense Corps—where she trained with the motor convoy and canteen units and studied civilian evacuation methods. She graduated a Lieutenant, and on duty she wears this becoming deep-brown uniform and visor cap—especially attractive with her soft, fair Pond's complexion.

JACQUELINE PROCTOR
pretty and piquant younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Otis Proctor of Boston, whose engagement to Guy de Brun of New York was announced last spring at a tea at her home. Jacqueline is a descendant of James Otis, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

JACQUELINE RADIATES CHARM. Her great brown eyes are like velvet pansies. Her fair skin has an appealing "little-girl look"—it's so smooth, soft, naively fresh and sweet.

"My face just adores Pond's soft-smooth skin care," Jacqueline says, "it's so thorough the way it cleanses, and it leaves my skin softer and more glowing, with such a rested feel."

She pats Pond's silky-soft cream all over her face and throat with brisk, little pats. "It's a grand way to soften and release dirt and make-up," she says. She tissues it off well—then "rinses" with more Pond's for extra softening and cleansing. Tissues all off again.

"Do this every night," she says, "and for daytime clean-ups. You'll adore Pond's Cold Cream, too."

And you'll see why war-busy society women like Mrs. Victor du Pont, III and Miss Mimi McAdoo are Pond's Cold Cream devotees—why more women and girls use it than any other face cream. At beauty counters everywhere, all sizes are popular in price. Ask for the larger sizes, you get even more for your money.

AT THEIR ENGAGEMENT PARTY—Jacqueline and Guy snapped as they stole a moment together after receiving congratulations from their friends. He is now in the Army at Camp Berkley, Texas—she on a defense job with American Airlines, making priority reservations for the Army and Navy.

- relieve irritated chapping quickly.

MAPLE SUGAR

"GENERAL," said the Cook one morning, "I'm out of sugar. I've scraped the bottom of my sugar thimble and from now on until we get a fresh supply there won't be anything sweet served on the Teenie Weenie table."

"Well," answered the General, "it won't be long now until the maple sap will be running and we can begin making sugar."

"It will have to get a lot warmer than it has been lately," said the Cowboy, "or the sap won't run. I've cut into a couple of maple trees and the sap isn't ready yet."

"The weather is bound to clear up soon," put in the Doctor, "for spring is nearly here."

Spring was farther away than the Doctor thought, for it grew very cold during the night, snow fell, and the creek froze from bank to bank.

"Well, there is nothing to do but wait for better weather," said the Cowboy as he watched the snowflakes thru a shoe house tiny window.

"While we are waiting we can begin preparations for sugaring," said the General. "We'll see if we can get that old woodpecker who lives down by the creek to tap a tree for us."

The Teenie Weenie men were greatly pleased at what the General had said, for it was a terribly hard task for the Teenie Weenies to bore thru the tough bark of a maple tree. Their auger was so tiny and the maple wood so hard the little men were nearly worn out by the time they had reached the sap. They all loved to make sugar, but the task of boring into the tree was such hard work it almost spoiled the fun. However, with the woodpecker to do the boring with his sharp beak the hard work would be done and all the Teenie Weenies would enjoy the rest of the work.

In a couple of days it grew warmer. The ice in the creek began to break up and the General decided to talk to the woodpecker.

Now, bird's talk is sometimes very hard for the Teenie Weenies to understand. The General soon found that he couldn't make the woodpecker understand, and so he called for the Chinaman who could translate bird talk better than any of the other Teenie Weenies.

"Tell him I would like to hire him to peck some holes in a maple tree so we can get some sap," the General told the Chinaman.

"He say," said the Chinaman when the bird had finished, "he be velly glad to tap maple tree. He say he want floor flat blugs for the work."

"Oh," said the General. "Tell him we can't find four fat bugs now, and besides that's one bug too much."

The Chinaman repeated the General's message, and the woodpecker let out several loud squawks.

"He say," said the Chinaman, "he no work for less than tree and a half flat blugs."

"Tell him that we will give three and a half fat bugs when the weather gets warm enough for the bugs to come out of the ground," the General said.

"He say he starve before warm weather come. He say he must have tree and a half flat blugs or he no work."

"Tell him that we will give him a quarter of a frog ham and a three drop jar of blackberry jam," said the General, "and tell him that we'll get the three and a half bugs for him when we can."

The Chinaman told the woodpecker what the General had said and the bird seemed much pleased. He told the Chinaman that he would tap the tree just as soon as the weather was right and the Teenie Weenies walked back to the shoe house quite happy.

NEGROES LEARN FIGHTING TRADE AT FORT CUSTER

Soldiers Revel in Army Discipline.

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Fort Custer, Mich., March 13.—This historic place, dating freedom of the northwest and bearing the name of an epic American warrior, is rated the soldier's paradise.

If there is such a thing as democracy of arms, it is here. Color, race, creed, the boast or pride of antecedent, none cuts any ice at Custer. The four corners and all tribes and bloods which make up America converge here and friction is wholly unknown.

Tho but a fraction of the Custer command, the colored soldier is in his element at Custer. He is both something of the pride and particular charge of staff and line of the fort. Here his ease and enthusiasm are inescapable to the observant eye. His grievance, if any, is personal and of the moment's experience.

Praised by Colonel.

There are thousands of white soldiers at Custer, and less than a thousand colored troops now, but all—both white and colored—are as one on the war. And there is no doubt as to how the colored soldier stacks up at Custer.

"Whenever I see a colored boy in uniform," said Col. Joseph V. Dillon," I feel that I am looking at a soldier." Col. Dillon, West Pointer and example of traditional West Point discipline, is commandant of the provost marshal general's school at Custer. "The millenium is not here," he said, "but we are making progress in the service." He didn't wish to overemphasize the work of the military police, but the colored boys divide tops, he added, in effectiveness and understanding with the best.

The pride of Custer seems to be the 795th tank destroyer battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Theophilus Mann, former Chicago lawyer, native of Illinois and a graduate of the University of Illinois. The post is unanimous in the prediction that the 795th will make military history when it moves into action. The enthusiasm and eagerness of the 795th are as marked as its intelligence. Its officers are all trained men, among them college graduates, while education, in one degree or another, distinguishes the entire outfit. It is a get-up-and-move unit and longs for combat.

Outfit Known for Industry.

Much of the popularity of the 795th is due to the industry and great military intelligence of Col. Mann, who is esteemed second to no officer at Custer and whose name is spoken by his superiors only to praise. The 795th seems to have completed all the training Custer has to offer and may soon move to a finishing school; thence, perhaps earlier than even its commander expects, to one of the theaters of battle.

That would please the boys, who harmonize a parody on Cohan:

"Over here, over here, over here,

Col. George L. Shank, commander of Fort Custer, spoke of Col. Mann as "in all respects a soldier, and his men seem to be of the same pattern."

Col. Mann assumed command of the 795th on Feb. 5, 1942. The order was precipitate, but between 4 in the afternoon and 2 a. m. he had whipped up his orders. From then on he has had the attention of war officials.

Proud of His Men.

There are only a few companies in the 795th, including the reconnaissance company and the medical company. The battalion is several hundred strong, and its personnel reads like a page from a country-wide census. "Of course I am proud of my men," said Col. Mann, "but my pride is a pardonable one when I tell you that we have had no trouble of any character, no friction, and only one or two cases of minor infraction of rules and regulations."

Lt. Col. John G. O'Brien, assistant in the provost marshal school, said that Col. Mann's statement was indeed a modest one. "The conduct of our colored boys," declared Col. O'Brien, "is in all ways and respects soldierly."

The executive officer of the 795th is Maj. Bennet G. Gray, member of one of Chicago's oldest families. There is no show about it, nothing of boast or brag, but there is the air of standard setting thruout the area of the 795th.

List of Officers.

Fighters' Writings Reveal Hopes.

Glimpses of life in the service as experienced by an infantryman later killed in action in the Solomons, a young woman in the WAACs, a marine on an island in the South Pacific, a sailor belonging to a construction battalion, and an air corps lieutenant at Pearl Harbor are contained in the first five letters published today in THE TRIBUNE's new Service Letter column.

The letter from the soldier who, under the command of Col. Le Roy Nelson, was killed in the Solomons, was written to Mrs. Gay Mac Laren Backman of Rolling Prairie, Ind., who became his friend thru correspondence as a result of the Adopt a Yank project sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for Christmas, 1941.

LETTER FROM SOLOMONS

From Pvt. Anthony W. Kasmauskas, age 23, 1527 South 49th street, Cicero, who since writing the letter has been killed in action in Guadalcanal, to Mrs. Gay MacLaren Backman of Rolling Prairie, Ind. The father of Pvt. Kasmauskas, a Lithuanian who came to this country, was wounded twice during the Russo-Japanese war.

"I want to thank you for the introduction to M . . . . I am looking forward to hearing from her [and so are my buddies]. From the way you write about her there is no doubt in my mind, but that she is a swell girl, not the bragging type. I'm sure that I'll like her, but what worries me is will she like me. I hope you realize that I'm no Clark Gable or Don Juan. I've aged so much since I've been in the army that I'll look like her father when I get out.

Would Welcome Snow.

"It is funny to hear about snow. This will be the second year that I haven't seen any, but I would gladly see a snow storm instead of a heat wave. It has been raining continuously for three days, but now the sun is coming out to fry us again. One can put on enough clothes to keep warm, but you can't take off enough to keep cool.

"You want to know what I am interested in. Well I'm mostly interested in getting back to the good old U. S. A. If I could get there I would be interested in anything that was American. But that is beside the point. I'm mostly interested in sports, basketball, football, and baseball. I am interested in good old American girls but I am not in a position to let that bother me much, but we do enjoy receiving letters from them. We do talk politics here but the subject is usually girls and the war.

"We don't get to hear much music now because our radio is gone. I haven't forgotten that dinner and dancing date with you and your husband and my girl friend. But she probably won't be my girl friend when I get back. I hear most of the girls are getting married, so we'll just take M—— along. We fellows will have to start life all over again where there are women. You say I don't know how the girls miss the men but you don't know how the men miss the girls and women.

Anxious to See Chicago.

"I suppose Chicago hasn't been very pleasant with the streets torn up but it would sure look pleasant to me. I am looking forward to marching down Michigan avenue with my bag full of Japs. That will be the happiest day of my life.

"I am looking forward too to that party you are going to give us at Backman pond and so are my buddies. O Boy, we could go for those weinies, stuffed with cheese and wrapped in bacon, in a big way. Everything we get here is in cans, but we are used to it and don't mind the food at all. But it is far from the good old meals that Mom used to make."

WAAC WRITES MOTHER

"Now you have a daughter as well as a son in service. It was no easy task for any of them to pull up roots and go forth. What all of them dream of and look forward to most is coming home some day. Not for glory but for peace and contentment. They picture that home with two lovely people. Really the only friends they have in the world.

Lillian Ruzicka.

"Things for you are also difficult. You have had a full life. Have raised a family. Now you have two lovely grandchildren and another daughter. Your life is devoted to those who remain near you.

Urges Loyalty and Trust.

"This war is being fought because a few people thought they were being picked on. There is no such thing. God moves in mysterious ways and

BITTER FEELING FLARES IN 7TH WARD STRUGGLE

Ryan and Bohling Forces in Hot Campaign.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Growing bitterness marked the 7th ward aldermanic runoff campaign last week. Personal feeling among partisans of the rivals, Mathew J. [Bud] Ryan and Nicholas J. Bohling

Nicholas J. Bohling.

Mathew J. Ryan.

Jr., ran high, resulting often in acrimonious public arguments and occasionally in fist fights, according to complaints from both sides.

From the zeal displayed by the ward organizations it might appear this is a straight party fight, even tho aldermanic elections are supposed to be nonpartisan. Examination of the situation shows this is not so.

In 1939 the ward gave 20,895 votes to Dwight Green for mayor, and only 16,951 to Mayor Kelly. In the mayoral primary last Feb. 23, 20,482 ballots were cast, of which 13,140 were Democratic and 7,342 Republican. In the primary campaign the Democratic machine went all out for Ryan, who is a brother of the Kelly-Nash committeeman, James W. Ryan, chief deputy county clerk, while the G. O. P. organization backed Bohling, attorney, security supervisor of the state industrial commission. Yet Ryan gleaned only 10,194 votes while Bohling got 9,845, or 2,503 more than the G. O. P. vote in the mayoral primary.

Aldermanic Vote High.

That the interest was greater in the aldermanic race was shown by the canvass totals: 20,482 primary ballots cast as against 21,191 for the three aldermanic candidates.

Bohling's supporters attributed his good showing largely to dissatisfaction in the ward with the family flavor of Democratic politics. They declared 7th warders believe that a ward committeeman for the Ryans is enough. The Ryanites, on the other hand, said their aldermanic candidate was forced into a runoff only because of overconfidence, and declared that Democratic workers are now so aroused that Bohling will be snowed under next month.

To the Ryan camp last week went the support of the third candidate, Bernard Goodman [who got 1,252 votes, in spite of the fact that Goodman has run for office hitherto under the G. O. P. banner.

Some Democrats Aid Bohling.

Balancing this, however, Bohling benefited from aid of many of the workers who earlier in the campaign had worked for such Democratic candidates as Norman Eiger, an assistant corporation counsel, and William Rand, sports promoter, both of whom withdrew from the race under pressure from the Ryan controled organization. Especial bitterness was aroused by Eiger's elimination, for he was the nomination of Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes, spokesman for a large section of the Jewish vote in the ward.

Hodes, a stanch follower of Mayor Kelly, took umbrage, nevertheless, at this snub by the Kelly-Nash organization, and a similar one administered him in the 5th ward, to which he moved a few months ago from the 7th. In both wards, therefore, Hodes is aligned against the regular Democratic organization, and the effect is likely to be considerable, observers agreed last week.

Moss Makes Appeal in 5th.

The Hodes candidate in the 5th, Bertram B. Moss, launched an appeal last week for greater independence in ward affairs, assailing the machine leaders for their interference in local situations. Obviously he was referring to the Democratic machine's transference of its indorsement from him to former County Treasurer Horace G. Lindheimer a few days before the Feb. 23 election. Lindheimer is the other runoff candidate.

"There is a tradition of independence in the 5th ward," Moss said. "I feel sure the intelligent voters will not let that tradition lapse, particularly at a time when the cause of independence is being assailed from all sides."

Moss charged that one reason he was sidetracked was that his independence didn't suit Patrick A. Nash and Al Horan, Democratic leaders whom Moss blames for the indorsement switch.

"It irked these master minds that this ward should fail to conform to their decrees," Moss said. "It spoiled their picture. So they picked a candidate who would—and does—hold still while they harness him. But now they're faced with the infinitely harder job of harnessing 5th ward voters, who never have got used to harness."

Turn Scrap Into Knives for Marines

Members of the Kiwanis club of Hyde Park are turning scrap steel and discarded files into combat knives which will be given to the marines. Busy at work transforming a piece of scrap steel into metal are, left to right: Charles L. Leindecker, club president; Dr. W. S. Kelly, originator of the idea; George X. Rosenthal and O. G. Butler.

COMBAT KNIVES FASHIONED FROM DISCARDED FILES

Kiwanis Group Seeks to Fill Marine Need.

Members of the Kiwanis club of Hyde Park are turning discarded files into combat knives which probably will be used by members of the marine corps. The unexpected prevalence of hand to hand combat, according to Dr. W. S. Kelly, club member and sponsor of the project, has created a need for the knives.

Dr. Kelly got the idea for the project after he had been told by a marine sergeant of the scarcity on the west coast of materials to make such knives. The marine corps is not conducting a drive for knives, but is accepting all suitable knives which are given to them.

500 Knife Capacity.

Work began last week in shops of members of the club. Charles L. Leindecker, club president, estimated that members of the club could produce some 500 knives within a few months.

Tools needed to make the knives, as outlined by Dr. Kelly, include only a blowtorch, drill press, and grinding device. The processes follow: first the file is heated to a dull cherry red, held at this temperature for five minutes, and then quenched in cold water. This hardens the metal.

Two quarter inch holes are drilled near one end for the handle. The file is ground on a carborundum wheel to a knife shape, sharpened on one side, and with a sharp edge on the back for about two inches from the point. A commercial finish is not necessary. The blades are from 5 to 12 inches in length.

Reorganized Committee.

The project has led to the reorganization of the agriculture and industry committee of the club. The name has been changed to the industry committee and membership is earned by working on the project. Other committees are appointed.

Working with Dr. Kelly in organizing the project are Dr. F. L. Condren, Frank B. Platt, J. D. Levin, and Fred W. Patterson.

Leindecker reported that the knives would possibly be distributed, when needed, thru members and sons of members who are now in military service. There are three club members in service. They are Paul Douglas, former alderman; John K. Chatlain, and Louis Dehmlow.

Sons in Service.

LAWN AND GARDEN CONTEST OPEN IN WOODLAWN AREA

'43 Regulations Provide for War Plots.

Plans are being completed for the sixth annual lawn and garden contest of the Woodlawn Property Owners' league, which will open with the preparation of the soil for planting. Formerly a contest to promote beautification of Woodlawn properties, this year the field of competition has been broadened to include war gardens. Last week Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Cleeton of 6050 Dorchester avenue were named chairmen of the committee in charge of the contest.

To stimulate interest in vegetable growing—vitally necessary as long as point rationing is in force—the league has purchased vegetable seed which will be distributed to the contestants. Competition is open to all residents of Woodlawn, which is bounded by 60th and 67th streets, Cottage Grove and Stony Island avenues.

War Need Hastens Contest.

League officials reported the addition of war gardens to the contest was one of the principal reasons for beginning the contest early this spring. Past contests have opened in midsummer.

As in past contests, judging will be by representatives of the park district. The annual banquet, which has climaxed the contest, this year is a war casualty. In its stead will probably be an exhibition of pictures, flowers, and vegetables to be held in the Woodlawn area.

Prizes will be awarded for both flower and vegetable gardens and to well kept grounds.

Plans are being made to take photographs of plots before they are planted to be compared with pictures of the ground after the vegetables or flowers have grown.

Efforts will be made to convert vacant lots into communal war gardens. Another plan which is being discussed is to have—in the case of a long building which has a series of back lawns—plots of various vegetables which would be shared, instead of a few of several kinds of vegetables being grown in each of the plots.

The area in which the contest is conducted has one of the most dense populations of all the city. It is 1.4 square miles in area and has a population of 54,000, which is from 30 to 40 per cent higher than in other sections of the city. There are 87 blocks in the community.

Open to Public Buildings.

Not only is the contest for home owners and apartment buildings, but it is open to public buildings, churches, and institutions.

Members of the committee headed by Mr. and Mrs. Cleeton are: Mrs. Ida M. Headley, 6159 University avenue; Mrs. Paul I. Pierson, 6612 University avenue; Mr. and Mrs. E. N. COAST GUARD HAS MANY CIVILIANS IN NEW BRANCH

Fill Temporary Reserve in Spare Hours.

Steel mill workers, manufacturers, bricklayers, lawyers, teachers, plumbers, dentists, as well as shipyard machinists and electrical engineers, are learning how to aid the coast guard in war time at the Calumet park fieldhouse every Monday evening, under leadership of the Calumet harbor flotilla of the coast guard auxiliary.

They are among hundreds of men in training in the Chicago area. The 56 trainees, all 1st class seamen in the coast guard's new temporary reserve, include also a former marine and a former coast guardsman. Many have defense jobs in the day time.

Study Rules of Sea.

A seven week training course similar to that received by new coast guardsmen is being given the temporary reservists. Among the subjects are safety at sea, ropes and knots, anchors, rules of the road, signaling, buoys, and navigation. On the subject of safety, they learn how to prevent fire, foundering, and accidents between ships, and what to do when a man overboard alarm is sounded.

Upon completion of the course the reservists, all volunteers as are their instructors, will be given ratings comparable to their ability. Office workers will become yeomen, truck drivers, or mechanics will be made machinist's mates, etc.

Altho the temporary reservists are all to be provided with coast guard uniforms, they receive no pay and are not exempt from the draft.

Three Hours Nightly.

Three and a half hours are devoted to training each class night. Instruction is provided by a dozen of the 30 members of the Calumet auxiliary flotilla, which consists of yachtsmen in the south and southwest sides.

Martin Denash, now a lieutenant [j. g.] in the coast guard reserve, organized the Calumet flotilla just two years before Pearl Harbor. The group was one of the first in Chicago, following the Diversey harbor flotilla, first in the nation. Lt. Denash, a veteran of the British merchant marine, was the Calumet flotilla's first commander.

Other members of the flotilla now in the services are William Ellinghausen, former vice commander, now an able seaman in the merchant marine; Lt. Thomas Ahern, also a former vice commander, now in the army medical corps; Boatswain's Mate John Rietz, U. S. C. G. R.; Edwin W. Sawyer, also in the coast guard reserve, and Quartermaster Norman Boysen of the navy's "Seabees."

Entertain 1,500-2,000 Each Week-End.

A group of 150 energetic south side women have been providing food and entertainment for from 1,500 to 2,000 men in military service each week-end at the MacArthur canteen, 53d street and Hyde Park boulevard, since last October. In fact the women have spent so much time organizing and operating the canteen that their husbands good naturedly refer to themselves as "canteen widowers."

Founders and operators of the canteen are members of the MacArthur chapter of the Women's Defense Corps of America. The chapter is headed by Mrs. Adele Garfield, 5100 Cornell avenue. Other officers, all of whom have been active in canteen work, are: Mrs. Idela Gorden of the Flamingo hotel, second lieutenant; Mrs. Walter Wolfe, 4915 Drexel boulevard, financial secretary; Mrs. Jack Horwitz, 1380 Hyde Park boulevard, canteen chairman, and Mrs. Hyman Silverman, 5480 Cornell avenue, purchasing chairman.

Serve Buffet Style.

All food is free to the service men. Meals are served buffet style in the canteen headquarters, which is in the East End Park hotel. Other facilities include game and reading rooms, and a kitchen.

The canteen has been the principal project of the chapter. Members cleaned out and decorated the rooms of the canteen. Members report, that while their husbands refer to themselves as "canteen widowers," they also have been of much assistance in operating the center.

Food, Fruit to Hospital.

In addition to providing food and entertainment to men at the canteen the chapter sends food, fruit, and magazines to men in the nearby army hospital, which was formerly the Chicago Beach hotel. Support of the canteen comes from donations.

BUNDESEN HELPS M'CARTHY TRACE RECORD OF BIRTH

BergenBrat Offers Reward —or Hush Money.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

This ad appeared in the Business Personals column in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

WANTED—Information concerning my parents; liberal reward or hush money as the case may be.
CHARLIE McCARTHY, NBC, Hollywood.

A letter received by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, disclosed the reason for the parental quest by Bergen's brat:

"Dear Dr. Bundesen: I take Bergen's pre-war portable in lap and beg and implore your services as a kind of statistical bloodhound. I am in need of some one of your high standing and authority to sniff thru the birth records of Chicago and locate my birth certificate. I have been promised a situation in aviation, but there is only one hitch between me and getting my lunch grapplers on that pay roll. They don't believe I was born. I have to prove I am a foundling who isn't a lostling. Now that's where you come in.

"Bergen tells me he found me on his doorstep, or do you think we should investigate that? Assuming that you will undertake the search at once, we can agree on some deal later. Don't bother getting any letters of character reference. I can take care of that because Skinny [Dugan] can sign names in six different handwritings.

Can Stay Within Law.

"And by the by, if you should find my parents and things don't look too good for me—what I mean is, if my old man is out of work, I will appreciate you forgetting the whole thing.

"After all, I am not unhappy in my present situation with Bergen, but as a practical professional man you can appreciate what a fine bargaining position it would put me in with Bergen if some one else claimed me, too.

"I promise you this will be worth while for both of us, and we still will be within the law. You have my word for it and you know what that's worth."

Dr. Bundesen has written Charlie that he is instituting the search. He added that Charlie's search for work was so at variance with his reputation as he knew it that as a medical man he feared that Charlie was ill. He suggested a week's rest.

Suggests Castor Oil.

"In the meantime," he added, "take a daily dose of castor oil." If the whole bottle is not consumed, he suggested, the remainder might be applied to airplane motors when the job is landed.

"Remember Bergen has been good to you," he concluded. "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush even if he bears some resemblance to a bald eagle."

Tip to Dr. Bundesen: No need to look around Venetian blind factories for Charlie's family tree. In an unguarded moment five years ago Bergen disclosed that Charlie was hewn from a hunk of pine by one Theodore Mack, a wood carver, now dead, on Van Buren street.

we must help Him by giving all the love, loyalty, and trust we have to our own flesh and blood. We can only get out of life what we put in. Sometimes what we get doesn't seem like a just reward but if we are sensible we realize it is.

Warns Against Fears.

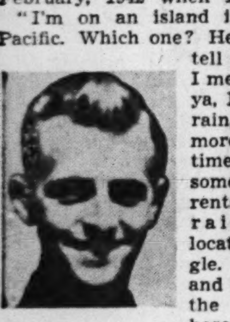
"I believe if you will think this over carefully you will find that it was just a bad dream you had. Start all over again and try harder this time. Each time one of these fears comes to you cast it aside and try just a little harder. You are a sensible person and I know you love us all very much. Try trusting us very much. Please remember we wouldn't be in this thing is we didn't think you were worth fighting for. But you must fight for us too in your quiet way on the home front.

"I'm trusting you, Mother, and may God bless you."

MARINE WRITES MOTHER

From Pvt. Fred R. Weinberger, a marine, to his mother, Mrs. Fred Weinberger, 7007 26th place, Berwyn. Weinberger, an only child, enlisted in February, 1942 when 19 years old.

"I'm on an island in the South Pacific. Which one? Heh, heh won't tell ya. What do I mean, won't tell ya, I can't. Rain, rain, rain, and more rain. Sometimes a little bit; sometimes torrents, but always rain. We are located in a jungle. It's very hot and damp. When the sun shines here it really shines but the air is always moist. I've been getting every itch known to man since I got here but nothing else has bothered me. I'm a radiant picture of health. Skinny but healthy. You sweat off all your weight in this heat but we're getting used to it.



Fred Weinberger.

"In our tent at night we talk over old times and the good old days. You'd be surprised how much there is to talk about. Things you never thought you would remember. Newspapers and magazines are swell. The papers take a fella right back home.

A SOUTH SEA ISLAND

From Robert Zelkin, 3d class petty officer in the navy, assigned to a construction battalion in the Southwest Pacific, to his brother and sisters. Letter submitted by Mrs. J. Zelkin, 3443 Belle Plaine avenue.

"It sure is quiet tonight. There is a slight breeze to take away the heat of the day. There's a pretty moon and light fluffy clouds. I can hear the faint tones of a sailor playing on his saxophone. We have the setting, the mood, and the music to make it the romantic spot it might appear to be and yet one gets little fascination for this island because for all its peaceful look it sure fools you.

Robert Zelkin.

"We have wooden floors in our tent now and we even built our own shower. We do our washing out of ammunition cans. Our greatest danger is falling coconuts. We are always dodging them and so we give the natives a candy bar to climb the trees and shake down all the loose ones.

Chewing Gum Stops Leaks.

"O, yes, I must tell you what use we make of chewing gum, when we have it. There are holes in our tent for the ropes that tie back the flaps. When it rains the water comes thru the holes. Yes, you've guessed it, we stuff the holes with chewing gum and presto — it's waterproof.

"I can stand anything out here but I don't know what I'd do if anything went wrong with any of you at home. So God keep you and hope to see you soon."

FROM PEARL HARBOR

From Lt. H. A. Ripkey, who was wounded in action at Pearl Harbor, to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Whelan, 6705 31st street, Berwyn. Lt. Ripkey has returned to the United States and is now stationed at Camp Hulen, Texas.

"I'll take this opportunity to wish you a belated very happy birthday, grandma, dear. I thought of you especially yesterday. I'll bet that silvery hair is prettier than ever now. What do you think, gramp?

"Altho we are constantly 'on the alert' with our men at their guns we find time to work in a game of handball on the courts, a stone's throw away. Daily we are becoming stronger, better, and more guns, more men, etc.

"How's the Windy City?"

"How's the old Windy City, anyway? I'd love to be in a good Chicago blizzard now. It sure looks funny to see the beautiful beaches of Oahu strung with barb wire and trenches.

"I hope that you people at home will keep your spirits high and your faith strong, because that is the best way you can serve the men away from home. The greatest concern of all of us is not ourselves but the loved ones at home."

A Big Response Greets Tribune Letter Contest

Response to the appeal of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for interesting war time letters was so spontaneous that five letters from the first mail received were selected in time for publication today. For each of the chosen letters $5 will be paid the sender.

Five of the letters that are considered best by the judges will be printed each week. Senders should bear in mind the following:

Letters or excerpts from them should not be longer than 200 to 250 words.

Copies of letters—not the originals—should be submitted as THE TRIBUNE cannot accept responsibility for letters lost in transmission, nor return the letters.

To add to the interest, it is suggested that a photograph of the letter writer and a brief biography of the writer accompany the letter. Do not send framed photographs or scrapbooks. Those requesting return of the pictures should write the request and address on the back of the pictures but THE TRIBUNE regrets that it cannot accept responsibility for such return.

TIME NOW RIPE TO CHECK YOUR HOME INTERIOR

Give House First Aid at All Points of Wear.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[Please send stamped, addressed envelope to this department if you wish more detailed information on products mentioned here.]

March is half gone and the time is ripe to check on the home and give it first aid wherever signs of wear and deterioration are found.

The weather may stay too cold for several weeks for much exterior work, but there's always the equally important interior to check.

How about breaks and cracks in plaster walls? These can be patched and redecorated, or covered with a new surfacing. Insulating boards will serve you well if you wish to add warmth to your house as well as new decorations.

Build Food Storage.

There'll be plenty of incentive to urge the home canner on to real effort this spring and summer and it isn't difficult to build a food storage room. An excellent place for this, if the house has a finished basement, is a special storeroom below stairs.

A carpenter or home owner with a talent for tinkering and tools can build such a room from materials that are available. You probably will need a room five or six feet wide and nearly as long and you can separate it from the rest of the basement by a tight wall. Then fit a door into one of the partition walls and provide a ceiling of the same material as the walls.

You can use one of the many insulating boards for both the walls and partitions. If possible the storeroom should be built around one or more outside windows so you can control the air circulation and ventilation to some extent at least. And cut off all the heat possible from the basement proper and from the room overhead.

Patch Cellar Cracks.

Inspect cellar walls and ceilings and floors carefully. There may be cracks to be filled, in walls or floor or between floor and walls where leakage often occurs. You can patch these cracks with a stiff mortar of 1 part cement to 3 parts sand, or check with your hardware or paint store in regard to patching compounds to do the work.

Examine pipes and all metal work in the basement for possible rust. Where rust is found use a wire brush or sandpaper down to the metal and then protect with paint. There are rust resisting paints which can be applied over a rusty surface and depended on to stop further rust.

If your cellar walls seem to leak they may only be "sweating." Spring and summer aggravate this condensation problem. If the day is damp you can keep the cellar windows shut. To eliminate sweating you can use lath and plaster or plaster board set on furring strips at least an inch thick. And for good measure, if you suspect any dampness in the walls, coat inner surface with tar or liquid asphalt before you apply the lining.

It is good insurance to use plaster board or lath and plaster or insulating board as a ceiling for your basement.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, March 15

Don't buy seeds too soon, for there will be plenty for all. You may buy, but make a plan first and order only enough to meet your needs.

Many small gardens had better be used for smaller leaf vegetables, such as lettuce, radishes, onions from sets, mustard greens, and similar kinds. Root crops should not be grown unless the soil is suitable. Potatoes and corn should not be grown.

Remember that soil conditions are the first essential for growing plants; a sunny place also is necessary, at least, six hours each day. It is a good plan to spade under manures, if they can be obtained, but if not, use shredded cattle manure, spent mushroom manure; sludge will add a little plant food to the soil and some humus, for it is organic in character.

Tuesday, March 16

Do not be in a hurry to plant, for April 10 is the time for the first outdoor sowing, and the weather conditions regulate the date. You may sow tomatoes, peppers, cabbage, and broccoli in flats or seed pans for early planting outdoors.

However, do not spade the garden until the soil is in condition. Sow radishes as soon as the ground can be spaded; before spading spread two pounds of fertilizer over each 100 square feet of area. Make the sowings at frequent intervals to give you the best and finest radishes at all times.

Wednesday, March 17

In smoky areas in cities or congested areas that are hardly suited to vegetable growing, the following may be tried satisfactorily: Radishes, leaf lettuce, onions from sets, beets, carrots, Swiss chard, kale, a few parsley plants and possibly turnips. Don't try to grow potatoes and sweet corn, for they take too much room.

Thursday, March 18

It is not too late to start a hotbed in which to grow early plants for the garden. The gardener, however, has a difficult time to obtain manure to supply artificial heat thru fermentation, hence it may be best to wait and use the frame as a coldframe and sow the seeds later.

Friday, March 19

Many persons want a few parsley plants for seasoning and garnishing, but the seeds sometimes fail to grow. Soak the seeds overnight and sow radish seed thinly in the same row. The radishes mark the row and will grow so rapidly they can be pulled and thinned long before the parsley appears, but they will not interfere with it.

Saturday, March 20

It is almost time to repot house plants. Some, like the palms, need only to have some of the soil removed and replaced with rich compost to enable them to flourish.

Those not in need of repotting should be given a little more water and plant food, for they are showing renewed activity after the winter's rest. Do not fill the pot too full of soil or the water will run off, the center being unwatered.

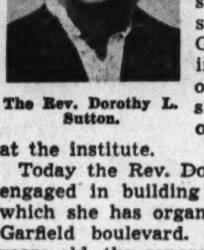
YOUTHFUL NEGRO WOMAN PASTOR'S CHURCH EXPANDS

Stresses Problems of Young People.

South Side Negro young people are swelling the congregation of the church of the Rev. Dorothy L. Sutton—an ambition of her years of study, climaxed five years ago in the Northwestern university graduate school and the Garrett Biblical institute. Just out of her teens she then was the only Negro girl at the institute.



The Rev. Dorothy L. Sutton.

Today the Rev. Dorothy Sutton is engaged in building up the church which she has organized at 18 East Garfield boulevard. Less than two years old, the congregation numbers more than 325, two-thirds of whom are under 30 years of age.

Study Youth Needs.

The aim of her church, the Commonwealth Community, is to meet social and personal needs of Negro youth on a practical basis. Her sermons are not of the "revivalist" type.

"I try to translate biblical parables and events into practical, every day experiences," she explains.

The "church school," for children 3 to 18 years old, is conducted Sunday mornings by Miss Naomi Smith, 5301 Wabash avenue, one of Rev. Sutton's volunteer workers. Regular services start at 11 o'clock in the morning, and a vesper hour at 6 o'clock in the evening brings visiting speakers.

Choir Has 20 Voices.

The church choir of 20 voices is led by Mrs. Eula Brandon, 5032 South Park way, a music teacher. Mrs. Bessie Jackson, 5512 Wabash avenue, heads the church's Service guild. The Arts and Dramatic guild, consisting of young people 14 to 23 years old, is sponsored by Oscar Rohadfox, and the Altar guild is led by Mrs. Brunetta Eason, 5440 Michigan avenue, a school teacher.

The Rev. Miss Sutton's "cabinet," which governs the church in place of the conventional deacons and trustees, includes William Walker, 4828 Michigan avenue, chairman; John H. Minor, 4539 South Park way, treasurer; Miss Evelyn Carter, 3633 South Park avenue, secretary, and Mrs. Katherine Moore, 6539 Vernon avenue, clerk. Mr. Minor helped the woman pastor organize the church in May, 1941.

Boy Scout Troop 597, comprising 30 members, is sponsored by the church. Winston Minor, a nephew of the church treasurer, is their scoutmaster.

Heads National Youth Group.

The Rev. Miss Sutton is national president of the Community church youth group, a member of the Chicago Urban league women's committee, secretary of the Community Minister's alliance of Chicago, chaplain of the Community Burial association, and secretary of the United Church Committee on Civic Improvement, an interracial and interdenominational organization.

She graduated from the Frances Willard elementary school, and in 1932 from Englewood High school.

After completing a short business course at Washburne commercial school, she entered the Northern Baptist Theological seminary, finishing their five year course in three. She became the seminary's first woman minister in its 30 year history, graduating in 1938 with a degree of bachelor of sacred theology. She was ordained a minister in 1937, while still in her teens.

To finance her education she worked for a time in a south side chain store, served as pastor of the junior church at the Cosmopolitan Community church, and bound books for the NYA at the seminary.

Won Master's Degree.

Without hesitation because of her age, sex, or race, she entered Northwestern university's graduate school and the Garrett institute, late in 1938. She graduated in June, 1940, with a degree of master of arts in religious education. Her thesis was "The Community Church Movement Among Negroes in Chicago."

The University of Chicago awarded the Rev. Sutton a scholarship in theology and divinity in August of 1940, and she completed the course the following summer. She still is at work on her book length dissertation, "The Young Negro's God."

While at the university she became the only Negro woman member of Dean Charles Gilkey's Chapel union.

Soldiers Revel in Even Army Discipline.

the 184th was formed, and which for 40 years was the pride of Chicago, of Illinois, and Michigan avenue at the grand parade, dominated the area which was the show place of Custer. Both the 184th and its famous band, to which Sousa himself often listened, were severed and dispatched to southern camps.

The first battalion of the 184th was sent to Camp Butner, North Carolina, and is now known as the 930th field artillery. It is commanded by Lt. Col. Wendell T. Derricks. Its majors are Raymond Watkins and Kenneth E. Campbell. The second battalion, now known as the 931st field artillery, with Lt. Col. Marcus H. Ray commanding, and Majors Edward D. Wimp and Percy R. Turnley, was dispatched to Camp Forrest, Tennessee. Colonels and majors are Chicago men.

Custer Historic Post.

Custer, an old and historic military center, is the democracy of training for war. Here the boys, white and colored, come and go at will without clash or friction. Competition in sports and recreation is keen and lively, and there is a post pride in the basketball team of the 795th, which is undisputed champion of these parts. Sound comradeship is in evidence, and the proprieties are respected without quarrel.

Capt. Richard L. Jones of Chicago, a former manager of a south side department store, is chief assistant special service officer at Custer. He is not the final authority in his department, but is usually the final word. His duties are not restricted and he shares office with his chief, Capt. George O. Kribs, a veteran of the first World war.

"I would not know what to do without Capt. Jones," declared Capt. Kribs. Col. Shank, commander of the post, went further. "I don't try doing without Capt. Jones," said Col. Shank, a soldier of a long, distinguished record.

"The Custer Atmosphere."

One of the crack sanitary companies at Custer is commanded by Capt. Adonis Patterson, a native of Battle Creek, who gave up a medical practice to rejoin the army. The work of his company has received high recognition.

The Custer atmosphere may be judged from the experience of a young Texan, a white lieutenant, who was assigned to Capt. Patterson's company. After two months at Custer, the Texas lieutenant was transferred. In attempting to say good-by to his colored comrades with whom he had been closely associated, words failed him. With tears streaming down his face, he pulled away with but a salute of affection.

Other military centers may be better and fairer ground, but Custer, altho claiming no perfection, is a bright spot for Uncle Sam's Negro soldiers.

MARTIN LUTHER CHURCH PLANS SILVER JUBILEE

Hear Former Pastor at Services Today.

Martin Luther Lutheran church, founded March 17, 1918, in a small temporary building on the site of the present church at New England and Addison avenues, will celebrate its silver anniversary in special services today and Wednesday.

The Rev. A. H. Fabian.

Church and congregation have grown since the day 25 years ago when the first building was erected. Members who remember that day of dedication during the last months of World War I. firmly hope that the anniversary celebration this week will serve as prophetic a prelude to victory.

Former Pastor to Preach.

At the regular Sunday service at 11 o'clock today the Rev. Arthur H. Fabian, pastor, will turn the pulpit over to the Rev. Paul Nordsiek, former pastor of the church and now of the Redeemer Lutheran church in Aurora. He will deliver the sermon.

A banquet in observance of the silver anniversary will be held at 6 o'clock tonight at the church. Dr. George Koehler, pastor of the Luther Memorial church, Wilson and Campbell avenues, will make the principal address.

To Hear Mission Society Head.

At 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night at a special service at the church Dr. William Buch, superintendent of the Illinois Inner Mission society, will review the progress of the church and its contributions to the society of the community it serves.

HONOR GOLDEN WEDDING COUPLE AT AVONDALE

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Trebing Sr. of Cary recently celebrated their golden wedding at a surprise reception given them by their friends at the Avondale Masonic temple. Married in Chicago in 1893, they have five children and five grandchildren.

Mrs. Trebing was born in Chicago May 15, 1872; Mr. Trebing in Kalamazoo, Mich., July 26, 1871.

Mr. Trebing, who came to Chicago when he was 14 years old, has been engaged in the wholesale jewelry business since that time. For the last 21 years he has been the active head of his own business. During the régime of Mayor Carter H. Harrison he represented the old 27th ward on the city council.

Women of Moose Plan Session in Albany Park

Albany Park chapter, Women of the Moose, will hold social service chapter night at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening at the Moose hall, 4350 North Pulaski road. Mrs. Helen Brietzike, 2950 Fletcher street, is the chairman in charge. Mrs. William Wolff, war service chairman, will present the speaker, Mrs. Arthur L. Bergbom, war service chairman of the 7th district Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, who will speak on women in war work.

The Irish on Street Car Lines Tune Up for St. Patrick's Day

"When Irish eyes are smiling—" rolls out in barber shop harmony as the boys at the North avenue carbarns of the Chicago Surface Lines practice up for St. Patrick's day. Of the 1,600 men who are employed at the North avenue barns, about one-fourth are Irish—many born in the Emerald Isle. Thumping out the melody is Herbert V. Callahan, 4725 Maypole avenue, who has the North avenue run. Callahan was born in Iowa, but both his parents came from Ireland. In the quartet are, left to right: Daniel Kelly, 2238 North Kedvale avenue; Thomas Daly, 4027 North Mason avenue; William A. Gillies, 4710 West End avenue, and John Dolan, 4157 Wilcox street. Kelly was born in County Kerry, Gillies in County Durham, and Dolan in County Carlow. Daly was born in this country, but his parents were natives of County Cork.

The men at the North avenue carbarns are proud of the 851 Chicago Surface Lines employes in the service. Pointing to the starred service flag is Nicholas Foley, 5143 Cullom avenue, who came from County Waxford 36 years ago, and has worked for the company for 23 years. Foley operates a crane in the company shops. One of his six children, Nicholas Jr., 18, is in uniform. Foley is a board member of local No. 241 of the company union. Behind him stand, left to right, Edward Cannon, 4939 Potomac avenue; James O'Mahoney, 4903 Van Buren street; John N. Jacoby, 7756 Ardmore avenue, and Michael Hartnett, 1033 North Lawler avenue. Cannon comes from County Donegal, has been with the company for 26 years, and is the father of Maureen Cannon, musical comedy and screen starlet. O'Mahoney was born in County Cork, Jacoby's mother is a native of County Clare, and Hartnett came from County Limerick 17 years ago. (Story on page 3.)

ARLINGTON GROUP PLANS MIDWEEK LENTEN SUPPERS

The Lenten meetings will be held in the church gymnasium, where each family will share its meal. The suppers will be served at 6:45 o'clock each Wednesday evening, and the fellowship service will begin at 8 o'clock with the singing of familiar songs.

List Classes at Eckhart Park on War Time Meals

The consumers' information service of the OCD has arranged a series of three nutrition schools to be presented on consecutive Mondays, beginning tomorrow evening, in the Eckhart park auditorium, Noble street and Chicago avenue. Miss Ann L. Olson, home economist and dietitian, will conduct the schools. The sessions will be keyed to wartime rationing limitations and will tell how housewives may still prepare balanced meals for their families. Each session will start at 8 o'clock and is free to the public.

Club War Service Leader Talks to Norwegian Group

The Norwegian Woman's club will hear a talk by Mrs. Arthur L. Bergbom, 7th district war service chairman, at the club's meeting Wednesday afternoon at 2512 North Kimball avenue. Mrs. H. Rye Haugam is program chairman, and Mrs. George Chenal will preside.

PRESBYTERIANS SEEK $1,500,000 IN ONE DAY DRIVE

The 50,000 Presbyterians of Chicago today at church services will seek to raise $1,500,000 for city religious and social institutions, national causes, and for global purposes on 16 different fronts.

The Rev. Clarence Wright is general chairman of the drive. Six committees of three persons each are assisting him.

Eighteen welfare and religious organizations in Chicago are to be benefitted, in addition to local activities of the 119 churches comprising the Presbytery of Chicago.

Northwest side institutions to be aided include the Erie Neighborhood house, Samaritan house, Peniel Community center, Association house, Laird Neighborhood house, and Onward Neighborhood house.

Northwest Town OCD Plans Induction Today

The Northwest Town community of the office of civilian defense will hold a mass induction of OCD volunteers at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Polish Roman Catholic hall, 1012 Noble street. John C. Gordon, community commander, will preside at the services.

Johannes Svee Sees World: In Navy 35 Years

Johannes Svee.

Coming to Chicago from his native Norway when only six years old, Svee attended elementary school and then after several years' work as a drill press operator he signed up as a member of the crew of the old S. S. Christopher Columbus, a Great Lakes passenger ship.

That move decided his future.

Saw World and Men.

He enlisted in the navy in 1899. From then on Svee saw the world and many of its most important figures.

He made the march up Broadway when Adm. Dewey returned to America after his victory over the Spanish at Manila bay.

He was in the ranks at the funeral ceremonies for President William McKinley and later at the burial services for Adm. Sampson, hero of the battle against the Spanish at Santiago, Cuba.

In the first World war, Svee served in a ground crew with the northern bomber group of the naval air force near Cape Gris Nez, France.

Served on Food Ship.

After the war he was aboard a naval auxiliary, the former Aphrodite, yacht of Vincent Astor, when she pulled into Hamburg, Germany, with Comm. William D. Leahy.

He organized the seaman guard at Glenview. Now assistant to the provost marshal in charge of the main gate, he was elected recently president of the Chief Petty Officers' club at the station.

A Big Response Greets Tribune Letter Contest

Response to the appeal of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for interesting war time letters was so spontaneous that five letters from the first mail received were selected in time for publication today. For each of the chosen letters $5 will be paid the sender.

Five of the letters that are considered best by the judges will be printed each week. Senders should bear in mind the following:

Letters or excerpts from them should not be longer than 200 to 250 words.

Copies of letters—not the originals—should be submitted as THE TRIBUNE cannot accept responsibility for letters lost in transmission, nor return the letters.

To add to the interest, it is suggested that a photograph of the letter writer and a brief biography of the writer accompany the letter. Do not send framed photographs or scrapbooks. Those requesting return of the pictures should write the request and address on the back of the pictures but THE TRIBUNE regrets that it cannot accept responsibility for such return.

GIRLS FAVORITE SOLDIER TOPIC IN SOLOMONS

Fighters' Writings Reveal Hopes.

Glimpses of life in the service as experienced by an infantryman later killed in action in the Solomons, a young woman in the WAACs, a marine on an island in the South Pacific, a sailor belonging to a construction battalion, and an air corps lieutenant at Pearl Harbor are contained in the first five letters published today in THE TRIBUNE's new Service Letter column.

The letter from the soldier who, under the command of Col. Le Roy Nelson, was killed in the Solomons, was written to Mrs. Gay Mac Laren Backman of Rolling Prairie, Ind., who became his friend thru correspondence as a result of the Adopt a Yank project sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for Christmas, 1941.

LETTER FROM SOLOMONS

From Pvt. Anthony W. Kasmauskas, age 23, 1527 South 49th street, Cicero, who since writing the letter has been killed in action in Guadalcanal, to Mrs. Gay MacLaren Backman of Rolling Prairie, Ind. The father of Pvt. Kasmauskas, a Lithuanian who came to this country, was wounded twice during the Russo-Japanese war.

"I want to thank you for the introduction to M . . . . I am looking forward to hearing from her [and so are my buddies]. From the way you write about her there is no doubt in my mind, but that she is a swell girl, not the bragging type. I'm sure that I'll like her, but what worries me is will she like me. I hope you realize that I'm no Clark Gable or Don Juan. I've aged so much since I've been in the army that I'll look like her father when I get out.

Would Welcome Snow.

"It is funny to hear about snow. This will be the second year that I haven't seen any, but I would gladly see a snow storm instead of a heat wave. It has been raining continuously for three days, but now the sun is coming out to fry us again. One can put on enough clothes to keep warm, but you can't take off enough to keep cool.

"You want to know what I am interested in. Well I'm mostly interested in getting back to the good old U. S. A. If I could get there I would be interested in anything that was American. But that is beside the point. I'm mostly interested in sports, basketball, football, and baseball. I am interested in good old American girls but I am not in a position to let that bother me much, but we do enjoy receiving letters from them. We do talk politics here but the subject is usually girls and the war.

"We don't get to hear much music now because our radio is gone. I haven't forgotten that dinner and dancing date with you and your husband and my girl friend. But she probably won't be my girl friend when I get back. I hear most of the girls are getting married, so we'll just take M—— along. We fellows will have to start life all over again where there are women. You say I don't know how the girls miss the men but you don't know how the men miss the girls and women.

Anxious to See Chicago.

"I suppose Chicago hasn't been very pleasant with the streets torn up but it would sure look pleasant to me. I am looking forward to marching down Michigan avenue with my bag full of Japs. That will be the happiest day of my life.

"I am looking forward too to that party you are going to give us at Backman pond and so are my buddies. O Boy, we could go for those weinies, stuffed with cheese and wrapped in bacon, in a big way. Everything we get here is in cans, but we are used to it and don't mind the food at all. But it is far from the good old meals that Mom used to make."

WAAC WRITES MOTHER

"Now you have a daughter as well as a son in service. It was no easy task for any of them to pull up roots and go forth. What all of them dream of and look forward to most is coming home some day. Not for glory but for peace and contentment. They picture that home with two lovely people. Really the only friends they have in the world.

Lillian Ruzicka.

"Things for you are also difficult. You have had a full life. Have raised a family. Now you have two lovely grandchildren and another daughter. Your life is devoted to those who remain near you.

Urges Loyalty and Trust.

"This war is being fought because a few people thought they were being picked on. There is no such thing. God moves in mysterious ways and we must help Him by giving all the love, loyalty, and trust we have to our own flesh and blood. We can only get out of life what we put in. Sometimes what we get doesn't seem like a just reward but if we are sensible we realize it is.

Warns Against Fears.

"I believe if you will think this over carefully you will find that it was just a bad dream you had. Start all over again and try harder this time. Each time one of these fears comes to you cast it aside and try just a little harder. You are a sensible person and I know you love us all very much. Try trusting us very much. Please remember we wouldn't be in this thing is we didn't think you were worth fighting for. But you must fight for us too in your quiet way on the home front.

"I'm trusting you, Mother, and may God bless you."

MARINE WRITES MOTHER

From Pvt. Fred R. Weinberger, a marine, to his mother, Mrs. Fred Weinberger, 7007 26th place, Berwyn. Weinberger, an only child, enlisted in February, 1942 when 19 years old.

Fred Weinberger.

"I'm on an island in the South Pacific. Which one? Heh, heh won't tell ya. What do I mean, won't tell ya, I can't. Rain, rain, rain, and more rain. Sometimes a little bit; sometimes torrents, but always rain. We are located in a jungle. It's very hot and damp. When the sun shines here it really shines but the air is always moist. I've been getting every itch known to man since I got here but nothing else has bothered me. I'm a radiant picture of health. Skinny but healthy. You sweat off all your weight in this heat but we're getting used to it.

"In our tent at night we talk over old times and the good old days. You'd be surprised how much there is to talk about. Things you never thought you would remember. Newspapers and magazines are swell. The papers take a fella right back home.

FROM PEARL HARBOR

From Lt. H. A. Ripkey, who was wounded in action at Pearl Harbor, to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Whelan, 6705 31st street, Berwyn. Lt. Ripkey has returned to the United States and is now stationed at Camp Hulen, Texas.

"I'll take this opportunity to wish you a belated very happy birthday, grandma, dear. I thought of you especially yesterday. I'll bet that silvery hair is prettier than ever now. What do you think, gramp?

"Altho we are constantly 'on the alert' with our men at their guns we find time to work in a game of handball on the courts, a stone's throw away. Daily we are becoming stronger, better, and more guns, more men, etc.

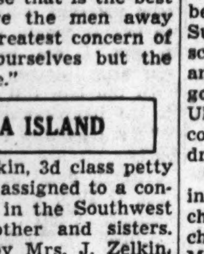
"How's the Windy City?"

"How's the old Windy City, anyway? I'd love to be in a good Chicago blizzard now. It sure looks funny to see the beautiful beaches of Oahu strung with barb wire and trenches.

"I hope that you people at home will keep your spirits high and your faith strong, because that is the best way you can serve the men away from home. The greatest concern of all of us is not ourselves but the loved ones at home."

A SOUTH SEA ISLAND

From Robert Zelkin, 3d class petty officer in the navy, assigned to a construction battalion in the Southwest Pacific, to his brother and sisters. Letter submitted by Mrs. J. Zelkin, 3443 Belle Plaine avenue.



Robert Zelkin.

"It sure is quiet tonight. There is a slight breeze to take away the heat of the day. There's a pretty moon and light fluffy clouds. I can hear the faint tones of a sailor playing on his saxophone. We have the setting, the mood, and the music to make it the romantic spot it might appear to be and yet one gets little fascination for this island because for all its peaceful look it sure fools you.

"We have wooden floors in our tent now and we even built our own shower. We do our washing out of ammunition cans. Our greatest danger is falling coconuts. We are always dodging them and so we give the natives a candy bar to climb the trees and shake down all the loose ones.

Chewing Gum Stops Leaks.

"O, yes, I must tell you what use we make of chewing gum, when we have it. There are holes in our tent for the ropes that tie back the flaps. When it rains the water comes thru the holes. Yes, you've guessed it, we stuff the holes with chewing gum and presto — it's waterproof.

"I can stand anything out here but I don't know what I'd do if anything went wrong with any of you at home. So God keep you and hope to see you soon."

ODT ORDER TRIMS BUS SERVICE FOR COUNTY SCHOOLS

8,000 Pupils Must Walk or Go in Family Car.

An ODT order restricting school bus use, scheduled to be effective April 1, will eliminate bus transportation for an estimated 8,000 to 10,000 Cook county school pupils, according to Noble J. Puffer, county superintendent.

The order, according to ODT spokesmen, will divert buses to more acute war needs. The restriction applies to approximately 90,000 school buses in the nation. At least 100 are used in Cook county.

The order prohibits transporting pupils who live within two miles of school, except in emergency cases.

Affects Grade Schools.

The two mile rule will affect elementary school pupils most seriously, Puffer said. He estimated that half a dozen districts now transporting all their pupils will be unable to transport any because they all live within two miles of school. Other districts will have to curtail sharply their bus service. Sixty-five of the county's 198 districts outside Chicago now transport some of their pupils.

Puffer emphasized that his estimates are tentative, pending findings of a survey launched recently. Government questionnaires have been distributed to the 65 districts affected, asking for data as to number of pupils carried, distances and routes covered.

Buses will continue to operate only if operators have certificates of war necessity. Applications must be approved first by Puffer, then by the state superintendent of public instruction, and finally by the ODT regional office, which will issue the certificates.

Tightens Prior Order.

The present action represents a tightening of a directive issued last November from Washington, asking that school bus operations be cut to the minimum. Since November, school buses have operated under emergency permits allowed on declarations made by the operators.

The family car will come into greater use for taking children to school in districts most severely affected, Puffer predicted, and he said share-the-ride school clubs may develop.

ODT spokesmen said they are not seriously concerned with passenger car tire conservation, since recaps may be had without ration board action and since they contain only about 9 per cent of crude rubber, compared with a reported 75 per cent or more used in truck and bus tires.

Pupils on Bus Route.

Pupils living along a bus route may be picked up if the bus is not filled, even tho they live within two miles of school, Puffer explained.

High school pupils are not expected to be affected much by the new system, since most of these students who use school buses live beyond the two mile limit.

Robert Nau, liaison officer of the ODT, who appeared recently before representatives of school districts in Puffer's office, said that of 150,000 buses in the nation last year, 90,000 were school buses. Merrill Knox, consultant of the Illinois commerce commission and liaison man between the ICC and the ODT, also was before the schoolmen to explain the new ruling.

Tuberculosis Institute.

The monthly clinic of the Tuberculosis Institute of Chicago and Cook county will be held at the Des Plaines Health center, 1561 Ellinwood avenue, from 10 to 12 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Collect Silk Hose for Parachutes

JOE'S STOCKINGS BUILD CHUTE FOR BROTHER, A FLYER

Leads Steinmetz High in Silk Drive.

So far as Joseph Ronto is concerned, the current drive for silk at Steinmetz High school is a personal challenge. Several weeks ago he brought in 444 silk stockings. That was enough, he explained, to make one parachute. He had a clipping he'd found somewhere that said just that — enough silk could be reclaimed from 444 stockings to make one parachute. And Joe has a brother in the air force — so the "parachute" he contributed had a special meaning.

But one parachute wasn't enough, Joe thought. He's still bringing in stockings. Thus far he has 500 to his credit, and another shopping bag ready at home. Joe is the son of Mrs. Walter W. Krout, 2939 North New England avenue. His mother has helped him some in his collection — working thru neighborhood OCD block captains. Of his original contribution, 300 of the stockings had come from a supply Joe's mother had saved toward a hooked rug.

Also Poster Artist.

Joe made another contribution to the drive when, in collaboration with Paul Roessler, he painted a poster for the school corridor, showing a parachutist drifting to earth under a chute presumably made from silk hose contributed by Steinmetz students.

The silk stocking salvage drive at Steinmetz, which opened officially early in January, has netted an average of 200 stockings a day. The whole thing began back in December, when the local history club looked about for a special project to replace their usual automobile trips to spots of historical interest in the city. A sponsor had noted an article putting forth the government's need for worn out silk and nylon hose, to be reclaimed for powder bags and parachutes.

The club took hold of the idea with enthusiasm and projected it to the entire student body of 3,694 in a series of division assemblies on Dec. 23. The club coöperated in revising the lyrics to the popular song "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition" — "Down went the stocking, a runner was its fate! Down went the stocking, and then the stocking's mate!" The ditty goes on to tell how the girls turn in their old hose to be made into powder bags and parachutes — "For you've got to give her credit, for she turns 4-F stockings to 1-A—"

Students Catch Hint.

That the student body caught the hint was shown in the response immediately following the Christmas holiday. Every day the big container in the office of the school's war coordinator, Edgar Klaus, piles higher with the contributions. Some bring silk rugs, which are unraveled right in the office. Students beg worn hose from mothers, older sisters, cousins, and aunts—for very few of the girls at school own many pairs themselves. As a recent assembly of the 150 girls present, only one was wearing hose.

The hose are stored in shopping bags, and as soon as the government notifies them, school officials will send the lot direct to a government agency in New York City. Scrap men have begged to buy the collection, but the hose are student contributions, and as such will go directly to government reclamation plants.

B'Nai Shalom Men.

The Congregation B'nai Shalom Men's club will meet at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening. Rabbi David Graubart will be the speaker.

Plan Honor Roll

Canfield Ridge Community club sponsored a dance at the South park fieldhouse in Park Ridge recently to raise funds to erect an honor roll for service men of the neighborhood. A model of the Washington monument in Washington, D. C., it will be built of stone and will occupy a site 25 feet square on the southeast corner of Canfield road and Victoria avenue. Chairman of the entertainment committee for the dance was Fred Wetzel, 5954 Ozanam avenue. Designer of the monument is John L. Loeschen, 7826 Thorndale avenue.

JUNIOR GIRL OCD CLUB FORMED ON NORTHWEST SIDE

A Junior Girls' Victory club has been formed to complete the organization of the office of civilian defense in block five of the Wrightwood-Fullerton-Armitage community.

Principal duty of girl members of the club is to watch over the young children of the block OCD workers, freeing their parents for training courses, salvage collection, and war garden planting.

Women of the block are responsible for development of the girls' club. They had found their activities restricted by their inability to find some one to look after their children.

Now they all ahve time for cake baking, salvage collecting, bond selling, and publishing.

On the first and third Monday of the month, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Maurice Egeland, 3028 Palmer square, they meet at the First English Evangelical church to bake cakes and cookies for the Chicago servicemen's centers.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Carl Frisk, 2200 North Sacramento avenue, they collect salvage among their neighbors. Last month they accounted for 167 pounds of grease and fat; and, assisted by girls of the Victory club brought in over 500 pairs of worn silk and nylon hosiery to aid in a recent silk and nylon drive.

Women of the block are buying war stamps for former residents now in service. When enough stamps are bought to buy a $25 war bond, the bond is presented to the nearest of kin for safe keeping. They hope, in time, to present at least one bond to every one of their fighters.

To integrate all this work, keep enthusiasm at high pitch, and keep block residents informed on all OCD activities, the women publish a monthly newspaper for free circulation among their neighbors. It is known as the "Big V News."

Biggest drive planned for the immediate future is the work of Mrs. Leo Losoff, 2233 North Kedzie boulevard. She hopes, within the coming week, to have 50 persons enrolled as Red Cross blood donors.

G. O. P. HOPES RISE IN 40TH WARD AS FACTIONS UNITE

Throw Combined Weight Behind Ibsen.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Republican prospects in the embattled 40th ward looked sharply upward last week when the two factions of the party, hitherto regarded as irreconcilable, united wholeheartedly behind George B. McKibbin for mayor and George O. Ibsen for alderman.

Samuel P. Gurman.

George O. Ibsen.

Ibsen is president of the Ross-McKeone G. O. P. organization which has maintained separate forces and headquarters from the regular Republican group, headed by C. Herman Johnson. He is in a runoff with Samuel P. Gurman, who was backed by the regular Democratic organization headed by Christ A. Jensen, purchasing agent for the board of education. In the election Ibsen finished well ahead of Lawrence Spuller, the regular G. O. P. choice.

Split on McKeone.

The factional split among the Republicans goes back to 1940, when a group that had criticized Dr. Joseph C. Ross, alderman since 1929, of being too friendly with the city hall Democrats, backed Johnson for ward committeeman against the incumbent, John J. McKeone. Johnson won by 78 votes, and the internal battle was on in earnest.

Johnson, accepting the Feb. 23 setback gracefully, arose from a sickbed last week to make the gesture his friends say will assure Ibsen's election on April 6. He called upon his followers to work without stint for the entire G. O. P. ticket.

"It is only by unity of purpose that the Republican party of this ward and of Chicago can defeat the common enemy, the Kelly-Nash machine, on April 6," Johnson said.

"Best Interests of Ward."

"With this object in mind we have resolved that it is for the best interests of the citizens of the 40th ward to elect George B. McKibbin mayor of Chicago and George O. Ibsen as alderman of the 40th ward, and to pledge our united support in their behalf."

The Johnson statement was hailed by observers who had remained neutral in the factional fight as the primary step necessary to a G. O. P. council victory in what has been a Democratic ward in most general elections in recent years.

In effect the merger places two complete ward organizations on the same side of the political fence, for both the regular and minority camps had the polls fully manned in the election. Both organizations will function almost intact thruout the present campaign, it was indicated.

33d Ward Quiet.

Things were relatively quiet in the 33d, the only other northwest side ward where there is a runoff this year. [Runoffs are held where no candidate gets a clear majority in the election, that is, more than half the total votes cast.]

Both C. H. Kordowski, the city hall candidate, and John B. Brandt, the G. O. P. choice, confined their early work in the runoff campaign to the strengthening of the organizations that will vie for votes on April 6, saving their major oratory for the closing days.

The 33d also is normally considered Democratic territory, but the Republicans are more hopeful than usual this year because of the internal struggles that have torn their rivals. They recall that it was a Courtney-Kelly split four years ago that unseated Ald. Z. H. Kadow, and that there was much bickering and acrimony a few weeks ago when the various leaders were seeking a candidate. The 33d ward seat has been vacant since the death of Ald. Vincent S. Zwiefka last Sept. 6.

SALVAGE CHIEFS DIRECT CLEANUP OF AREA DEPOTS

Salvage wardens of the 21 communities on the northwest side comprising division 5 of the office of civilian defense are active this month in a clean-up of all salvage stations located within their area.

Edward Malloy, divisional salvage chairman, has urged all citizens of northwest communities to report to their block wardens any uncollected scrap so that unsightly salvage depots may be eliminated and the scrap may get to war plants sooner.

Many in North Avenue Crew Wear Green.

The next time you clamber aboard a crowded street car, take a moment to listen to the conductor caution "Watch your step, there!" Chances are the warning will have a rich Irish burr. For any car barn of the Chicago Surface Lines is a stronghold for the Irish.

The North avenue car barn, at North and Cicero avenues, is no exception. Of the 1,600 employés, at least one-fourth are of Irish birth or sons of parents born on the auld sod. From Kerry, Cork, and Killarney they come, and the standing joke is that many of them "had their badges sent over" to them, for only a few months after landing on United States shores, they were punching transfers and piloting street cars here in Chicago.

Proud of Station.

Those Irishmen out at the North avenue depot, many of whom have several decades of service to their credit, have seen plenty of passengers jam into their cars. In 1937 the cars and buses operating out of the North avenue station carried nearly 30 times the population of the city—94,316,832 revenue passengers. That wasn't counting the C. S. L. employés, policemen, and postal employés who rode free. That was more revenue passengers than carried during the same year by all the street cars and buses in Kansas City, or by the combined systems of Indianapolis, Ind., and Louisville, Ky.

Depot Pay Roll High.

The pay roll at North avenue depot makes an impressive figure, too. Back there in 1937, for instance, in the days before the system bore such a terrific burden of public transportation as it does today, the pay roll amounted to $3,140,069. Today it is even larger, with increased demands which necessitate more employés.

In years gone by, when times were more peaceful, a good Irishman could ask for and get St. Patrick's day off. But things are different now, what with a record number of passengers using the street cars to get to war jobs. The best Irishman among them will be at his post Wednesday, but there will be a shamrock in his lapel.

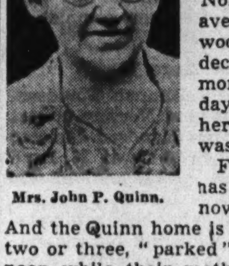
NORWOOD PARK GRANDMA KEEPS 'OPEN HOUSE'

Grandchildren Keep Mrs. Quinn Busy.

With 10 children reared and off to establish their own homes, any mother might expect to find herself with a vast amount of leisure. But not Mrs. John P. Quinn, 5740 North East Circle avenue, in Norwood Park. She declares she has more to do these days than when her own brood was small.



Mrs. John P. Quinn.

For Mrs. Quinn has grandchildren now—17 of them. And the Quinn home is never without two or three, "parked" for the afternoon while their mothers go off to Red Cross meetings, or for a week while their parents take a trip.

Three Sons in Navy.

Three of Mrs. Quinn's sons have gone to the navy—the twins, Edward and Stephen, 25, and the youngest Quinn, Eugene, 21. A daughter, Olive May, who has taught in Chicago, plans to join the WAVES soon, and another daughter, Antoinette, left social work to become a policewoman.

A third daughter, Helen, lives with relatives near Elgin. Four sons and a stepson, Robert, James, Fred, Charles, and Frank, live near the Quinns, and it is their children who drop in at Grandma's for lunch or a bite to eat after school.

On New Year's eve the six Quinn bedrooms are so full of grandchildren the elders stay up all night, and go right off to early mass in the morning. In the summer, there are barbecues and impromptu skits of "Snow White" in the Quinn back yard, with Antoinette taking color movies. Sundays the Quinns may plan on eating beef stew by themselves, and end up entertaining 15 guests.

Active in Club Work.

Mrs. Quinn belongs to half a dozen clubs on the northwest side, and contributes her share to the war work of each. She organized Troop 1 of the Girl Scouts in Chicago, back in 1920, and has been a member of the Palatine Woman's Relief corps for 43 years, serving a term as its president. For 12 years she has been active in the auxiliary of the Norwood Park American Legion post. She also is a member of the Irving Park Catholic Women's club, and for two years was regent of St. Juliana's council of the Daughters of Isabella. Mr. Quinn is engineer at Beaubien school.

Children and grandchildren, nieces, nephews, aunts, and ailing friends, the Quinn home is always large enough to take in one more. Mrs. Quinn's mother, Mrs. Nettie McGowan, 84, makes her home with them. It is she who vows that the Quinns' is the first "elastic" house she has ever seen.

Lieutenant's Bride

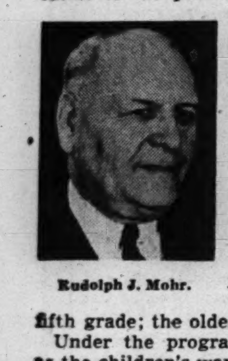
R. J. MOHR PLANS CHILDREN'S WAR GARDEN PROGRAM

Horticulturist Will Carry Message to Schools.

Rudolph J. Mohr, junior horticulturist of the park district, has done much to teach Chicagoans the how's and why's of gradening since the war garden program of the office of civilian defense was first instituted. But those Chicagoans were adults! Now he is to have 30,000 young pupils—the youngest in fifth grade; the oldest in high school.



Rudolph J. Mohr.

Under the program—to be known as the children's war garden program—30,000 individual gardens will be maintained by Chicago children in public, parochial, and private schools. High school students will work either in adult community gardens or farms.

Would "Inoculate" Children.

Mohr, who gives lectures on gardening with colored slides which depict the life of plants from seeding to blossom, wants "to 'inoculate' Chicago's grade school children with the 'germ' of gardening."

Forty-five years ago Mohr left his home in Omaha, Neb., to study horticulture at the Missouri Botanical gardens in St. Louis, Mo. After graduation he served as horticulturist for the British exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase exposition and later for the St. Louis World's Fair commission.

At the turn of the century he established a floral business in Racine, Wis. On one occasion he was asked to Boise, Ida., by an applegrower to plan a 700 acre orchard for him.

Shortly before the first World war, he came to Chicago. He has been here ever since and became a member of the horticultural staff at Garfield park in 1930.

Advises War Gardens.

Mohr, who resides at 4104 North Kedvale avenue, has been much interested recently in the war garden program. Besides his duties for the park district, he daily answers many letters and phone calls requesting advice; compiles requests for lots to be plowed; and lectures three nights a week to prospective war gardners.

Now with the children's war garden program, he has another duty. And he is enthusiastic about it. He only hopes that "many of the children will become so interested in gardening that they will continue their active interest in plant life thruout their later years."

Pvt. Lipski Does Tallahassee Like Royal Potentate

Pvt. Arthur S. Lipski, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Lipski of 4954 North Drake avenue, refuses to believe Gen. Sherman's adage. While stationed at Camp Carrabelle, Fla., he recently spent his week-end leave in Tallahassee, the state capital, and was entertained by a state representative, the secretary of state, a United States district judge, and Gov. Spessard L. Holland—to say nothing of the students of Florida State College for Women.

Pvt. Lipski.

His visit to the college was a pleasure, for, in his words, there were "2,000 beautiful girls and only about 150 soldiers" there. The district judge he met as a result of having jumped over a barricade designed to keep visitors from the courtroom on Sunday. The judge stopped him; after a short conversation they discovered their common interest in the law and the judge led him to his chambers where they talked for an hour.

Discussed Florida State.

Then he met the secretary of state; introduced himself, and discussed Florida with him for about 15 minutes.

High water mark of his Sunday morning experiences came when he and two fellow soldiers decided to browse around the grounds of the executive mansion. There, again by chance, he met the governor. Holland invited him and his friends in, showed them objects of historical interest, and later took them for a walk thru the mansion gardens where they met his wife. Mrs. Holland presented Lipski some typical Florida flowers and the governor gave each of the soldiers a few Florida oranges.

City's Oldest Home.

As if this wasn't enough, the group, while strolling thru town, decided to visit Tallahassee's oldest house, built in 1826. The owner, whose family has possessed the house since it was first erected 117 years ago, showed them thru. An attorney and member of the state legislature, he asked the three men to stay there overnight on their next week-end in town.

Beth Israel Men's Club.

The Men's club of Temple Beth Israel will meet at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow evening. A number of members will deliver 4 minute addresses. Hyman M. Graber is chairman, Milton G. Manasse and Sidney Orlov are cochairmen.

TIME NOW RIPE TO CHECK YOUR HOME INTERIOR

Give House First Aid at All Signs of Wear.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[Please send stamped, addressed envelope to this department if you wish more detailed information on products mentioned here.]

March is half gone and the time is ripe to check on the home and give it first aid wherever signs of wear and deterioration are found.

The weather may stay too cold for several weeks for much exterior work, but there's always the equally important interior to check.

How about breaks and cracks in plaster walls? These can be patched and redecorated, or covered with a new surfacing. Insulating boards will serve you well if you wish to add warmth to your house as well as new decorations.

Build Food Storage.

There'll be plenty of incentive to urge the home canner on to real effort this spring and summer and it isn't difficult to build a food storage room. An excellent place for this, if the house has a finished basement, is a special storeroom below stairs.

A carpenter or home owner with a talent for tinkering and tools can build such a room from materials that are available. You probably will need a room five or six feet wide and nearly as long and you can separate it from the rest of the basement by a tight wall. Then fit a door into one of the partition walls and provide a ceiling of the same material as the walls.

You can use one of the many insulating boards for both the walls and partitions. If possible the storeroom should be built around one or more outside windows so you can control the air circulation and ventilation to some extent at least. And cut off all the heat possible from the basement proper and from the room overhead.

Patch Cellar Cracks.

Inspect cellar walls and ceilings and floors carefully. There may be cracks to be filled, in walls or floor or between floor and walls where leakage often occurs. You can patch these cracks with a stiff mortar of 1 part cement to 3 parts sand, or check with your hardware or paint store in regard to patching compounds to do the work.

Examine pipes and all metal work in the basement for possible rust. Where rust is found use a wire brush or sandpaper down to the metal and then protect with paint. There are rust resisting paints which can be applied over a rusty surface and depended on to stop further rust.

If your cellar walls seem to leak they may only be "sweating." Spring and summer aggravate this condensation problem. If the day is damp you can keep the cellar windows shut. To eliminate sweating you can use lath and plaster or plaster board set on furring strips at least an inch thick. And for good measure, if you suspect any dampness in the walls, coat inner surface with tar or liquid asphalt before you apply the lining.

Insulate Your Basement.

It is good insurance to use plaster board or lath and plaster or insulating board as a ceiling for your basement. You can keep dust and dirt from seeping up stairs, eliminate drafts, add fire resistance to your house, and lessen sounds to some extent.

And if you are searching for something different and colorful for the ceiling of your game room try finishing it with alternating rectangles of insulating board in contrasting colors.

These small panels are ready cut and easy to apply and the finished effect is a tile-like appearance for the ceiling. In addition to its decorative value the insulating board eliminates noise and saves on fuel.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, March 15

Don't buy seeds too soon, for there will be plenty for all. You may buy, but make a plan first and order only enough to meet your needs.

Many small gardens had better be used for smaller leaf vegetables, such as lettuce, radishes, onions from sets, mustard greens, and similar kinds. Root crops should not be grown unless the soil is suitable. Potatoes and corn should not be grown.

Remember that soil conditions are the first essential for growing plants; a sunny place also is necessary, at least, six hours each day. It is a good plan to spade under manures, if they can be obtained, but if not, use shredded cattle manure, spent mushroom manure; sludge will add a little plant food to the soil and some humus, for it is organic in character.

Tuesday, March 16

Do not be in a hurry to plant, for April 10 is the time for the first outdoor sowing, and the weather conditions regulate the date. You may sow tomatoes, peppers, cabbage, and broccoli in flats or seed pans for early planting outdoors.

However, do not spade the garden until the soil is in condition. Sow radishes as soon as the ground can be spaded; before spading spread two pounds of fertilizer over each 100 square feet of area. Make the sowings at frequent intervals to give you the best and finest radishes at all times.

Onion sets also can be planted early. Make the rows 6 to 12 inches apart and place the sets 2 inches apart. Seed flats should be carefully watched, the soil kept moist, full sun given, except during the early stages while the seed is germinating; then they should have shade to prevent drying out. Transplant when very small into other flats.

Wednesday, March 17

In smoky areas in cities or congested areas that are hardly suited to vegetable growing, the following may be tried satisfactorily: Radishes, leaf lettuce, onions from sets, beets, carrots, Swiss chard, kale, a few parsley plants and possibly turnips. Don't try to grow potatoes and sweet corn, for they take too much room.

Repairs to the lawn should be made just as soon as possible to obtain early germination of the seed and a good growth before hot weather comes.

Thursday, March 18

It is not too late to start a hotbed in which to grow early plants for the garden. The gardener, however, has a difficult time to obtain manure to supply artificial heat thru fermentation, hence it may be best to wait and use the frame as a coldframe and sow the seeds later.

Friday, March 19

Many persons want a few parsley plants for seasoning and garnishing, but the seeds sometimes fail to grow. Soak the seeds overnight and sow radish seed thinly in the same row. The radishes mark the row and will grow so rapidly they can be pulled and thinned long before the parsley appears, but they will not interfere with it.

Saturday, March 20

It is almost time to repot house plants. Some, like the palms, need only to have some of the soil removed and replaced with rich compost to enable them to flourish.

Those not in need of repotting should be given a little more water and plant food, for they are showing renewed activity after the winter's rest. Do not fill the pot too full of soil or the water will run off, the center being unwatered.

AGED HANDS KNIT BUSILY ON TO AID NORWAY'S SONS

Mittens Will Help to Free Land of Their Youth.

"Shooting mitten with trigger finger, for Royal Norwegian army"—that's the title on the knitting directions. And the little old ladies at the Norwegian Old People's home, Nina and Avondale avenues, sit day after day patiently knitting those mittens from coarse khaki wool. As they knit, they remember the Norway of their youth, and hope that the men who wear those mittens may reclaim it from its invaders.

On the top floor of the west wing lives Mrs. Karen Modahl, 78, who has six pairs of mittens completed and neatly pressed. Mrs. Modahl was born in Bergen, Norway, coming to the United States when she was a girl. Her son served in the first World war, in the navy, and may go into active duty again soon. Mrs. Modahl is impatient because she can do so little now—the mittens "aren't good enough, nothing's good enough," for the men who are fighting.

Knits for Paralysis Fund.

Across the hall lives Mrs. Inga Opsahl, 68, who was born in Moss, Norway. Besides the six pairs of mittens she has almost completed, she has knitted a number of pairs out of brightly colored yarn for children. That way she earned $1 to give to the recent infantile paralysis benefit held at the home. Mrs. Opsahl has a nephew in the navy somewhere on the west coast, and she embroidered a tiny American flag in red, white, and blue yarns.

In another wing of the building lives Miss Julia Ofthus, who will be 80 years old next July 28. She, too, was born in Moss, Norway, coming to this country when she was 30 years old. She went back once, in 1904, to visit her home village. Miss Ofthus is working on crochet now, for she has used all the yarn allotted her, completing four pairs of mittens.

Wait for More Yarn.

Nearby is Miss Hannah Knudsen, born in Christiansund, Norway, almost 77 years ago. Miss Knudsen came to this country when she was 16, lived in Seattle for 20 years, and for the last 10 years has resided at the home. She has exhausted her supply of yarn, too, and keeps watching for the representative of the Norwegian Woman's federation who brings the yarn for the ladies to work on.

Down the hall is Miss Mary Jensen, 76, who recalls learning to knit when she was only 4 or 5 years old in Elverum, Norway. Those early lessons were well learned, for the mittens she has completed are uniform and closely knit. Miss Jensen came to this country when she was 18, and has been back for visits three times since.

New Matron at Home.

Recently taking over the duties of matron of the home was Mrs. Karen Kragerud. Herself a native of Norway, Mrs. Kragerud chats with the residents in the tongue more familiar to them, and finds herself continually promising the speedy return of the "lady with the yarn."

There are 79 old people at the home now. Many are invalids, several are past 90, and the majority between 80 and 90. Mrs. Modahl, Mrs. Opsahl, Miss Ofthus, Miss Kundsen, and Miss Jensen are not the only ones faithfully knitting away at "shooting mittens with trigger fingers." Every woman in the home who has the strength and sight has asked for yarn to join in the work. Each remembers a carefree Norway of her girlhood, and each would see it so again.

BUNDESEN HELPS M'CARTHY TRACE RECORD OF BIRTH

BergenBratOffersReward—or Hush Money.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

WANTED—Information concerning my parents; liberal reward or hush money as the case may be.
CHARLIE McCARTHY, NBC, Hollywood.

"Dear Dr. Bundesen: I take Bergen's pre-war portable in lap and beg and implore your services as a kind of statistical bloodhound. I am in need of some one of your high standing and authority to sniff thru the birth records of Chicago and locate my birth certificate. I have been promised a situation in aviation, but there is only one hitch between me and getting my lunch grapplers on that pay roll. They don't believe I was born. I have to prove I am a foundling who isn't a lostling. Now that's where you come in.

"Bergen tells me he found me on his doorstep, or do you think we should investigate that? Assuming that you will undertake the search at once, we can agree on some deal later. Don't bother getting any letters of character reference. I can take care of that because Skinny [Dugan] can sign names in six different handwritings.

Can Stay Within Law.

"And by the by, if you should find my parents and things don't look too good for me—what I mean is, if my old man is out of work, I will appreciate you forgetting the whole thing.

"After all, I am not unhappy in my present situation with Bergen, but as a practical professional man you can appreciate what a fine bargaining position it would put me in with Bergen if some one else claimed me, too.

"I promise you this will be worth while for both of us, and we still will be within the law. You have my word for it and you know what that's worth."

Dr. Bundesen has written Charlie that he is instituting the search. He added that Charlie's search for work was so at variance with his reputation as he knew it that as a medical man he feared that Charlie was ill. He suggested a week's rest.

Suggests Castor Oil.

"In the meantime," he added, "take a daily dose of castor oil." If the whole bottle is not consumed, he suggested, the remainder might be applied to airplane motors when the job is landed.

"Remember Bergen has been good to you," he concluded. "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush even if he bears some resemblance to a bald eagle."

Tip to Dr. Bundesen: No need to look around Venetian blind factories for Charlie's family tree. In an unguarded moment five years ago Bergen disclosed that Charlie was hewn from a hunk of pine by one Theodore Mack, a wood carver, now dead, on Van Buren street.

Illinois Club Women to Open Drive for Recruits in War Industries

By Irene Steyskal.

There are now 2,000,000 women workers engaged in war production, it is estimated by the war man power commission. Industry will need 2,500,000 more women in its plants and factories before the end of the year. The man power commission's figures indicate there are 13,000,000 unemployed women in American homes. Among these are 9,000,000 mothers who are qualified to take war jobs when nursery schools can be provided for their children.

These are some of the vital statistics which women leaders in Illinois will consider as they gather tomorrow in the Palmer House for a meeting, called by the women's executive committee of the office of public instruction, with the launching this week of a drive to recruit women workers as its purpose. The emergency assembly, a dinner meeting, will be at 6:30 o'clock.

Col. Paul G. Armstrong, director of selective service in Illinois, is to be the principal speaker. While giving the women of this area full credit for doing a "tremendous job" in volunteer war service, Col. Armstrong declares they must take over the greater responsibility of war production. Vital industries are beginning to feel the man power shortage in this state, he asserts, and prompt action must be taken.

"The army and navy must have the physically fit men for combat," Col. Armstrong says. "There are still many physically fit men in industry who are detained there because there are none to take their places. Women must equip themselves to do this job in order that the army may have the best potential pool of man power available to them. Man power belongs in military service, and woman power in industrial production."

The military program of the country, Col. Armstrong stresses, both now and in the immediate future, is dependent largely upon the effectiveness of women's coöperation on the home front. The housewife working for the duration of the war, he points out, whether at a war job or at an occupation termed "nonessential," is "filling in" for a soldier or sailor and, by keeping an industry running, is holding his job for him until his return.

The patriotic women who, not from preference but actuated by the challenge to citizenship responsibility in a national emergency, are leaving their homes to join the workers' armies, it is pointed out, represent an important element in post-war adjustment. They are a temporary labor supply. Returning to their homes when there no longer is need for their service in industry, they will make it possible for thousands of men, demobilized by the army when victory is won, to return to civilian life and their old jobs with a minimum of confusion and delay.

To most young mothers, the important question determining their decision to take a war job or remain at home is that involving proper care of their children. What has been done in Illinois toward the establishment of school nurseries for working mothers and future plans in this field will be explained at the meeting tomorrow by Vernon L. Nickell, state superintendent of schools.

Several government ordnance plants in the state are experimenting on a small scale with nursery schools for the children of mothers in their employ. Mr. Nickell is endeavoring to interest leading industrialists and obtain federal funds to help finance a coöperative plan for setting up nursery schools thruout the state in industrial sections where they are needed.

The dinner will be presided over by Nathaniel Leverone, state salvage director of the war production board.

Heading the women's executive committee, under whose auspices the meeting is being held and the recruiting drive conducted, is Mrs. Anna V. Zinser. The committee represents women leaders in industry. It originally was organized to make analyses of job opportunities for girls and women in all industrial and professional fields. Its surveys have been distributed free to schools and libraries thruout the state.

Miss Dodie Law and her pet, Leif, will bid each other a sad adieu next year when Miss Law goes off to Vassar after completing her studies at the North Shore Country Day school. She is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert O. Law Jr. of Winnetka.

Tavern Ends Sunday Luncheons; Casino Club May Remain Open During Summer

By Cousin Eve.

The Tavern club had the last of its Sunday luncheons a week ago. Too bad they must stop these informal collations because there is nothing so nice in all Chicago. Perched high in the air near the Michigan avenue bridge, this aerial retreat from toil and moil has a lightness and brightness that banishes dull care. On every side there are amazing views over the city and lake.

Rationing has run its iron into the soul of the Tavern Sunday luncheons. What would one think of a Tavern buffet without huge barons of beef and cold roast turkey? Of what avail the waffles and batter cakes, without the melted butter?

The Tavern waiters, old and valued friends, almost burst into weeps when they murmur, "Only one cup of coffee." John R. Winterbotham, lately retired president of the club, has maintained a wonderful standard of interest during the winter. For four Sundays officers and men of the navy, the army, the marine corps, and coast guard lunched at the club and afterward had programs full of thrills given by service men fresh from the war zones. Each group had its own beautiful films, its own musicians and commentators, and gave a glorious show. Preston Boyden is now president of the Tavern and last Sunday's music program was heightened by the presence of a table full of French sailors who escaped from the west coast of Africa. These French tars are en route to Canada and have a picturesque uniform with broad flapping linen collars and a red pompon on the cap.

There is a rumor that the Casino club will not close its doors on June 15 as usual for the long vacation, but will keep open during the summer to accommodate many of its members who plan to stay in town. This delightful club on East Delaware place has for president Mrs. John Cochran, and has played a more and more important part in the changing world. There is always at the Casino the grateful atmosphere of perfection, everything well done, distinguished.

The Arts club, which keeps its memberships in great style, had a Dutch tea Thursday, which was more than usually dashing. The Dutch consul, Jan Noest, and Mrs. Noest were there with a Dutch naval attaché, in honor of the stained glass exhibit of Joep Nicolas, a fellow countryman. These stained glass windows were shown in a room apart, with appropriate lighting, and were an effective exhibition, very stunning, in fact. Mr. Nicolas has solved the problems of making his ecclesiastical windows without the metal frames; and he also has achieved simplicity of design as well as richness of color. His major window, with an opaque white background and figures in brown and black, has the quality of El Greco. Mrs. Nicolas, wife of the artist, is, I believe, a sister of Aldous Huxley.

The paintings of Jerome Myers fill the main gallery of the Arts club and are strange human documents, done mostly on the lower east side of Manhattan among its foreign denizens. Jerome Myers was called the prophet of democracy in art and he painted beauty where he found it, in the warm flow of early morning streets or the purple shadows of the little city parks toward night.

Jerome Myers, too, was of Dutch descent. His paternal grandfather was born in Paris, became a major under Napoleon, and settled in Richmond, Va., in 1815. The Whitney Museum of Modern Art has sponsored a Jerome Myers exhibition and a canvas in the present show was loaned by the Phillips Memorial gallery in Washington.

Mrs. Donald McPherson had ordered for the tea table that day a large oval of spring flowers in Dutch colors, white freesias, red tulips, and blue somethings—very lovely. And there was a larger rotation than usual of charming women at the tea and coffee services. Among them Mrs. Oliver Dennett Grover, Mrs. John Collier, Mrs. Dodo Badger, Mrs. Alfred Shaw, and Mrs. Hubert Burnham. Mrs. Edward Leight achieved the most noticed hat at the tea, a pink felt like a cockle shell, a pink veil, pink lawn ruffles at throat and wrist

Women in War Work

By Kate Massee

Miss Audrey Ewry, daughter of Lt. Col. Ralph H. Ewry and Mrs. Ewry of 7712 North Ashland avenue, was the 12th young woman to be sworn into the marine corps women's reserve in the Chicago area. She is now awaiting orders to report to Hunter college in New York for training.

Miss Ewry is a graduate of Sullivan High school and attended Mundelein college. Her father is now on duty as army district transportation officer in San Francisco, Cal.

Miss Josephine Reddy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Reddy of Lake Forest, who enrolled in the WAAC some time ago, has been promoted to the rank of corporal at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., where she is stationed. She's assigned to the second company of a reception battalion. The Reddys' son, Philip Jr., is a sergeant in the army air force, and is stationed in Florida.

• • •

Miss Jean Magerstadt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl G. Magerstadt, 7416 Luella avenue, is now in boot training at the United States Naval Training Academy at Cedar Falls, Ia. She was enrolled in the WAVES in January. She is a graduate of the University of Chicago High school and attended Ferry hall in Lake Forest.

• • •

The Kenilworth Girls Service and the Junior Red Cross lost a member recently when Miss Beverly Thyborg of Wilmette was inducted into the marine corps women's reserve.

• • •

Service men stationed in the Chicago area will be guests at an open house this afternoon and evening at the home of Mrs. Frank White, 1716 West 103d street. Hostesses will be 25 young women of Sigma Lambda Nu sorority of the Central Y. M. C. A. college. Members of the Alpha and Beta chapters are in charge of the program, which will include dancing and games. Marian Larsen and Audrey Heckart are presidents of the chapters. Dinner will be provided and cooked by the Omega chapter, with Mrs. Ruth Ellinwood Spivak in charge. Mrs. White supervised the invitations of the service men, all of whom are from out of town.

Miss Audrey Ewry, who has been sworn into the marine corps' women's reserve.

Women who would like to bake cakes for the Chicago service men's centers, yet who are doubtful of their skill along this line, can be assured of success, thanks to a plan worked out by the OCD, in collaboration with the Commonwealth Edison company. All that volunteers have to do is to go to one of two branches of Commonwealth Edison and sign up for two and one-half hours. The first group of six women to sign up at the Englewood store turned out 14 cakes.

Utensils and stoves are supplied, as well as ingredients contributed by merchants and individuals in the communities. Since soldiers and sailors have expressed a preference for chocolate or spice flavoring, these are supplied insofar as possible.

• • •

Miss Sophia Malicki is in charge of the baking center at 2733 Milwaukee avenue, established several weeks ago under the direction of Miss Helen Feeley, and Miss Mary Irving directs the baking at 852 West 63d street. Women in those areas desiring to enroll should contact these young women.

First Spring Coats Colorful, Yet Practical

By Rea Seeger.

The first new spring coats are the hardy annuals with a definite all-purpose or foundation coat distinction. Smart street, town and country models around which the first spring wardrobe is carefully selected, with color blendings or contrasts well in mind. Most of the fabrics are warm enough to withstand any errant chilly breeze, yet light and colorful to justify the spring label. This year the casual coats stage the first excitement, for most of the newest affairs feature swank, tailored details, belts or half belts, pockets, wide seamed sleeves, stunning soft materials and decorative buttons.

Since the dress parade models invariably feature a sleek, more fitted silhouette, these first casual affairs emphasize easy-to-slide-into streamlines and gay, lilting colors, such as emerald green, vermillion, and many flattering pastels. Candy pink, a soft tone, universally becoming, is one of the brand new colors shown. The caramel beige tones, those effective cinnamon and glowing copper shades are two other new finds, with many unusual green tones of almond and chartreuse.

Checks are featured in small precise formations, hound's tooth, tattersall and shepherd's check patterns. Brown and white, black and white, and navy and white are the three color combines used in these classic coats. Large plaids are available but not in the lavish assortments of former years. Fur trimmed travel coats, in light weight fabrics contrasted with light colored fluffy furs, likewise are obtainable for spring and summer vacations.

To be expected are the numerous coats copied from the military greatcoats of both army and navy uniforms. These are modified versions, of course, but the snap and flare of the uniform greatcoat is recognized at first glance even tho the colors are pastel, springlike and definitely feminine. Among all the spring coat collections are the topcoats of straight line, the toppers to complete a three piece costume suit. Since these trios are always painlessly severed, such a threesome is one of the unquestioned buys for any one's money.

Four different, new spring coats are sketched herewith. Each is indicative of one smart coat collection featured in a Chicago shop. Others, just as new and just as important, are feaured in the same shop. For further information, call Superior 0200.

Thru the Looking Glass

A new harmonized makeup, boasting a touch of mauve, is here for those who want to brighten their faces and greet the coming spring in proper style.

Spring will come breezing around the corner any minute now and with it the urge to meet the new season with a bright, new face. Wintertime cosmetics will seem inadequate, and we'll start hunting around for something more appropriate. And, praise be, we won't have to search far, for all done up in a giddy package is a wonderful, harmonized makeup, the right complement to an Easter bonnet.

The set consists of powder, rouge and lipstick, all blended perfectly with each other. The rouge and lipstick are on the rosy red side, touched with a dash of purple to give them an added fillip. The texture is all that could be desired. The cheek rouge is the cream type, easy to apply and vastly flattering. All the endearing qualities women look for are found in the lipstick: Smoothness, good luster and no tendency to feather around the edges.

Be prepared for a surprise when you investigate the face powder in this set. It's in a decidedly new, medallion form, packed hard and resembling the little cakes of powder found in some compacts. However, it fluffs up beautifully light and feathery. In solid form, there is no danger of spilling or wasting a bit of it. The finish it gives to the complexion is satiny and clear.

The shade of the powder is different from those which have been in vogue the last few years. It's a delicate, pinky tone with just a hint of mauve, and the effect is flattering to most complexions.

Mrs. Ted G., Chicago—When I find that a thermos bottle cork has become too small from too much use, I boil it in water in a covered pan.

• • •

Eileen H., Kokomo, Ind.—If you want to soften a piece of chamois, try my method. I rinse it in lukewarm water after adding just a little olive oil to the water.

• • •

Fred G., Chicago—I wish that some one would invent and manufacture a plastic screen which will let in the air but exclude the light. It would be a boon for a war worker who has to do his sleeping by day.

• • •

Mrs. Jack H., Cedar Rapids, Ia.—If you want to paint over a stenciled wall this spring, you can sandpaper the stencil pattern, then apply a rough coat of paint over it, and then sandpaper again. After this you should be able to paint safely over the stencil pattern.

• • •

Francine F., Chicago—If I want to freshen bread that is a day or two old I put it in a hot oven for about five minutes.

• • •

Dorothy G., Racine, Wis.—When I discover a can of maple or other sirup that has started to mould, I scrape off the mould, and then heat the sirup to the point of boiling. Then I pour it into small bottles that I have scalded well and seal it tightly, and it is as good as new.

• • •

Mrs. T. H., Chicago—You can increase the beauty and general effectiveness of your flower pots—and protect your window sills as well—if you cover sills with small mirror tiles. I tried this last fall and every one has remarked on how attractive the plants look, standing on their mirrored bases.

• • •

Mrs. Ken. G., Chicago—I have found I can prevent scratches on my compacts, clips, etc., by coating them with a colorless nail polish. I also use same type polish on metal ash trays to prevent tarnish.

• • •

Dorothy G., Chicago—For some years my husband has used pieces of tire patching material to add longer life to the heels of his socks. He cements the material into heels of his shoes and insists it helps.

Proper Lighting Protects Eyes

By Edith Weigle

Many women during wartime are doing work at home that is taxing to eyesight, close work that requires excellent illumination to avoid eye strain. And the average one of us gives too little thought to the type of lamp or lighting fixture she works by, to its placement, and to the power of the electric bulb that furnishes the light.

Whether you are writing letters, balancing accounts, or just doing Junior's mending it pays to save your eyes as much as possible. And if you can do this simply by putting the right bulb in your lamp, why delay?

In lighting any room adequately consider its size, the color of its walls [whether light or dark], the height of its ceiling and the number of table and floor lamps and fixtures used. If you have a large lamp on a reading table, for example, each of the two sockets should be fitted with a 60 watt bulb, providing the height of the lamp is from 23 to 26 inches, and the bottom diameter of the shade is about 18 inches.

• • •

Do you have a pair of lamps on end tables at either end of the living room couch? If they have one socket the bulb should be 100 watts; if two sockets, 60 watts each. The height of this type of lamp varies from 20 to 23 inches and the diameter of the shade is usually approximately 16 inches. This type of lamp can be used, too, on bedside tables and on small, flat-top desks.

How about lamps that are only 12 to 18 inches high, the kind used on telephone stands, on radios, on high chests, or to light a picture? These have only one bulb and it need be only 40 watts in power. But don't try to read a book by this dim illumination!

Dressing table lamps, 16 to 22 inches high, and with shades of from 8 to 10 inches in diameter, should be placed at least 30 inches apart, should have white or pale tinted shades and should be fitted with one 60 watt bulb each.

If you have a pin-to-the-wall lamp with a diffusing bowl of about 6 inches, and use it near your sewing machine, or over your bed or near a small desk, or over your kitchen sink or stove, equip it with a bright bulb of 100 watts. It will illuminate the entire area.

For good illumination pull your chair close to the lamp before starting to do work taxing to eyesight.

A 300 watt bulb should be used in the floor lamp that has a diffusing bowl, for it will light the whole room. It should be supplemented, however, with table lamps, too.

When reading, writing or doing fine work of any kind it is injurious to your vision to depend solely on one nearby lamp, no matter how strong its bulb. This means you are sitting in a small pool of light surrounded by darkness. There should be light thruout the room, from other sources if you want to prevent eye strain.

Open top shades are desirable except when lamps are on very low tables, as the light is then distributed rather than concentrated in one spot. And remember that white or near white shade linings are the best reflectors.

Avoid a glare indoors just as you do out of doors. Depend on more than one lighting source in every room.

Mrs. John Collier has just come back from three weeks in New York but she already was practically on the train for Tuscon, Ariz., with her husband for another week-end vacation. Before leaving she had planned an extra special party for the Alliance Francaise on the coming Thursday, a causerie to be given by Arthur Meeker Jr. These causeries of the Alliance are usually charming, with novel features that recall France, and this one will without a doubt crowd the Alliance library in the Fine Arts building where these French teas are held.

Arthur Meeker Jr. is the latest sensation in public speaking. He is a natural born wit, something of a savant and a specialist in the romantic period of French history—and his discourse Thursday will be material gathered but hitherto unused of the epoch. He will speak in English. Arthur Meeker's book, "Ivory Mischief," has netted him $90,000, so the wiseacres say, and he is hard at work on another novel at the moment.

A letter has just come from New York announcing the death on active service in Egypt of Capt. Stephen Haggard, son of a former British consul in Chicago, Godfrey Napier Haggard, now consul general of Great Britain in New York. Young Stephen was brought up in Chicago and later sent to Munich to study for the stage with Frau Magda Lena. He made his debut in Munich under the direction of Max Reinhardt, playing in German in "Hamlet," and later in London and New York. In motion pictures, Stephen Haggard played the title rôle of "Mozart" and also in "Whom the Gods Love." He was a charming, gifted man, and a nephew of the late famous novelist, Rider Haggard, creator of "She," a novel about Egypt that gave its readers gooseflesh in the gay '90s.

Another bachelor brought up in Chicago who died last week in New Orleans was Le Grand Burton, only son of a family prominent in the long ago. The Burtons lived on Rush street opposite the Cyrus McCormick mansion and were in a sense great cosmopolites. They traveled far and spoke French, had French servants, French cooking. It was natural for Le Grand Burton, Paris being out of the question, to gravitate to New Orleans; he liked ease and the soft charm of the south. He was a first cousin of Burton Holmes and was never married.

Mrs. Daniel McCarthy died last week in her apartment on Lake Shore drive overlooking the city. Her only daughter, Mrs. Jefferson Caffery, was in Rio de Janeiro at the time, and her only son, Daniel, was in Evansville, Ind. Mrs. McCarthy was the widow of Col. Daniel E. McCarthy, an army officer who saw service all over the world and was finally quartermaster general of the United States and allied armies in Paris during World war I. Mrs. McCarthy went with her husband and took her children on these far away billets, but since his death has remained constantly in Chicago. Her benefactions will be greatly missed by the Chicago charities that received her largesse. And her friends will long remember the gracious woman who lived in semi-retirement but enjoyed life so vividly.

And so the world changes! The "Seeing Eye" had a tea for its Chicago committee members at the Casino Friday afternoon, when Huntington Henry, the new chairman, took over. There was discussion that afternoon of the forthcoming drive for new members, which is to begin April 15. Of that forward movement, Mrs. Irene Sidley, one of Chicago's best organizers and speakers, is the new chairman. For the last several years Mrs. Fred Preston of Lake Forest has been at the head of these "Seeing Eye" drives; another dynamo of many gifts and great ability!

With the present war there will be a great increase of men and women blinded in the terrible struggle and a consequent need for these educated dogs who lead the blind back into active life again. The top trainer for "Seeing Eye" at Morristown, N. J., Jack Humphreys, has entered the army as a trainer of dogs, but the society is carrying on nevertheless. Various people interested in the movement have gone into establishing kennels for these intelligent, wonderful animals and new "seeing eyes" are being raised and trained.

With these beautiful dogs, blinded people walk safely thru the crowded streets, and take an active part in the life that would otherwise shut them out.

Mrs. Harrison Eustis of New York, founder of the "Seeing Eye" in America, has retired after many years as its president. She has lost her only son who was expected to take her place with the "Seeing Eye" and has reorganized her life interests. As a memorial to her lost son, Mrs. Eustis has established a rest house for men of the services in his handsome apartment which adjoined her own in Manhattan. Men in need of complete quiet and relaxation are invited to apply to the Eustis memorial for this refuge of blessed relief.

Austin Strong, a relative of Robert Louis Stevenson, will tour the country in April speaking for "Seeing Eye," and Morris Frank, one of the first men in the United States to own a "seeing eye" dog, will come here later on to take part in the April drive.

Lt. William Baum, only son of the late Dr. and Mrs. William Baum may be here at any minute. Bill has been in South Pacific waters for over a year now. William seemed to smell the approach of war a long way off, for he went to Annapolis and after graduation traveled up to New London and took a submarine course. After that a period of active training in Honolulu was followed by intensive work at home; and a year ago he said good-by to Chicago fairly ablaze with joy. He was appointed as an officer in the engine room of the greatest submarine in the Pacific. He is now a lieutenant.

Bill Baum sniffs the atmosphere of the sub 50 feet below the surface and thinks it perfection, whereas the polluted air we breathe on the earth's surface he finds unspeakably vile. And by the way, young William's machine business established by him in Grand Haven has gone like clockwork in his absence. Dr. Baum destined his son for the medical profession. Mervyn Winston Baum hoped he would be a lawyer like her father, Frederick H. Winston. And nobody in the family knows quite where this flair for engineering comes from. Mrs. Robert McC. Adams is a half sister and Winston Lawrence of Grand Haven is a half brother of Lt. Baum.

How astonished would be the diplomatic great-grandfather, Gen. Frederick H. Winston, minister to Persia. How amazed conservative Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lawrence, who lived in marble halls on Lake Shore drive. And the intellectual Winstons. Most of us danced our young heels off in their beautiful ballroom. If only they could see the gay young red headed naval officer grandson!

There's a new idea under the sun. By way of raising money for a certain hospital board which is sorely in need of working funds, this original little idea has come to light. It's no use boning for money just as the population has payed income tax—so this is the project: A rummage sale de luxe. Solicitations will be for the best you have, anything that is dear to your heart and truly lovely and valuable. No white elephants need apply, no discarded junk.

There's a story about young Johnny Farwell who heard the minister ask the congregation for personal sacrifice, gifts to the Lord of things that meant much to his flock. It appears that young John V. Farwell IV. took this literally and laid his beloved snubnosed revolver in the collection box.

It was while studying history abroad that she first became interested in papal history. In 1929 and later, in 1930 and 1931, while gathering material, she was granted an audience with the late Pontiff Pious XI. Her latest book to be published is "The Sword of St. Michael." Arrangements for the program are being made by Miss Mary Lois Walsh. Miss Margarette Nolan is president of the alumnae.

Chicago Author Writes Home About Filmdom

By Kenneth Horan.

[Living in Hollywood while her book, "Remember the Day," is being adapted to the movies.]

BEVERLY HILLS, CAL. The Chief was six hours late arriving in Los Angeles, having been held up by troop trains, but nobody minded. Every one was happy except my dog, Victoria Britannica [second name means she's extra smart and knows all, sees all, hears all], and she wanted to get out on the desert and go on a good hike.

Los Angeles buzzed with activity. We drove up its hilly streets to Hollywood, with the white baby basket, containing Victoria, on the driver's seat. Sunset boulevard resembles a movie set of a French provincial town, except that it is so new. The buildings are two storied and all white, with balconies, and a lot of what, at home, we call rotten iron trimming. The sun shines down on them with a protective warmth that makes all the outdoor restaurants seem the most natural places in the world to eat on a winter day.

A long driveway bordered by huge palm trees and tiers of gardens leads to the Beverly Hills hotel thru the portals of which more celebrities pass than there are raisins in a pudding. At the extreme end is the swimming pool, crowded all day long, where some of the most famous figures in the world [literally speaking] bathe and rest. Luncheon is served there, and if you happen to want to talk to a friend in Timbuctoo, the telephone is plugged into the sand, and "central" tells you to go ahead. The theme song of this hotel is "We Understand Your Problem, and Would Like to Oblige." For instance, the management, on the first day, asked me: "Are the roses in the wallpaper of your sitting room a little too bright? If so, while you are at the studio we will be glad to redecorate in a more restrained way."

That's the general idea. If I asked for a suite to be furnished completely in early Egyptian tombs, or in Mayan ruins, they'd haul out the charming old English furniture and chintzes that make it so bright and attractive, and install what I'd asked for.

My car—provided by the studio—is parked outside my balcony, next to Katharine Hepburn's station wagon. She's probably the only woman in the world who looks perfectly superb in slacks. She smiles at Victoria and is as pretty as an angel. By the way, there's a French poodle living nearby that wears a turquoise blue collar, and Victoria seems to think this may be Boyer, and is understandably pleased with life.

I often see Father Edward Flanagan, of Boy's Town fame. His face radiates kindliness. The Walter Hustons, with their genial dachshund are here, and so is Spencer Tracy, who has the largest room in the hotel because he tore down a couple of partitions and now has a kind of auditorium all his own. Sonja Henie, Freeman Gosden of "Amos and Andy" and a lot of others, particularly Marlene Dietrich, may be seen any day in the lobby.

Alexander de Seversky and many many refugees live on my corridor. These latter have dug themselves in for the duration, and represent some of the most famous people in European ante-bellum social life. There is, for instance Madame Ipar, from Turkey, famous for her great wealth and her taste in dress, and Madame Pollak of Czecho-Slovakia, who had one of the finest art collections in Europe, and the Bondi family from Vienna, to mention a few.

It's hard for me to leave this fascinating hotel, which is a grand hotel on an international scale, a kind of theater of the world, but I work hard at the studio. M. G. M. fills a good sized city block, and it literally swarms with people. I met Clarence Brown, who has just made a marvelous picture of William Saroyan's new book. He lives at Metro, in a beautiful site of paneled rooms, and his wife, by the way, is lovely Alice Joyce of silent film days.

Brown is a big man, and handsome, who seems to have the weight of the world on his shoulders. I also met John Cromwell, a descendant of Oliver's, I'm told, a tall, distinguished, and clever director. Jules Goldstone, the well known agent, is a colorful figure. He has a great deal of imagination and taste, so that many of his authors have found themselves highly successful before they knew exactly what had happened to them.

After a morning of work [it's my conscience that makes me work, and nobody seems to care whether I do or not, or to pay any attention] I go to the Brown Derby for lunch with my niece, who calls for me in the studio's car, and we see Rosalind Russell, in mink coat, black straw hat, and heaps of pompadour and veil; Kay Francis in her U. S. O. uniform just back from Africa on the Clipper; Barbara Stanwyck; Marlene Dietrich looking like an orchid, a brown orchid in pale tan dress and a kind of Turkish fez on her long yellow hair; and innumerable men and women whom we have seen again and again in pictures, but whom we can't exactly connect with names. It's like a continuous performance and we seem to be the only people here whose faces have not been their fortunes.

Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Goodspeed, formerly of the University of Chicago, gave a party for me one afternoon. The Goodspeeds' house is lovely, overlooking the city in that most beautiful of all suburbs, Bel Air. Long, plate glass windows give views of the town, and of the Pacific and of Catalina in the distance. Dr. Goodspeed is happy in this lovely house, as is Mrs. Goodspeed, who is as cordial and charming as ever. Dr. Goodspeed is connected with the University of California at Los Angeles, and he also does a good deal of radio work. He and his wife take a prominent part in the social life of the city. In their drawing room this afternoon were friends on the faculty of the university, movie people, and a famous director.

The puzzling thing to me about all this Hollywood scene is that with such apparent indifference to the flight of time, such good results are attained. It must be a magic process. At least, that is what I would have believed had I not come to realize that great men, such as Clarence Brown, John Cromwell, and Jules Goldstone, put years of education, of study, of knowledge, of experience into the making of one of their pictures. We laugh about the carelessness of Hollywood. I am inclined to believe that, as in any perfect work of art, its appearance of carelessness is the result of the greatest concentration on the part of men and women who are artists.

And, by the way, I wanted to see Hedy Lamarr's house, so I followed the winding road over the hills and far away, past the most exotic and beautiful estates, on, on, and on, seeking number 2799, and came to a mountain, up which was an impassable path, and there, 'way up under the sun, stood a white mansion. I don't know how anybody ever reaches it unless they start climbing, and take their St. Bernard along to rescue them when exhaustion sets in. That's one way to be alone.

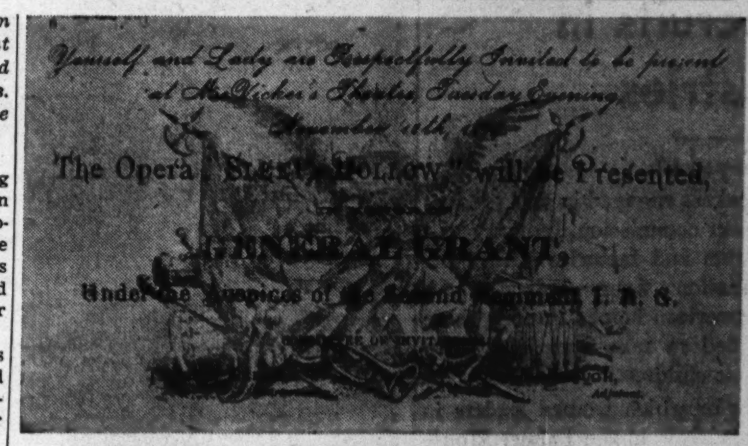
By Herma Clark

(Instead of the usual letter from Martha Freeman Esmond we present today invitations found in an old trunk belonging to the late Mrs. Robert S. McCormick (Katherine Medill.)

It was a grand event, the coming of Gen. U. S. Grant to Chicago in November, 1879. Many were the social entertainments offered to the man who had finished two terms as President of the United States and had then made a triumphal tour around the world.

An invitation to one of the gayeties of that great week is reproduced here. It was the last of the entertainments prepared for the popular hero during his visit here.



An invitation to the opera "Sleepy Hollow," given November 18, 1879, at McVicker's theater in honor of Gen. U. S. Grant.

The Chicago Times, edited by Wilbur F. Storey, wrote this about the affair:

"The officers and members of the 2d regiment, I. N. G., aided by the Owl club, succeeded in draping McVicker's theater elaborately and gracefully, for the complimentary reception of Gen. Grant and his friends. The special box decorated by the Owl club was occupied by Gen. and Mrs. Grant; the other box by Col. and Mrs. F. Grant, Joseph Medill, Hon. William Henry Smith, and Hon. C. B. Farwell. Gen. Grant's box was fitted up as a marquee, with bright striped red and white silk awning. A white owl kept guard on top of the tent, and a colored owl stood on each side. An eagle was perched on the balcony."

The Owl club was an organization of which your scribe has no knowledge except that three of its members, listed by the Times, were Louis L. Sharpe, stage manager of McVickers theater, and Harry J. Mulligan, and A. H. Damitz. These men had decorated the box for the delight of the great warrior and, incidentally, to advertise the Owl club, probably. Others present at this complimentary reception were Judge Thomas Hoyne, Judge Blodgett, Gov. Richard J. Oglesby, Potter Palmer, Michael Keeley, and Daniel Scully. Among the members of the 2d regiment, I. N. G., who sponsored the affair were Col. Quirk, Maj. W. C. Carroll, Capt. Tom Keefe, Maj. Peter J. Hennessey, and Adjt. McKeough.

William Henry Smith, named as being a guest in one of the boxes, was a prominent resident of Lake Forest. As manager of the Associated Press, he often entertained important men in his country home, and it is not strange that he was honored on this evening.

The opera performed for the entertainment of the Grant party was "Sleepy Hollow." The music by Max Maretsek was highly praised by the Times reporter, who found the libretto, written by Charles Gayler, "only passable." Founded on Washington Irving's story, it was a really American production, and Gen. Grant was "amused," says the reporter. It certainly must have been pleasanter for him than the round of banquets which had been offered him. An exception must be made of the one given by the army of the Tennessee, at which Mark Twain spoke. The subject of the American humorist's toast on that evening, [the same week, but a day or two previous] was "Babies," and the audience shouted over it, tho it did not come on the program until about 2 o'clock in the morning, say the newspaper accounts.

The William Blair's Reception.

Another invitation, probably dating from the late '70s or early '80s, in the form of a handsome engraved card, bids Mr. and Mrs. J. Medill of Park row [the street where the Illinois Central station stands] to a reception given by Mr. and Mrs. William Blair, Dec. 23 [no year given] at their residence, 230 Michigan avenue. The Blairs' handsome three story and basement home stood on land now occupied by the Congress hotel. The neighbors in that block, like the Blairs themselves, were people of substance. The parents of Burton Holmes lived next door, the famed lecturer being a small boy at that date. Mrs. H. M. Wilmarth, mother of the first Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, was another neighbor, as was George C. Walker, benefactor of the University of Chicago.

William Blair, host of the evening, was the first wholesale hardware dealer of Chicago, and his wife was a charming, dignified woman, devoted to her church and to philanthropic enterprises. The great house in which this reception took place was a handsome one, with silver plated doorknobs on the hand carved rosewood doors in the double parlors.

Only one child of the Blairs lived to maturity. This was Edward T. Blair, who died four years ago. Grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. William Blair living in Chicago are William McCormick Blair and Mrs. Howard Linn.

Mrs. J. H. Dunham's Compliments.

The wording of another invitation from the old trunk is intriguing. "Mrs. Dunham's compliments for Monday evening, December 16th. 233 Michigan Avenue." Thus reads a note, hand written in the purple ink favored by ladies in the elegant '80s. No hour is stated on this card for the event, nor does the hostess say whether she is inviting the Medills for dinner or for a reception.

The Dunham house, then numbered 233 Michigan avenue, stood for many years at the north corner of Michigan avenue and Harrison street. The lot is now occupied by an open air parking place. A family of large means and of cultivation, they lived quietly and when they entertained the company was apt to be a "small and very select one," to use the expression of the period. The word "compliments" is redolent of the Victorian era. Lovers of Dickens will find it on many a page of his books. Thackeray's heroes, too, often "presented their compliments."

Parental School P.-T. A. to Have Friday Meeting

Mrs. Evelyn Duvall, director of the Association for Family Living, will speak on "Preparing Youth for Post-War Reconstruction and Enduring Peace" at a meeting of the Chicago Parental School Parent-Teacher association at 1:15 o'clock Friday in the school assembly hall, 3600 Foster avenue. Miss Virginia Clancy, teacher at the Parental school, and a choral group from school, led by Mrs. J. G. Raub, will participate in the program. Immediately following, members will hear the report of the nominating committee and elect officers. Mrs. O. E. Rossman is program chairman.

Canadian Melon.

Round Table Woman's Committee Will Meet

Mrs. Bertram J. Cahn will be hostess to the woman's committee of the Chicago Round Table of Christians and Jews at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow in her home, 227 East Delaware street. The guest speakers for the afternoon will be Miss Helen Mineta, Japanese-American, and Mrs. Charlotte Weisl, Viennese evacuée, who will have as their topic, "The Stranger Within Our Gates." During the business session of the meeting, the committee will make arrangements for the seventh annual Institute of Human Relations to be held on April 8. Mrs. George R. Wilson is committee chairman.

The Women's Advertising Club to Meet

Chicago business and professional women's organizations have several meetings posted on this week's club calendar. The Women's Advertising club of Chicago will hold a dinner meeting Tuesday at the Chicago Bar association. Three members of the group will outline the effects of war on several of the nation's vital resources and industries. Miss Helen Blume of the Illinois Bell Telephone company will discuss "War Time Communications"; Miss Marion McKinney of the Union Pacific railroad will speak on "Railroads in War Time," and Miss Consuela Miller of the National Safety council will discuss "Saving Man Power for War Power."

April 15 has been set as the deadline for entries in the national advertising contest which is conducted annually by the club. The award, established in 1937 as a memorial to Josephine Snapp, former president of the club, is presented to the woman whose accomplishments in the field of advertising are judged to be the most outstanding.

"The Wage Stabilization Program" will be the topic of E. B. McNatt, regional director of wage stabilization for the war labor board, when he speaks before members of the Chicago Office Supervisors club at 6 o'clock Thursday at the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 South La Salle street. Arrangements for the meeting were made by Miss Katherine Schultz.

Mrs. Glad Paulickpullé Renfrew, a native of India, will be the guest speaker of the Chicago Altrusa club at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow at the Chicago Woman's club. Mrs. Renfrew, a registered nurse, has travelled in every country in Europe to gain practical information that would help the masses of India. She has come to America to work and study in American hospitals. The program was prepared by the committee on international relations, of which Miss Dorothy Dockstader is chairman.

On Tuesday, Sister Mary Ellen, professor of biology at Rosary college, will discuss "Heredity and Public Health" before the public health nurses section of the 1st district, Illinois State Nurses asosciation, at 7 o'clock in Tracy's restaurant, 17 North State street.

WEDDINGS

State D. A. R., Legion Group to Meet Here

Chicago will be the host city this week to two patriotic organizations of women, assembling for their annual state-wide conferences. The Illinois society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, telescoping its customary four day meeting into a one and one-half day business session, will take over the Red Lacquer room of the Palmer House Thursday for its 47th conference, while across the loop in the Hotel Sherman some 900 Illinois department members of the American Legion auxiliary will gather on the same day for their yearly patriotic conference.

Mrs. Otto H. Crist.

Presiding over the D. A. R. meeting will be the state regent, Mrs. Otto H. Christ of Danville. Mrs. Norman L. Sheehe of Rockford, state department president, will conduct the rally of the women of the Legion, assisted by Mrs. Ralph C. Webber, department chairman of national defense and war activities, and Mrs. Lucille F. Dowd, Americanism chairman.

• • •

The national boards of both organizations are taking note of the Illinois conferences, each sending an emissary. Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general, is coming from D. A. R. national headquarters in Washington, D. C., to address the Illinois members at their traditional "state" dinner. The Legion women's guest will be Mrs. Lutie Long Smith of Kansas City, Mo., national vice president of the auxiliary from the central region. At a complimentary luncheon to her, which is scheduled for 1 o'clock Thursday in the Grand ballroom of the Sherman, Mrs. Smith will talk on the auxiliary's war time program. Francis P. Phelan of Winnetka, state commander of the Legion, will be present.

Mrs. Lutie Long Smith.

Convening at 9:30 o'clock in the Bal Tabarin of the hotel, the morning session of the conference will present an over-all survey of the war activities of the auxiliary. The patriotic keynote will be sounded in an opening address, "We Hold These Truths," by Mrs. Lowell C. Allen of Bellville, who is the national Americanism chairman.

The promotion of friendly relations between the Americas having an important part in Legion activities, the program committee will present Charles Carroll, newspaper writer and lecturer, at the morning session in a discussion of the contributions South American countries are making toward the prosecution of the war.

Miss Mary Alice Barlow of Urbana, who was governor of the auxiliary sponsored Illini Girls' State in 1942, and Tom Hayes of Park Ridge, who was lieutenant governor of Primier Boys' State, also will be presented. Representatives from the women's branches of the army, navy, and marine corps, will appear, and the state council of defense, the treasury department, and Red Cross all will have representatives at the meeting.

In the afternoon, Edmund Stevens, foreign war correspondent, who has been covering the shifting battle fronts in Europe and Africa for more than three years, will have the platform. Mr. Stevens will talk on "The War Front, from the Desert of North Africa to Moscow."

Planned strictly as a business meeting, the D. A. R. conference will be devoted almost entirely to department and chapter reports on war activities. An election will be held to fill four offices, including that of state regent. Two candidates have been named by their respective chapters for the regency, Mrs. J. De Forest Richards, nominated by Chicago chapter, and Mrs. T. E. Maury of Aurora.

The annual junior assembly will be held in conjunction with the senior organization's session Thursday evening.

Looking back upon other state conferences of the Illinois D. A. R., Mrs. Crist points out some of the resolutions passed by the society, which, in the light of conditions today, become notably significant. Mrs. Crist's valedictory review discloses that as far back as 1927 the Illinois D. A. R. urged that enrollment of aliens be established in the United States and that those who proved unworthy of citizenship be deported.

The 1928 conference found the Daughters warning the country to "guard against the substitution of burocracy for democracy, paternalism for individualism and community responsibility, and centralized authority for local self-government, which substitution would undermine American principles of government as ordained by the Constitution of the United States." That year the society firmly declared its stand for "an adequate navy and merchant marine for the United States, in keeping with the wealth, population, and resources of the nation." The following year the Daughters voiced their disfavor of a move to prohibit compulsory military training at the University of Illinois.

In 1931 the Illinois D. A. R. turned their attention to the federal bureau of investigation, recommending the enlargement of its authority for the purpose of investigating propaganda of a revolutionary nature which was circulated in the United States. At their 1939 convention, they urged amendments to the neutrality act to cut off exports of scrap iron and other metals, minerals, oils, and war equipment, which had increased 300 per cent over a period of a few years, to "aggressor nations," seeing in such exports a threat to the peace of this country and of the world.

TO BE MARRIED IN JUNE

Miss Jone Rehnberg will be married in June to Charles Howell Gedge, son of Mrs. Wallace Wright Gedge of Grosse Pointe, Mich., after her fiance has received his commission as ensign from the naval reserve school at Columbia university. Miss Rehnberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Hugh Rehnberg of River Forest, is a senior at Beloit college, of which Mr. Gedge is a graduate.

Phoenix Rodeo Held in True Western Style

PHOENIX, ARIZ.

If any cynic believes the west has gone "sissy" or that the intangible spirit, which makes the west a land of romance and adventure no longer exists, he should have been in Phoenix this past week. He'd be well aware that the old west still lives both in spirit and in fact.

It's been rodeo week. Not the rodeo such as one sees in Chicago or Madison Square Garden, but a rodeo made up of the same topnotch riders who are "our boys." We know their horses, and we know their performance. We know the pride that goes into riding the buckingest bronc or in tying a calf in 13 seconds flat. It's a beautiful thing to watch a good roper and his horse. They think, move, and perform as one. And we love those sagacious animals.

It's a contest out here, not a show. It's a contest to determine who is the best man. The cowboy pays his own, and his horse's traveling expenses, and his entry fee, which goes toward the prizes, added to by the junior chamber of commerce, which sponsors the performance. The proceeds this year went to the service men's canteen.

It was feared this year that with the war and gas rationing the rodeo should be called off. But the top hands of the military outfits in the valley thought it would be good recreation for the soldiers to have the rodeo staged. So the show this year was dedicated to the soldiers who are training here—the American, the English, the Chinese, the South Americans, and so on. Many a soldier was given leave to perform in the rodeo, thereby keeping up his rating. The boys in khaki equalled in number the boys in bright colored shirts and levis. There was even one sailor doing a good bit of bronc riding.

It was an unforgettable sight from the grandstand. The arena and chutes in the foreground, in back were the horses, white face herefords and bulls grazing peacefully, awaiting their turn.

Forming a semi-circle back of the cattle were the army trucks, then the trees of Phoenix and date palms silhouetted against the red, purple, and blue cardboard mountains with their fleeting shadows. And always in the background guarding the valley were the majestic Four Peaks and Superstition mountain.

• • •

The rodeo program tells the story of the origin of the rodeo. "It began out here in Arizona not so many years ago when a bunch of punchers got together around an old corral one Sunday and just for the fun of it tried to see who was the fastest and the best hand in doing the things they did on the range every working day. Then they went to town and performed before an audience of town folk and gradually their "funning" became a nation sport. The color, excitement, and spirit of a good cow show appealed to the American public. Folks in eastern cities who never came closer to a ranch than their corner movie house soon knew well the names of the champions of the sport. Folks like to see action, nerve, and sportsmanship and that's why the rodeo has become a national institution."

Every one was asked to wear western dress and every one did. The Jokake inn hired a large bus to take its guests in to the performance. Each guest had a lunch box with sandwiches and fruit, for it was a long trip and a long day. Levis, bright colored shirts, ten gallon hats and neckerchiefs were the costume of the day. It was easy to tell the dudes from the cowboys for the dudes' levis were so brand new and fitted loosely, while the cowboys' were old, and soft, and faded, and fitted like the proverbial glove. It's a mystery why they don't split or why they don't fall down, for a cowboy wears his as low as possible around his hips.

Mrs. Jay Whipple and young Jay and the William Mitchells, all of Lake Forest were together. The Herman Kitzelmans and the Clarence Ericssons made a foursome. With the Jabez Pratts were their Oak Park neighbors, the Robert Wares. Another group consisted of the Edward Kelloggs, looking western, the Leroy Wheelers and Tom, Mrs. Charles Hare and Mrs. Arthur Bamford. With the Harry Leightons were Dr. and Mrs. David Fitzgerald, who are vacationing at the Camelback inn. It was almost as much fun as the rodeo to listen to the enthusiasm of the Lawrence Ryan youngsters, Don, Marcia, and Joyce.

Mrs. C. Morse Ely and her daughter, Mrs. Uri B. Grannis of Lake Forest, have arrived at the Jokake inn for the spring months. Mrs. Chester Sargent of Winnetka has also returned for her annual visit. Not content with a completely idle vacation during war times, the women at the Jokake are rolling bandages and taking first aid twice a week down at the Ramada at the pool. The proceeds from the weekly bingo party also go to the Red Cross.

The long awaited Gold Diggers ball was held Saturday night at the Camelback inn. "Going western" seems to be a favorite with the winter visitors and they certainly let their imagination go. They were all there from Don Juan—Louis Schoenwald—to a most ladylike and demure person of the early days, who was no other than Mrs. Charles F. Elmes of Winnetka. Mrs. Daniel Rice was near winner in the funniest class, wearing old fashioned baby clothes. Mr. Rice was a sourdough miner. The funniest person was Dr. Fitzgerald, who was dressed as Dr. Quack and led the grand march with "Lucas," the inn's pet goat, carrying his little black bag. Mrs. Fitzgerald was one of the judges. Another rare combination was Gene Chapman of Arcadia and Chicago and Tom Wall. Mr. Chapman was dressed as an Indian squaw and Mr. Wall as a Mexican charo.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Johnson appeared as a cowboy with his charming Spanish senorita. With the Johnsons is their young son, Richard, who spends too much time in the saddle to attend such frivolities. Lawrence Kerns, with a long white beard, represented Father Time, while Mrs. Kerns was a gay gal of the '90s. Mrs. Frank Schueler and Martha were members of the quintuplet group, Mr. Schueler, making a very realistic Papa Dione. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ward Seabury of Oak Park came in Mexican costume, with Mrs. Seabury as "China poblana." William Grunow, who is recovering from pneumonia, contented himself reluctantly with being one of the judges. Mrs. Grunow looked pretty as an old fashioned girl.

An old time county fair, with lemonade, box lunches, and beer, was held last Sunday at Bright Valley ranch, near the Camelback inn. Any one who had a horse they thought enough of to feed was urged to ride over. Bright Valley ranch is noted for its Tennessee walking horses and King Cole was admirably ridden by Dr. Fitzgerald, who entered in the five gaited class. Miss Peggy Ware and her father, Walter Ware, and Herbert Johnson entered in the dude class, whose horses are built for comfort and not for speed. Mr. Grunow still is contemplating buying one of the Tennessee horses to take back to Chicago with him.

Mrs. Taylor Strawn recently entertained at a small dinner party in her home for her sister, Mrs. De Forest Hulburd. Among the guests were Mrs. Harry Sturgis, Mrs. Frederick Woodruff, Mrs. Holly Stover, Fritz Ernst, Miles Warner, Earl Mussey, and William D. Mackenzie. Another visitor is Miss Katherine Cole, the house guest of Mrs. William Mackenzie of Lake Forest, who is wintering in Paradise Valley. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davis have joined their Highland Park friends at the Westward Ho. Another Chicagoan to arrive at the hotel is Mrs. F. Harold Van Orman.

New arrivals at the Biltmore from Chicago include Samuel Dunn, Henry Stine, Mr. and Mrs. David Lamoreaux, Judge and Mrs. Isadore Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Feicht, the Maurice Goldblatts and their three children, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Goldwyn, Mrs. Roy Kropp and her son Charles, who have joined Mr. Kropp and their daughter, Arline, who came some weeks ago; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Horwitch, Milton Callner, Milton Friend, the Arthur Bohans, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Drell and their daughter, Barbara, and Mrs. William Swanson and her daughter, Karen. John Mills, the son of the Herbert Millses of St. Charles, has entered the Judson School for Boys for the second semester.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

St. Petersburg Trolleys Are Tourist Boon

By Dorothy Johnson.

There's at least one resort city in Florida where gas rationing is not an ugly specter hovering around the corner of vacation plans. That city is St. Petersburg, which retained its street trolley system during a period when most Florida communities eliminated theirs.

Credit goes, officials say, to the network of trolley and bus transportation for making the resort's scenic attractions and suburbs as available to the visitor as during the era of the private automobile. The riches of recreational facilities directly within the city's boundaries are another factor to make "St. Pete" a mecca of northerners weary of fluctuating climatic conditions and the stress of war work.

"The most American thing in America" is the description visitors give Mirror Lake park in St. Petersburg, where, on a 5½ acre playground, more persons actually take part in games and sports than on any equal area in the world. Every day thruout the year and far into the evenings hundreds of Americans from every part of the nation may be seen playing shuffleboard, roque, lawn bowls, cards, chess, checkers, and numerous outdoor games.

With 5,000 members, and as many more playing guests, the St. Petersburg Shuffleboard club is the largest tourist sports organization in the world, it is claimed. From nominal membership fees it is entirely self-supporting and has built more than 100 courts, three large club buildings, and a tournament pavilion with a total value of approximately $100,000. The club maintains its own police force and fire department and publishes its own newspaper. In addition to shuffleboard, its activities include bridge tournaments, played both indoors and outdoors, picnics, music entertainments, and parties of many minds. To maintain interest and rivalry in the game of shuffleboard, first transferred in St. Petersburg from ship deck to land, innumerable tournaments are conducted, ranging from contests between husbands and wives to state and national championship games.

This being a war year, St. Petersburg has canceled all large festivals and celebrations for the duration, but tourist games and sports continue with near-normal crowds participating.

Among the attractions and districts directly connected with the city transportation system are the federal veterans' home and hospital at Bay Pines, with its beautiful buildings and acres of landscaped grounds; the jungle area, where native tropical trees and shrubs form one of the most fascinating scenes in Florida; Gulfport, attractive suburb on Boca Cioga bay, where thousands of visitors fish and swim; Big Bayou, site of the oldest settlement on Pinellas peninsula, and Pasadena, Snell Isle, and Shore Acres, dotted with palatial estates.

Recreation pier, extending almost a mile into Tampa bay, where visitors fish, feed the pelicans, and enjoy picnic suppers, has excellent trolley service, as has the Spa beach and pool near its entrance. The Sunken Gardens, alligator farm, wild animal ranch, Bayboro harbor, Whitted airport, Bartlett park, north shore section, and Waterfront park, all tourist favorites, are on direct bus or street car routes.

Easily reached by intercity buses and trains operating on frequent schedules are Tarpon Springs and its Greek sponge fishing colony; Sarasota with its Ringling art museum and circus headquarters; Silver Springs, one of the most attractive communities in the south; the peacock farm, with the largest collection of those birds in America, and Rainbow Springs and Cypress Gardens.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address queries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Will there be cruises on the large rivers this year, as in years past? I am thinking of taking such a trip as a vacation.—K. H.

There's still steamboating on the Mississippi, the Ohio, and the Tennessee rivers. A recent announcement from a major line announces a number of "recuperative cruises," and the schedule is as follows: Four cruises of 20 day itineraries down the Mississippi to New Orleans on April 10, May 8, Sept. 11, and Nov. 4; down the Ohio and Tennessee rivers to Chattanooga, two 14 day itineraries with departure dates of June 5 and Oct. 2. The cruises will make port stops of historic interest.

Yes, a recent bulletin from that Florida resort indicates that "orange blossom time," an annual observance of the community, has been set aside for the period from March 1 to mid-April. For miles along the trails and hillsides of the orange country there will be acres of white blossoms. Despite crowded travel conditions, thousands of nature lovers are expected to visit the locality. Thruout March and April numerous social and sports events will be held concurrently, the principal attraction being the annual orange blossom festival scheduled for the week of March 23.

I am going to California and wonder if a novice tourist such as myself can find a free guide service.—V. G.

The chambers of commerce in major California resort communities always stand ready with assistance for tourists, altho they do not always provide guides. Sightseeing maps and other data are provided to assist the visitor in making his way around. The All-Year Club of Southern California, situated in Los Angeles, has a visitors' bureau which has built up a noteworthy program of assistance to war time visitors, military and civilian alike.

Wild Life at Its Best in Ocala Forest Area

Replete with deer, the Ocala National forest is an added lure for those who seek Florida at its best. Studded with public camp grounds, well groomed paths, springs, and a dense, scrubby growth, the forest area of 400,000 acres is a "natural" for those who like the outdoors, the chamber of commerce of Ocala advises. Accommodations include those in Ocala as well as in some adjacent centers of Marion county, ranging from cottages in the forest to hotels in Ocala.

Artist Winner Tells Story of Prize Statue

By Eleanor Jewett.

[Picture in roto section.]

A human interest story lies back of the simple and sympathetic impression of a young Abraham Lincoln, the statute which won the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and prize of $500 in the 47th annual exhibition by artists of Chicago and vicinity which opened last Thursday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The sculptor is Sidney Loeb and what he has to say about his work is this:

"You have asked me to send you some material [the 'you' is the Art institute] on how, when and why I did the Lincoln and I'm darned if there is anything to write on that score. I began this model of the eight foot, four inch figure in April, 1942, and left the unfinished cast in September for induction into the army on the 25th of that month.

"This Lincoln, designed to be set up as a memorial figure, I did on my own accord with the hope of interesting people in erecting a memorial. The war had something to do with it, I suppose, since it became difficult at times to work on nudes with hell popping all over the place. So, for the need of comfort and solace—if for no other reason—Abraham Lincoln became at first a refuge, then a statement, then a credo: 'This is what the war is about.' From that point the logical step was military service, with peace of mind in the middle of the maelstrom. It was annoying not to have been able to complete the work, but I had volunteered in July for service in September, believing that by that time the figure would be finished. The time passed, the figure was unfinished, but there was nothing to do about it anymore. I had joined the army.

"In the early part of this January, the mail orderly brought a letter containing the Chicago annual prospectus, entry blanks and, of all things, my 1943 artist's ticket. It jolted me loose for a moment, to hold that card in my hand. I confess I became a bit angry, that Hitler made it all so impossible. Then in the evening little Private Loeb sat in the barracks indulging in a morose fit. The sergeant in charge of the personnel department, sitting on a cot nearby, looked like the proper person to take over the brunt of my feeling.

"He looked over the prospectus. 'Are you really a sculptor?' he asked.

"'Kind of,' I replied, 'and if I could get home on my furlough now, instead of next month, I might possibly finish the piece—at least put it into presentable form and submit it to the jury of the exhibition.'

"'Well,' said the sergeant, 'maybe I can suggest it to the C. O. It seems to me that you have a legitimate reason for getting a furlough!'

"Believe it or not, the next morning the C. O. informed me that my request for a furlough had been approved for the reasons given. The next day, after I was on board a train heading north and bewildered at the amazing circumstances that develop in the army, I learned that my C. O., Lt. Scott, came from Gettysburg. Indeed, his grandfather was named after Abraham Lincoln and he himself was named Robert Lincoln Scott!

"As I stood at attention before Lt. Scott on Jan. 31, reporting for duty, my 'mission completed,' I was very glad to inform him that I had completed the figure while on furlough and that I had been awarded the coveted Logan medal and prize for it."

Pvt. Sidney Loeb is now Sergt. Sidney Loeb, so promotion in the army appears to have gone hand in hand with his success in the art world. The figure of Lincoln, which was awarded the Logan prize in the current Chicago artists and vicinity show, is one of the most effective pieces in the exhibit. The face is tender and thoughtful, a moving portrait. Sergt. Loeb has indicated the body with a chary use of line and bulk; the feet and legs to the knee are well suggested. There is a sincerity about the composition that makes it very appealing. When the sculptor finds time to work a little more on the shoulders and torso, so that one can feel the human being under the frockcoat, this Abraham Lincoln may well be one of the most significant expressions to have come from our soldier art of today.

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Armstrong prize of $300 wen to "The Wedding" by Hermann Dyer; "Arrangement with Image" by Michael M. Ursulescu was given the William H. Bartels prize of $300. Zsissly won the Mr. and Mrs. Jule F. Brower prize of $300 with "Lobsterman's Wharf." Frances Foy was awarded the Municipal Art league prize of $100 for portraiture for her delicate "Strawberry Print." The Clyde M. Carr prize of $100 went to "North Sedgwick Street" by Kenneth George Nack and the Joseph N. Eisendrath prize of $100 was given to "Boy in Yellow Shirt" by John Goray.

Max Kahn was awarded the William and Bertha Clusmann prize of $100 for his fine painting entitled "Public Stenographers," a picture of life in Mexico with a particularly intriguing Spanish Colonial facade attracting most of our attention. "Dawn on Sunday" by Dorothy J. Bergamo was given the Broadus James Clarke Memorial prize of $50. Charles Umlauf received honorable mention for his modernistic sculpture, "Christ and the Little Children."

The exhibition will continue thru April 25.

Hubert Ropp, well known artist and instructor, has been appointed acting dean of the school of the Art institute in the absence of Dean Norman L. Rice, who has been commissioned a lieutenant in the United States naval reserve and has gone to Columbus, O.

An attractive exhibit in Blackstone Hall, Art institute, shows the latest in advertising art. There are many fine pieces in the show.

An exhibit of stunning marines by Alphonse J. Shelton is on view at the Ackermann Galleries, 408 South Michigan avenue. The paintings of the sea are gorgeous, ranking well with those of Waugh.

• • •

Water colors by Esther Edling Erickson are on view at the Esquire theater, Oak street. The exhibit will run to March 20 and is most delightful.

Latin-American Art Show Held in Palm Beach

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

Palm Beach is bowing a thank you to Col. Le Ray Berdeau for the brilliant Latin-American exhibition, of which he was chairman, with which the Society of Four Arts is climaxing its season. This exhibition, magnificent in scope, builds a strong bridge of art between this hemisphere and our neighbors to the south. There are modern paintings, art that goes back to the Mayans and Aztecs, and a poster collection that shows great vitality, as well as imagination.

The exhibition opened with a preview and tea on Thursday. That night there was a recital by Harold Bauer, pianist, who included some Latin numbers in his program. Many important dinner parties preceded the Bauer recital.

• • •

The preview tea marked the only public appearance this season of Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, long considered the social arbiter of Palm Beach. Mrs. Stotesbury, who is occupying a small wing of her mammoth house, El Mirasol, was among those pouring tea. Others taking turns at the silver services on each end of the long flower decked table were Mrs. Berdeau, Mrs. Arthur Glasgow, Mrs. Frederick Johnson, Mrs. F. Warren Pershing, Mrs. John Shephard Jr., Mrs. Bertrand L. Taylor, and Mrs. Charlton Yarnall.

Among those giving dinner parties were the Berdeaus, the Yarnalls, the Carlton Palmers, the Oscar Johnsons, Charles Munroe, Arthur Bradley-Campbell, Miss Carolyn Trippe, Mrs. and Mrs. Charles Strout Davis, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Glasgow.

The exhibition will be open for three weeks and is attracting widespread attention. It is said to be the most significant of its kind ever seen in Palm Beach.

Many of the Chicago colony were in evidence at the gay cocktail party which Mrs. Frank Henderson gave in celebration of Mr. Henderson's eighty-fifth birthday. The Henderson estate, Land's End, was the setting for the party which has become one of the traditions in Palm Beach. This year's celebration was not so large as those of other years, and the hours were advanced so that every one could get home by dark—that was the theory. But no one wants to leave a Henderson party, black-out or no black-out.

The house is not one of those 40 room mansions, but is pleasantly spacious, with a homelike, lived-in atmosphere which no amount of elegance can hide. The floors are in pink marble, covered with thick rugs. Walls of the living room are in palest green, while the furnishings and hangings feature dusty pink. There are mirrors and flowers, and cunning modernistic love seats galore. The iron grill bannister which leads to the upper floor is outlined by a shallow box in which English ivy, other trailing vines, and pink geraniums are growing.

Mr. Henderson, who defies the years, was holding court during the afternoon. He was wearing a pastel green coat, yellow trousers, and a tie of dazzling colors. Mrs. Henderson wore powder blue. Mrs. Berdeau wore royal blue slacks with a belted coat of white, flowered in blue. Mrs. Jacob Baur was in gold and black print, with a small hat.

Mrs. George Alexander McKinlock was among those attending a birthday celebration of Aksel C. P. Wichfeld, at the Reef. Mr. and Mrs. James E. Baum of Chicago have as their guest J. T. Stewart of Omaha, Neb. John F. Jelke Jr. of Lake Forest is occupying an apartment on Via Parigi. The Kent Coopers, who spent some time at Whitehall earlier, have taken an apartment on Via Parigi, which is one of those little Spanish streets adjacent to Worth avenue.

Ensign and Mrs. Harry N. Gifford Jr. [Alice Kahle of St. Louis] were honored at a cocktail party the other afternoon by Mrs. Charles D. Easton and her daughters, Mrs. John W. Starbuck and Mrs. Francis Alburger of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Herendeen of Chicago were honor guests at a cocktail party given by Mrs. Catherine Leggett of New York. Members of the Chicago colony there were the Harry N. Giffords Sr., O. Nelson Tevander, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brodhead Meredith, Mr. and Mrs. Mario de Tullio, and Mrs. Thompson Thomas.

Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Dodge of Chicago gave a cabana luncheon for Mrs. Marie Leith and Mrs. Harold Dawyer of New York.

It was a case of the bride wore cotton when Miss Wendy Iglehart of New York and Lt. [j. g.] Douglas A. McCrary were married Monday afternoon at La Centinela, the winter home of the bride's father, D. Stewart Iglehart, in Del Ray Beach, 17 miles south of here.

Instead of the traditional white satin, this bride's frock was of white pique, street length, with an off-the-shoulder neckline. In lieu of a veil she wore a skull cap of white starched lace, with ruffles in the back which concealed her hair. Her flowers were orange blossoms.

Palm Beach reached its $61,000 Red Cross war fund quota in a week. A special Red Cross tableau, postponed last week on account of rain, was held Wednesday at the Everglades club. The rest of the county is raising the balance of the $111,000 quota, and making good progress under Alf R. Nielsen, well known to the Chicago colony.

A St. Patrick's party is planned at the Palm Beach hotel next week. The Ides of March does not find this resort writing odes to spring. One prominent Chicago man remarked gloomily that any spring poetry he would write would be an "owed" to the collector of internal revenue.

Betty Murray Wed Feb. 13 to Lt. Richard B. Nilles

Miss Betty Mae Murray's marriage on Feb. 13 to Lt. Richard B. Nilles, son of Joseph P. Nilles of Wilmette, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Murray of 5053 North Winchester avenue. Following the wedding in El Paso, Tex., Lt. Nilles took his bride to New Mexico where he now is stationed.

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

Out in Biscayne bay, half way between Miami and Miami Beach, stands a monument. Winter visitors little note nor long remember it, yet every one of them, in just being here, is paying unconscious tribute to the man it commemorates, Henry M. Flagler. For it was Flagler who, by building a railroad, was the first to make the east coast of Florida accessible to the millions of people who have visited the state.

"What is that monument?" curious tourists are often heard asking a bus or jitney driver as they travel the causeway between the two cities. The answers are usually negative or, at best, vague. Almost no one has been close enough to the monument to read the inscriptions or even see the figures depicted. It is accessible only by private yacht or sight-seeing boat.

But Miami itself is Flagler's monument, as Miami Beach is Carl Fisher's, and Coral Gables is George Merrick's. Doubtless none of the three would ask for more.

Surely Florida is the fountain of youth, when one considers such men as Flagler, Fisher, and Collins. Collins was not a young man when he came here, yet he tackled a job that would task a young man, the first development of Miami Beach. Flagler and Fisher were not old, but neither were they young, and both could have retired on their already great fortunes. But they saw opportunity, had vision and courage, and, above all, the spirit of youth which this climate imparts.

Flagler first visited St. Augustine in 1883. He was favorably impressed with the climate, but unfavorably impressed with hotel facilities, and then and there was born an idea which became a corner stone in his development of good Florida hotels. He sent architects to Spain in 1885 to gather ideas for his first hotel, and he never forgot that he should provide not only transportation but an attractive place for visitors to stop after they reached their destination. The question of which came first, the chicken or the egg, must be revised when considering the development of the east coast of Florida, to which came first, the railroad or the hotel, or even the town itself? For, in many instances, notably Palm Beach and Miami, the cities did not exist as such until Flagler built them. It is no coincidence that Miami was incorporated in 1896, the year the railroad reached the town and the old Royal Palm hotel was built.

• • •

In January, 1888, Flagler opened his first hotel, in St. Augustine, and Grover Cleveland rode the first thru, all-Pullman, vestibule train from New York to Florida to be a guest at that hotel. The railroad was extended in stages until it reached Palm Beach in 1894, the famous Royal Poinciana hotel being completed in the meantime. That hotel, and the Royal Palm in Miami, had charm, too, of a kind not duplicated in any of the new, streamlined edifices which now sprinkle the landscape of the east coast of Florida. Both of them were razed a few years ago and an era crumbled with them. The railroad reached Miami in 1896 and started the boom, which, in varying degrees has been going on ever since.

By the time the railroad reached Miami, Flagler was 66, but, now thoroly imbued with the spirit of youth, he pushed ever south. In fact, his most daring achievement was yet to come. He already had established a steamship route to Nassau and Havana, and had evolved the idea of a route between the United States and Cuba, the West Indies, and Central and South Americas. To this end he decided to extend his railroad to Key West.

"Flagler's Folly," they called it. Whoever heard of a railroad going to sea? But, with no precedents to follow, and in the face of overwhelming obstacles, the work of bridging the Florida keys to Key West was accomplished, and on Jan. 22, 1912, 20 days after Flagler's 82d birthday and only a few months before his death, he triumphantly rode the "Overseas Railroad" into Key West.

Visitors in Miami and Miami Beach are looking hopefully toward March 22, when they anticipate the pleasure driving ban will be modified. Altho gallonage may be reduced, motorists may be allowed to use their gasoline as they see fit, which will be a distinct improvement. The revision in the ban, however, will come as a Pyrrhic victory to racing fans, for the racing season ends April 10, and the peak of the winter crowd has been reached and neither track will open now. Incidentally, the state has lost $3,500,000 in tax revenue because of the lack of racing.

But Miamians have found things other than racing to keep them busy this winter. Nearly every one has a war garden, and residents of the exclusive Sunset Islands have banded together to make the most of their crops, for they have canning seasons.

The Committee of One Hundred continues its weekly forums, with new arrivals for the spring season taking the seats vacated by visitors who still think Florida isn't fashionable after February. Hugh Grant, former United States minister to Siam, will speak on Tuesday on "The Far East."

If any more hotels are taken here by the army and the navy, visitors may yet find themselves on a yacht. The chamber of commerce, sending out a call for rooms in private homes, received an offer from the owner of a charter yacht, which can't put out to sea because of the gasoline situation, to take "roomers and boarders" at $35 a day.

N., was naval attaché there. Commander Harold G. Cox of the Brazilian navy and his charming wife have been in Miami several months. The commander, who is in charge of a group of Brazilian naval students; Mrs. Whitehead, and Mrs. Cox are often together. Son of an English father and a Brazilian mother, Commander Cox is a popular representative of the South American colony here, and he and Mrs. Cox are being widely fêted.

Week's Events of Chicagoland Women's Clubs

The annual benefit program of the Indian Council Fire, marking the 20th anniversary of the welfare organization, will be presented at 8:15 o'clock Saturday night in Fullerton hall of the Art institute. This year's program will see a reversal in rôles, the council members being observers rather than performers, while two young members of the white race, Reginald and Gladys Laubin, will perform ancient ceremonial dances that many of the younger generation in the council never have seen performed.

Their authoritative studies and portrayals of Indian life and customs have won the young Laubins honors from many tribes, including adoption into the Sioux, while Chief One Bull of the Crows, on whose reservation they have their tepee, regards them as his white children who are "more Indian than my red sons and daughters." The Chicago Council Fire numbers among its champion Indian dancers Green Rainbow, Flaming Arrow, and Golden Eagle.

Food Sources of Essential Minerals Given

[This is the sixth and last article in a Sunday series by Miss Meade, discussing the important vitamins and minerals in the nutritious diet.]

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1943: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Vitamins A, C, D, thiamin, riboflavin and niacin are the vitamins now considered most essential in the human diet. They have been discussed in previous articles. Research hasn't fully determined the human need for other vitamins which have been proved essential for experimental animals.

These other vitamins include vitamin E, associated with reproduction, K, the "anti-hemorrhage" vitamin, pantothenic acid [there are conflicting reports about its effect upon hair pigmentation], pyridoxine, or vitamin B-6, lack of which causes severe dermatitis and nervous degeneration in rats. Pyridoxine is known to be essental to human beings as well as animals, but not much is known so far about its distribution in foods.

We know more about our need for certain minerals, particularly calcium, phosphorus and iron. We need also potassium, sulfur, iodine, copper, magnesium and other minerals. But the average person doesn't have to worry about not getting enough of these others.

Calcium makes up about 2 per cent of the human body. It works with phosphorus to give strength and rigidity to the bones and teeth. A baby is born calcium-poor, for it is an obvious advantage that bones should be flexible at birth. As soon as the baby has been born, however, it is important that he obtain large amounts of calcium and the phosphorus necessary to bone and tooth development as well as normal growth.

Milk is the best source of both calcium and phosphorus. Whole grains, fruits, and vegetables are good sources. As a rule, calcium seems to concentrate in the leaves of plants, phosphorus in the roots, stems and seeds. Cabbage, for example, is richer in calcium than in phosphorus, while potatoes and peanuts [seeds] have more phosphorus.

A calcium-rich diet is of vital importance to growing children, but is also necessary for pregnant and lactating women, who must furnish supplies for their babies. The adult who has any consideration for his descendents will drink plenty of milk and eat lots of green, leafy vegetables, for the ill effects of a low calcium diet can show up definitely after a generation or two, even when no obvious effects appear in his life.

Cabbage, lettuce, dandelion greens, endive, escarole, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, turnip and mustard greens, kale, kohlrabi and watercress are excellent calcium sources. Spinach and beet greens are fine for iron, but contain large amounts of oxalic acid which interferes with the utilization of the calcium they supply. Orange juice helps the body make use of the calcium it gets from foods.

Phosphorus, milk, dairy products, fish, egg yolks, dried beans, and peas, corn, whole grain cereals, as well as most fruits and vegetables, can be depended upon for adequate amounts.

Iron is the mineral most necessary for keeping the blood in good condition. Certain types of anemia are caused by lack of iron.

• • •

Eggs and liver are the two best food sources of iron. Organ meats and lean muscle meats [rare beef is especially good], milk, whole grain cereals, green leafy vegetables and fruits are the best sources.

Women and growing children need an iron-rich diet. So do persons who have lost blood from wounds, hemorrhage, or donations to the Red Cross. In the healthy adult, the blood supply quickly returns to normal, since the weakening effect of a Red Cross blood donation is but short lived. A meal of eggs or liver immediately afterward is a good strength restorer.

The Man Hater Has Not Grown Up Emotionally

By Doris Blake.

[Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Man hating at this particular moment in our history seems the most futile of pastimes. Only other man haters have ears attuned to the slaughter. Normally adjusted people see men for what they are. And never in the history of the world has man shown himself in so magnificent a light as savior not only of his country but as savior of his women, of his home, of everything we hold dear. Heroism, pure and unadulterated, courage, and bravery of epic proportions, are portrayed daily in reports from battle torn sectors. Who is doing the fighting? Who give their lives daily, hourly, with never a thought of personal glory?

True, a few books pinioning the male to the lashing post matter little. Their influence, if they have influence at all, falls only upon ground already sown with man hating theories. Nor would we waste words on the subject if we did not feel a reflected trend in certain types of women to scorn the male and denounce him as of inferior caliber.

Noticeably this appears among women who have found financial independence thru long years in business or professional fields and among women who have recently discovered an independent earning capacity thru new found war industry or other employment.

J. Pierpont Morgan once remarked that a man always has two reasons for doing anything: A good reason and the real reason. "It is equally true of women," declares Paul Popenoe, Sc. D., general director of the American Institution of Family Retions, whose "Marriage Before and After" [Wilfred Funk, Inc.] treats deftly of this man hater theme.

Popenoe's diagnosis, after study of this type, is that "it's a deep seated and largely unconscious feeling of inferiority based on femaleness. Or, a widespread regret among women that they were born females."

Such girlhood admonitions as "you can't do that; you're a girl!" may inspire the feeling that the boys have all the fun in the world, and that it is unfortunate to be born a girl, an impression frequently carried into adult age by the man hater. Or, in case of marital unhappiness, hating the man may be bred of an early protest that no female can be happy — as happy as the male.

Popenoe finds that from the well educated group of women is drawn the greatest number of man haters. Since men are such a bad lot, Popenoe argues, you might suppose that the man hater would want to make herself as unlike them as possible; that she would dress in an ultra-feminine manner; that she would do everything she could to differentiate herself from the male. On the contrary, she becomes more mannish in general getup, in her style, and in her manner.

Well, it's a silly business, in our authority's judgment. Why should a superior woman spend her life punishing herself and those around her for the fact that she was born a female instead of a male. It's one fact in her life that she certainly cannot change.

The woman who thinks it's a man's world, run by men for their own benefit and to the disadvantage of women, Popenoe challenges, forgets that a large part of the men in America think just the opposite: That it is a woman's world, run by women for their own benefit, and to the disadvantage of men.

But the main point is: "What is the man hater going to do about it? What can she do about it?" Nothing, period! That's the answer, since no matter how clever, how determined, how aggressive the woman, there is one thing she can't possibly accomplish—she can't become a male.

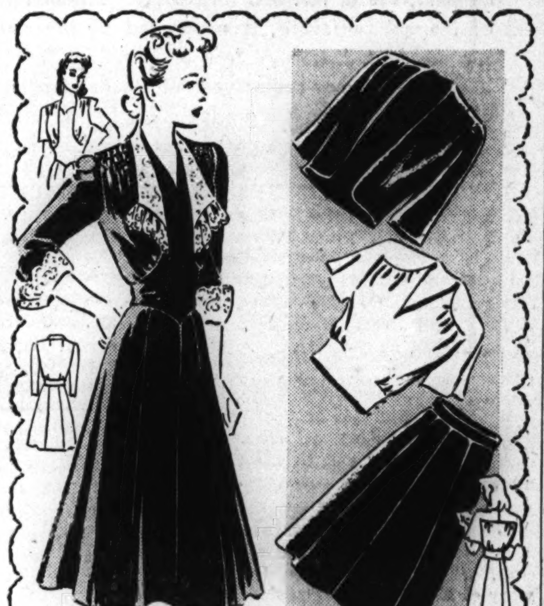
Therefore, Popenoe argues, why shouldn't she enjoy being a first rate woman? Hers is the more important sex biologically and the more interesting sex, psychologically, it is wholeheartedly granted.

"If you are a woman," Popenoe urges, "ask yourself whether you often wish that you had been born a man, and are more or less secretly resentful of your sex. If so, it's a danger signal, emotionally. Why not face this dissatisfaction frankly, and, since you can't change it, prepare to make as much out of your womanhood as possible?

Refusal to face the truth, according to our authority's diagnosis, is essentially an infantile type of behavior. As long as the man hater keeps her present frame of mind she isn't grown up emotionally.

As a reward for her efforts at reeducating herself after a first rate woman pattern, as opposed to the poor male imitation at best, Popenoe promises a solution of many daily problems, not seemingly connected with the male resenting way of thought and action.

Patterns by Clotilde



Various silhouettes are catered to by the patterns illustrated. At the left is a one piece model with paneling, midriff sector, and shoulderline all conspiring to glorify the mature figure. This is a dress in the new manner, with all-over embroidery forming the collar and ruffling adding that feminine touch so indispensable this year.

The other design is styled for all figures. It consists of skirt, blouse, and companion bolero, a handsome threesome with vesatile social ways. Fabric and color contrast are easily achieved with this pattern, and the remnant counters are a source of treasure for an ensemble such as this one.

Style No. 3379 is designed for 36 to 52 inch bust measurements. Size 36 requires 3⅜ yards of 39 inch fabric, with ⅜ yard all over embroidery for collar and 1¼ yards of 3 inch eyelet embroidery for ruffling.

Style No. 2602 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 and 36 to 48 inch bust measurements. Size 36 requires 3⅜ yards of 39 inch fabric for skirt and bolero to match; 1½ yards for blouse.

Each pattern costs 10 cents, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost.

Thinking of Lenten Fare.

First Sunday in Lent [Sundays do not count in the 40 days, so we say in Lent instead of of Lent]; and the new-fangled fishing almanac, based on earth tides, says it's a good day for fishing. But you know what happens to people who go fishing on Sunday!

Besides, the only fish that greatly stir my interest are brook trout from a spring-fed stream, cooked over an open fire; black bass from an icy lake, sent right down to the cook's galley, and crisply broiled Lake Superior white fish, when I've been put off the boat at 5 a. m. and walked all over the water front in search of provender.

So, rationing being what it is, on several counts this Lenten season seems a good time to turn vegetarian and beard the early dandelion in his den. Joe Pete, who used to snort at "people living out of cans," and wanted the big white asparagus cut several inches below the ground, must, perforce, become a hunter of the wild to the tune of "What Are the Wild Weeds Saying?"

By the way, just the other day some one told me dandelions may be "salted down" just like kraut, curly kale, green beans, and similar garden greens. I'm going to try at least a small crock of them.

Conglomeration.

A salad is a mystery
Of vegetables or fish,
Of Macaroni, eggs, or meat—
A motley, hodge-podge dish.

Left over foods, like ghosts, return,
On Tuesday, what surprise
To see last Sunday's roast or peas
Peep up from pale disguise!

The mixture on a lettuce leaf
Depends on whims of fate,
For salads are not made, you know,
They just accumulate.

Each time I chop and blend, then add
The decorative fluff,
I wonder, is there any one
Who really likes this stuff?

No moon is out to light
A path across the waves,

No ships are out; ah, see
The beacon flashes futilely
Across the empty air!
No seaman there
Searching for the shore.
I do not like

So still.

Reflections.

White gulls circling against the bright sky,
White sails of ice boats go flashing by.
Blue sky reflects on Lake Calumet,
Where industries' towered silhouette
Forms a grey background of smoke and steam.
Long vanished is the fisherman's dream—
The hunter and sportsman tread no more
Where wild game flourished in days of yore.
Civilization is closing in,
Where once roamed foot in moccasin—

White gulls and white sails are gleaming yet
O'er the waters of Lake Calumet.

Fashions

By Angela

A well rounded feminine wardrobe is as pleasantly varied as spring weather. Spring successes employ everything from fine details and lingerie touches to smartly tailored accents, but above all, rich, clear colors.

An informal one-piece short-sleeved, dance dress, sketched at top, may alternate as a dressy afternoon frock—or the "right" dress for an informal, unplanned wedding. Buttoned down the front from a round cardigan neckline, the fashion details are striking in their simplicity. A self-ruffle runs from each shoulder to a V at the waistline, forming a frame for the buttons of the blouse. Four darts at each side of the front skirt-waist give a sleek, flat line to the trim skirt.

White or yellow daffodils splashed against a dark background are the theme of the second one-piece "spring song." The side draped skirt is emphasized with a bow and side fulness.

Uncrushable and extremely cool is the unusual jersey print of large flowers and delicately veined leaves. The five gored, scalloped yoke at the front waistline and radiating fulness from the simple V neckline mark it as an outstanding fashion choice.

A lovely dressmaker suit, created in a combination of sheer and tissue faille, may divide its wearability among a variety of occasions. The faille weskit effect has five soft plaits finishing the wide lapels as they reach the shoulder. A double fold of the sheer joins the weskit in an unusual fashion to form smartly draped and useful pockets.

A tailored, two-piece street suit is of all black, relieved at the shoulder by a black and white checked taffeta yoke. The cuffs are turned back and a black sheer band binds the collar.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen.

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, but not value. The column in this page contains offers to buy and sell. Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

The postoffice department announces that the complete figures for the first day sales of the 1 cent Four Freedoms stamps show that 1,308,372 copies were sold at Washington, D. C., on Feb. 12, and that 193,800 covers received the first day postmark.

The first day sales of the 2 cent Nations United for Victory stamp amounted to 884,120 copies on Jan. 14, of which 382,047 were sold at the Washington postoffice and 502,073 at the philatelic agency. In this case 178,865 covers received the first day postmark.

The department calls attention to the fact that the quantities of first day covers for these two stamps surpassed those of prior issues of the same denominations. It may be assumed that the officials expected a letdown in collector interest during the war. Since interest is holding up readers may look forward to increased activity in the new issue section of the postoffice department.

Paul Manship, well known sculptor, designed the Four Freedoms stamp. His sketch as submitted to postal authorities was an unfinished study which had been carried in plaster. He had expected to develop the design later, but it was used practically as submitted.

Carl T. Arlt engraved the portrait and ornaments for the Four Freedoms stamp and James T. Vail added the frame, inscriptions, and numerals. Plate numbers 23006 to 23013, inclusive, were assigned to this stamp in January, but none were put to press until after the end of the month. All plates contain 400 subjects each and are of the layout to be used in the electric eye perforation machine.

Billig's Philatelic Handbook, Volume I, is the title of a recent publication by Fritz Billig, well known philatelist and stamp dealer. In the past Mr. Billig has published many foreign language catalogs and lists of stamps by individual countries and this marks his first effort for English speaking collectors.

In general the handbook is devoted to foreign stamps, but enough unusual United States cancellations have been included to make the book valuable to the collector of these marks. The principal subject in this volume is undoubtedly Austria, for 80 of the 240 pages are used for the stamps and postmarks of that country. In addition to priced lists of the regular issues Mr. Billig has included data on all the local issues, fiscal stamps used for postage and various other side-line issues which are not mentioned in the regular postage stamp catalogs.

The stamps of Poland and Czechoslovakia have important sections in the book and some phases of the philately of a score of other countries handled in an authoritative manner. This handbook is published by the Billings Stamp company of Jamaica, N. Y., and is priced at $2.50.

Collectors who wish to have the 1 cent Four Freedoms stamps autographed by the designer, Paul Manship, may do so provided a contribution of $1 is made to Chinese War Relief. The same procedure and conditions will obtain the autograph of the designer of the 2 cent Nations United for Victory stamp. In this case address Leon Helguera, 551 5th avenue, New York City.

The so-called "modern wife" often distrusts the half-knowledge gathered during her adolescence. But, instead of entering wifehood fully equipped with the intimate facts she needs, she resorts to over-strong solutions of acids for the douche which can actually burn, scar and even desensitize delicate tissue.

Today such risks are needless. Science has given womankind a safe—yet amazingly powerful liquid for the douche, Zonite. So powerful is Zonite, it kills instantly all germs and bacteria with which it comes in contact. Deodorizes—by actually destroying odors, leaving no telltale odor of its own. Group Riding Etiquet Rules Given Today

Should you ask for second helpings at an informal dinner? Helen Bartlett, Tribune etiquet editor, answers this and other questions about the right things to do at the table in her booklet, "Table Manners." On sale at Tribune Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn street, and Tribune Tower, 435 N. Michigan avenue. Price 3 cents. Postpaid, 5 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

All of us want to do our share to help relieve the trials of transportation these war days, and we do not hesitate to share a taxicab with persons unknown to us. There may be a few selfish enough to refuse to let a cab driver pick up extra passengers, but we hope they'll be left waiting on the curb, and let's concentrate on the correct conduct for those who are willing to coöperate in group riding.

First and foremost in our minds is the problem of handling the bill. The cab companies have themselves set this regulation. It's a simple procedure. The passengers, they say, should inquire of each other to determine who will leave the vehicle last and as each person reaches his destination he should give his share of the bill plus a portion of the tip to this "last man." This doesn't mean that the full amount of the bill up to this point is assumed unless others have been taken far out of their way. Give a fair share of the bill without being too miserly or over-generous.

Conversation among strangers in a cab is limited, wisely enough. The weather and the scenery are about the safest subjects; beyond that, tread lightly. Cozy quarters are no reason for prying into another's history or for discussing one's own life. Few persons care to listen to a discussion of a stranger's busy day, children, work or like affairs, nor do they care to be questioned about their own lives. There are times when a person may not feel like talking at all, and conversation is then not incumbent upon him. A friendly nod or smile is all that is necessary.

Young women should be especially careful to avoid giving any consideration to men who might like to regard group riding as an introduction and basis for further acquaintance. It isn't safe. The wise procedure is to ignore, or discourage any one who tries to take advantage of this war time situation.

Some Children Quick to Learn Orderly Habits

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"My children are so frightfully disorderly that I don't know how they'll ever get along when they grow up and have homes of their own," said a mother the other day. And many others have had the same misgivings.

Well, I'm afraid you'll think I'm a skeptic after you read this article, because the gist of it will be that orderliness is not all a matter of training. Also the rest of the gist will be that the help you as a housekeeper get in running your house and keeping it "composed" looking is quite as important as the effect on the children's character.

Now I first want to say that I believe that, to a great extent, the sense of order is something a person is born with. However, I must stop at once to say that I'm not talking about the orderliness that we so often see in young children. For, just as they love slowly fitting blocks into their box, or lining up their furry animals on the cabinet, so they will often preserve order in other ways about the house.

You may be quite thrilled and begin to visualize a son or daughter who is always going to be a model in that respect. But if you do, you're almost sure to be slated for a letdown, because this passion for order is a phase which many young children go thru. It's "all of a piece" with the other little ways I mentioned, which are due to the fact that their home and the objects in it are all part of their new world, and the handling and arranging of them are a novel learning experience.

It is only later on, when they are older and this novelty has worn off, that you will begin to see whether you have a child with sense of order.

As your child grows older you will begin to see whether he is an orderly young person by his ways about the house. If he or she is, your work is immeasurably lightened. But if you find your son or daughter is not too orderly, then you've got some training to do.

• • •

But right now I want to go back to what I was saying at the beginning of this article, which will both encourage you and discourage you. It is that orderliness is not all a matter of training. I'll give you some examples.

A young soldier in the army hospital where I was visiting recently was talking about the little home he and his wife had just turned the key on.

"There were six of us boys," he said. "And it seemed as if nothing mother could do would make us orderly. There was a big hook on the back of the hall door, and when we came in we'd throw our coats at it. Fortunately, only dad wore a hat, but if we had, I know they would have been all over the place. But you should see me now!"

At this point his wife laughed. "There isn't ever one thing out of place in our house. Sam's a regular old maid. And when my brother-in-law comes to visit us, Sam walks around behind him 'picking up' after him."

A young girl I've known since babyhood had a loving and interesting mother, but the most disorderly, careless woman about a house and her clothes I have ever seen. Yet that child always showed almost a passion for orderliness.

• • •

Still another young girl in a quite large family was brought up by a mother who was a meticulous housekeeper. That young girl, now married and with a child, shows not the slightest sign that this was her background.

I could multiply the examples. Probably, if you sat down to think about it, you could find as many instances as I.

Now all this doesn't mean that you should throw up the sponge as far as attempting to establish orderly habits in your children is concerned. It only serves to help you to look realistically at your job of training. In doing that you will get a good slant on just about what measure of success you can expect. You won't, I hope, in any case strive for an ideal of "housekeeper's perfection." If you achieved it, your house would be a most imperfect home for children to really live in.

Naturally, every woman has a different idea of what she wants her home to look like from the angle of order. But if she will bear in mind some of the things I've talked of, and also the fact that it is the children's home, one they will look back to, besides enjoying it in the present, I believe she will work out a happy and practical solution.

Fashions as I See Them

By Judith Cass

Fashions in table settings are likely to include anything from bits of coral to fisherman's netting, old cheese molds, china dogs, and mounds of sand, as entertaining becomes more and more informal. All of these unusual "properties" are used on the attractive tables which members of Chicago garden clubs have set. The exhibit on the second floor of Marshall Field's, under the auspices of the Garden Club of Illinois, will be open to the public thru next Saturday. Mrs. Charles R. Walgreen, who set a table for an Easter breakfast in the country, used a sand colored cloth with napkins tucked into its pockets, sand colored pottery plates etched in yellow, an old cheese mold holding tall, Swedish glasses, and a charming arrangement of yellow jonquils and baby pine cones, thru which peep a pottery chicken and rooster. The whole effect is delightful, as is the little hat which Mrs. Walgreen wore on the opening day of the exhibit. Her chapeau of French blue and ruby roses was tied up in palest blue veiling, to which bits of rose petals were appliqued. Mrs. Walgreen wore her mink coat over a navy blue dress whose sole design is bowknots around the neck and hem, cut out of the crêpe and replaced with navy net. Mrs. Warren W. Shoemaker, a former Garden club president, set her gentian blue linen cloth with pale blue, patterned Chinese dishes, an old pewter coffee pot, and curious oriental serving dish, and a centerpiece of yellow china birds and bright colored fruits. She toured the exhibit in a chocolate brown crêpe dress with circles made of gold nailheads all over the bodice and a little hat piled high with brown felt buds and green leaves.

Exotic orange clivia blossoms form the centerpiece of Mrs. William D. Karcher's table. She placed them on a handsome gold mesh cloth beside opaque, green glass, square plates, a fluted green glass bowl, brown linen napkins, and chartreuse plates and candles. Also in the invitational class of buffet tables is the refreshing entry of Mrs. H. F. Barbour and Mrs. Carl Dunn of the Beverly Garden club, who used a white net cloth caught up with corks, branches of white coral, and two large conch shells holding scarlet gladioli and carnations. The North Shore's Garden club's cool and inviting luncheon table draws its charm from turquoise spun linen doilies appliqued with silver stenciled leaves, a milky white Chinese figurine, silver rimmed white Lenox china, and an oval crystal bowl holding yellow and white snapdragons and yellow iris. In a different vein is the "shore dinner" table of the Garden Study Club of Hinsdale, which might have been designed for an informal party on Cape Cod. The brown linen cloth is covered with an overcloth of knotty fisherman's net, on which are placed wooden bowls and serving sets, a brass pot to hold lobsters, and brown earthenware mugs lined in turquoise. The fascinating little centerpiece, showing a miniature fisherman seated upon a rocky beach mending his net, is complete in fine detail to a pair of Lilliputian seagulls.

That much touted accessory, the shawl, appeared at the Saddle and Cycle club's dancing party last week on Mrs. Louis C. Sudler. Hers was of peach silk, heavily fringed, and it was stunning with her apple green evening gown. About the most tailored evening ensemble at the club was worn by Mrs. Whipple Jacobs, a navy blue skirt and bolero jacket with long sleeves and a white shirtwaist. A little bow tie of the navy was knotted under the turndown collar. Mrs. John V. Farwell III. took to the dance floor in a black velvet and pink faille gown. Her long sleeved dress has a tight bodice and the skirt is made of tiers of black velvet ruffles on the pink. To give an exhibition dance of the rumba and the samba, Mrs. William B. Johnson wore a simple, black crêpe skirt and a long sleeved, loose fitting blouse of crimson chiffon. The kind of dinner gown that is timeless and stunning, a plain black crêpe with gold appliqué worok outlining deep slash pockets in the skirt, was worn by Mrs. Benjamin Crawford. The well cut bodice barely covered the tops of her arms. An unusual and stunning evening wrap was worn to the opening of "The Doughgirls" last Monday at the Selwyn by Mrs. Edward Morris. It was a three-quarters length cape of gleaming black caracul. Her svelte dinner dress beneath was black, too, and gathered all the way down the front of the skirt into a fold of material that provided a silhouette that was a stunning contrast to the swing of the cape.

HOME OWNERS' QUERIES

Detroit, Mich.—[To the Home Owners' Editor.]—We find it hard to remove wax from some old floors. What can we use?—K. H.

Answer: Ask for special neutral cleaners for this type of work at your local hardware or paint store.

Answer: Try filling kettle with a mixture of cider vinegar and water, one quart of water to a cupful of vinegar. Bring this to a boil and let it stand over night. Sometimes you can do the work by boiling several potatoes in the kettle with a little water for several hours. Add water as necessary.

• • •

Chicago [To the Home Owners' Editor].—Why doesn't some one manufacture a liquid which will clean a glossy surface and at the same time deaden the gloss so it can be given a new finish? Seems to me I have heard of such materials but can't locate them. —Joe G.

Answer: There is just such a penetrating liquid. You don't have to clean the surface first and then employ another process to deaden the gloss. It is sold thru many paint stores. If you can't locate, address this department for retail outlets and manufacturers' name.

• • •

Chicago.—[To the Home Owners' Editor.]—What will remove rust from a heater door in the basement?—Dan M.

Answer: You can remove with steel wool and then apply a coat of stove black paint.

• • •

Valparaiso, Ind. [To the Home Owners' Editor].—How can one remove a stain from a piece of alabaster? What's the best way to keep it clean? And how can we rid silver of some slight scratches? —June G.

Answer: Try removing stain from alabaster with alcohol. A soft brush and warm water and soap should be sufficient for ordinary cleaning. For slight scratches on silver make a paste of olive oil and whiting and see if this mixture does the work.

According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1943: By Ely Culbertson.]

As glorious a game as bridge is, there is no denying that it can be exasperating at times. [Or, perhaps, this is just another part of its fascination.] The value of a seven spot versus a six, for example, is one of those things that cannot be foreseen in the bidding, yet which has a tremendous bearing on the outcome. Consider this hand:

West dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Match point duplicate.

♥ A Q 9 7 6
♦ 9 2
♣ 9

♠ K 8 6 5
♥ None
♦ K 10 4 3
♣ A Q J 8 2

♠ 10
♦ Q J 8 6
♣ 10 7 6 5 4 3

SOUTH
♠ Q J 2
♥ K J 8 5 4 3
♦ A 7 5
♣ K

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 club	1 spade	Pass	3 hearts
Pass	4 hearts	5 clubs	Pass
Pass	5 hearts	Pass	Pass
6 clubs	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

This bidding is worthy of note. The opening club bid and spade overcall by North were, of course, orthodox. East properly held his peace on the first round; a raise, particularly in the minor suits, based on nothing but distribution is rarely advisable except in delayed form. When North-South quickly climbed up to a game in hearts, however, East felt, reasonably enough, that a "save" would be in order; hence, his good five club bid. This, South properly passed around to his partner for action, and North's distribution being infinitely more favorable to aggressive than to defensive action, he went on to five hearts. Now East subsided—he had given his partner a splendid picture of his hand [a long line of clubs and practically nothing else] and it was up to West to decide whether five hearts could be defeated or whether a sacrifice at the six level would be a paying bid.

West, in the knowledge that East had virtually nothing but clubs, realized that his chance of defeating five hearts was about nil, and since the opponents had shown no disposition to go to a slam, risked that eventuality by offering to sacrifice at six clubs.

Now, it will be observed, even tho North had two aces, he did not make the mistake of taking the decision away from his partner. He used a forcing pass as the proper measure. Unfortunately, in this particular instance, South was unable to profit from his partner's correct bidding philosophy. With the club king in his own hand, there were two considerations which made his own slam prospects look bad: [a] Since West's clubs could be no better than A-Q or A-Q-J, it seemed likely that he had an outside ace for his bid, or, failing that [b] that one club trick would have to be lost and that the spade suit would not be absolutely solid.

That South's judgment was logical, tho the slam was actually there, is attested by the fact that a remarkable lay of cards would have to be found to make six hearts a laydown. Actually, of course, that fortunate position did exist, but note the minor card in North's hand that it depended on! South would, of course, lead the spade queen thru West, dropping East's 10 spot [quite a break in itself] and then, on returning to the spade jack, would be able to finesse thru West's eight spot to North's 9-7. In short, even with the spade 10 dropping on the first round, the slam would not have been there if West's spades had been the K-8-7-5 instead of the K-8-6-5!

Considering that the most accurate bidding on North-South's part could not have disclosed the difference between a seven and a six, I think it must be admitted that South's decision to double six clubs rather than go to a slam was unimpeachable. Yet, as I have said, many teams in this duplicate game did bid and make six hearts and consequently this particular South received a bad match point score.

INDUCT FOURTH 'WHITE EAGLES' UNIT IN DU PAGE

Pin Wings on Naval Cadets Wednesday.

Formal induction of the fourth "White Eagles" 40 et 8 squadron will be the feature of Naval Aviation night Wednesday in the Glenbard High school gymnasium in Glenn Ellyn. Du Page county has first place position among counties of the middle west as a recruiter of navy air cadets, and it is with the realization of the record that the country-wide observance will be held.

Induction of the fourth squadron of White Eagles will take place between halves of the Glenbard Intermural championship basketball game.

Lt. Comm. Carl G. Olson, officer in charge of the Naval Aviation Cadets selection board in Chicago, will accept the 40 et 8 cadets on behalf of the navy and will present them their official squadron wings of gold. The cadets soon will leave for pre-flight training either at Monmouth college or DePauw university.

Legion Sons to Raise Colors.

Activities will start at 7 o'clock when the colors will be presented by the Sons of the American Legion of Villa Park. There will be singing of the national anthem, and an address of welcome by Arthur D. Lamb, chef-de-gare of the Du Page county 40 et 8.

There will be two basketball games, the second to be played between Glenbard High school and the naval air station at Glenview. William Tronvig, Du Page county commander of the American Legion, will give the final address, and there will be music by the Glenbard High school band.

Du Page county's 452 high school seniors will be special guests at the program. Members of the new 40 et 8 squadron, made up of youths of 17 in high schools of the county, will receive instructions from Lt. Comm. Olson. This group represents the fifth "White Eagle" squadron from the county, and each member will receive a pin bearing the inscription "Enlisted at 17 for Navy Wings."

Naval Aviation night has been planned by Du Page voiture of the 40 et 8, Du Page posts of the American Legion, and the Du Page "Fly for Navy" committee. War stamps will be charged for admission to the program.

Four other members of the squadron, who were somewhat advanced in training and went to Corpus Christi a month ago, are Judd Doane, Robert Diehl, Harold Ricord, and Gordon Caldwell.

Bagpipe to Set Rhythm for Irish Party on St. Patrick's Day

The Shannon Rovers band, a part of one of the many west side Irish clubs, will play for the party and John Hartigan, 1453 North Lockwood avenue, will beat out the rhythmic Irish airs on the big bass drum. The three organizations sponsoring the party, an annual affair for Chicago's Irish, are the Shannon Rovers, the Irish Mummers, and the Patrick Sarsfield club. [TRIBUNE Photos by Julius Gantter.]

The party will be for both the young and the old and among the young musicians taking part will be the fife and flute players of the Sarsfield club. Marie Richardson, 4933 Gladys avenue, is the young girl dressed up in the white boots and Irish green skirt and cape. The boys are Gene Sharkey, 5234 Monroe street, left, and James Enright, 5430 Quincy street.

MERCHANTS GAVE COFFEE AWAY IN DEAR DEAD DAYS

Maywood History Unit Says It Was So.

Perhaps it was because the decade just before the turn of the century offered such marked contrast to what was to follow in an age of new inventions the so-called "gay 90s" provide most interesting material for historical research groups.

At a recent meeting of the Maywood Historical society, perusal of local newspapers published prior to 1900 revealed the advertisment of a village merchant who offered to give a pound of coffee away with every five pound purchase. Bicycles were the vogue and there was no mention of tire rationing. Bids were requested for new board walks.

The society, which had its beginning in 1938, reëlected W. L. Castleman, president; Mrs. Susan Hough, first vice president; Miss Vernell C. Dammaier, second vice president, and Mrs. Mildred Diesner, treasurer. Edward P. Benjamin was elected secretary. Mrs. O. J. Westcott was reelected delegate to the Illinois Historical society.

Librarian Keeps Records.

Mrs. Westcott, who has been chairman of the fact finding committee since the society's organization, will continue to serve in that capacity. Her committee members are Mrs. Z. C. Smith, Walter F. Tanton, Elmer W. Tolsted, and Mrs. E. W. Edlund.

Mrs. Susan Hough as first vice president will be in charge of the program committee, which consists of Mrs. Walter Edlund and Mrs. Christina Radcliffe. Mrs. Clyde Rhodes, assisted by John Benson, will be responsible for membership, with every member of the society as a comember of the committee.

Annual dues are 50 cents, and life membership $5. All persons residing in Maywood who are over 18, are eligible for membership.

Member of Pioneer Family.

Mrs. Edlund, altho retiring as secretary, will continue as an active committee worker. She is the only surviving member of the family of Col W. T. Nichols, who was founder of Maywood. Mrs. Edlund and Mrs. Westcott, who have given much time to the promotion of the society, have both resided in the village 50 years. They feel that there are many residents familiar with early days who could contribute interesting facts about early settlers which should be on record.

Cited as a document of the type desired is that recently written by Edward P. Benjamin, giving the history of one of Maywood's earliest homes. The result, it is realized, demanded painstaking research and a checking of information. Another appreciated contribution is "The History of the Service of Electricity and Gas in Maywood," compiled by George Bailey, local manager for the Public Service company.

Church Hour Today Honors Berwyn Hero

When the Sunday school or the choir or the Walther league of Concordia Lutheran church in Berwyn wanted something done they turned to Clarence Hillmer. The Rev. E. G. Kleidon, pastor of the church, referred to Clarence as one of his "right hand men." Early in 1941, Clarence was selected for army service and went into training at Camp Forrest, Tenn.

Clarence Hillmer.

Thirty-nine other young men from the congregation answered their country's call. There have been 40 blue stars in the church service flag. The blue star for Clarence Hillmer turned to gold on January 2 when he was killed in action while on duty in the South Pacific area. An army chaplain has written of the burial that took place in a far off land. Word of tribute has been sent by Gen. Marshall.

Memorial Service Today

This morning at 10:45 o'clock service in Concordia church, 32d street and Home avenue, those who knew Clarence best will devote the hour to his memory. The sermon topic will be "A Loyal Soldier to Christ and Country." There will be special music by the choir including a selection "Be Still, My Soul," and a solo "Cast Thy Burden," by Miss Gertrude Steier, a former Sunday school pupil in Mr. Hillmer's class.

A memorial scroll will be presented by the army and navy commission of the church to the hero's parent's, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hillmer, 3222 Highland avenue, Berwyn. The Rev. Mr. Kleidon will make the presentation.

GIRLS FAVORITE SOLDIER TOPIC IN SOLOMONS

Fighters' Writings Reveal Hopes.

Glimpses of life in the service as experienced by an infantryman later killed in action in the Solomons, a young woman in the WAACs, a marine on an island in the South Pacific, a sailor belonging to a construction battalion, and an air corps lieutenant at Pearl Harbor are contained in the first five letters published today in THE TRIBUNE's new Service Letter column.

The letter from the soldier who, under the command of Col. Le Roy Nelson, was killed in the Solomons, was written to Mrs. Gay Mac Laren Backman of Rolling Prairie, Ind., who became his friend thru correspondence as a result of the Adopt a Yank project sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for Christmas, 1941.

LETTER FROM SOLOMONS

From Pvt. Anthony W. Kasmauskas, age 23, 1527 South 49th street, Cicero, who since writing the letter has been killed in action in Guadalcanal, to Mrs. Gay-MacLaren Backman of Rolling Prairie, Ind. The father of Pvt. Kasmauskas, a Lithuanian who came to this country, was wounded twice during the Russo-Japanese war.

"I want to thank you for the introduction to M . . . . I am looking forward to hearing from her [and so are my buddies]. From the way you write about her there is no doubt in my mind, but that she is a swell girl, not the bragging type. I'm sure that I'll like her, but what worries me is will she like me. I hope you realize that I'm no Clark Gable or Don Juan. I've aged so much since I've been in the army that I'll look like her father when I get out.

Would Welcome Snow.

"It is funny to hear about snow. This will be the second year that I haven't seen any, but I would gladly see a snow storm instead of a heat wave. It has been raining continuously for three days, but now the sun is coming out to fry us again. One can put on enough clothes to keep warm, but you can't take off enough to keep cool.

"You want to know what I am interested in. Well I'm mostly interested in getting back to the good old U. S. A. If I could get there I would be interested in anything that was American. But that is beside the point. I'm mostly interested in sports, basketball, football, and baseball. I am interested in good old American girls but I am not in a position to let that bother me much, but we do enjoy receiving letters from them. We do talk politics here but the subject is usually girls and the war.

"We don't get to hear much music now because our radio is gone. I haven't forgotten that dinner and dancing date with you and your husband and my girl friend. But she probably won't be my girl friend when I get back. I hear most of the girls are getting married, so we'll just take M—— along. We fellows will have to start life all over again where there are women. You say I don't know how the girls miss the men but you don't know how the men miss the girls and women.

Anxious to See Chicago.

"I suppose Chicago hasn't been very pleasant with the streets torn up but it would sure look pleasant to me. I am looking forward to marching down Michigan avenue with my bag full of Japs. That will be the happiest day of my life.

"I am looking forward too to that party you are going to give us at Backman pond and so are my buddies. O Boy, we could go for those weinies, stuffed with cheese and wrapped in bacon, in a big way. Everything we get here is in cans, but we are used to it and don't mind the food at all. But it is far from the good old meals that Mom used to make."

WAAC WRITES MOTHER

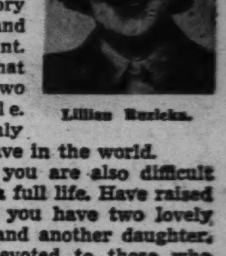
"Now you have a daughter as well as a son in service. It was no easy task for any of them to pull up roots and go forth. What all of them dream of and look forward to most is coming home some day. Not for glory but for peace and contentment. They picture that home with two lovely people. Really the only friends they have in the world.



Lillian Ruzicka.

"Things for you are also difficult You have had a full life. Have raised a family. Now you have two lovely grandchildren and another daughter. Your life is devoted to those who remain near you.

Urges Loyalty and Trust.

"This war is being fought because a few people thought they were being picked on. There is no such thing. God moves in mysterious ways and

3 IRISH GROUPS PLAN WEST SIDE ST. PATRICK FETE

Leprechauns Ruled Out at Wednesday Party.

The large Irish population on Chicago's west side will point thumbs down to the leprechauns—Irish gremlins—Wednesday night when they give one of their largest annual St. Patrick's parties in Temple hall, 332 South Marshfield avenue.

If the impish fairies have any ideas of interfering with the annual celebration, members of the Associated West Side Irish clubs have ways of breaking their spell. According to the Irish the English gremlins who have been plaguing the R. A. F. pilots are only amateurs compared with the leprechauns with whom the people of Eire have been matching wits for several centuries.

Bob O'Reilly, 4210 Lake street, who spells his name O Raghallaigh in Gaelic, a language he speaks fluently enough to have conversed with Dr. Douglas Hyde, president of Eire, has a favorite tale of the little people.

Leads Travelers Astray.

He says that the Jack o' the Lantern, a kind of granddaddy of the gremlins, delights in leading travelers astray at night. O'Reilly says many an honest man has come home late at night with the story of being led miles out of his way by the Jack o' the Lantern. It seems that the way to get back on the right road is to turn your coat inside out and put it on that way. The harassed traveler is then free to find his way back home.

As in other years the party will be sponsored by three west side clubs—The Shannon Rovers, Irish Mummers and Patrick Sarsfield group. Many will wear Irish costumes and it is almost certain that every one will be wearing a "bit of the Irish green."

The Shannon Rovers club, which has one of the few Irish bagpipe bands in the country, will play. Instead of the plaid kilts they will be wearing green skirts, the original costume of bagpipers. According to the Irish, bagpiping was adopted by the Scots from the Irish in the 14th century after which the playing of the instrument was forbidden in Ireland.

Folk Dancing a Feature.

Folk dances will be performed by members of the Mummers club, a dramatic group of 300 members. The Patrick Sarsfield club which has a membership of more than 1,000, will present its marching band.

Another feature will be the presentation of roses and medals to a number of west side Irish mothers who have five or more sons in the United States army and navy.

Michael Gallagher, 4438 Monroe street, of the Sarsfield club, is general party chairman. Members of the Mummers club who are serving on the arrangements committee are John Caslin, 4516 Monroe street; Patrick Clark, 4928 Congress street; Mrs. Robert Hogan, 4159 Wilcox street; Dan Burns, 4153 Washington boulevard; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Sullivan, 112 South LaVergne avenue; John Forrestal, 2300 Washington boulevard; Miss Erin Newton of Oak Park, Mrs. Mary Dunbar, 2244 North Karlov avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Higgins, 221 South LaVergne avenue; Miss Eileen O'Connor, 4321 Adams street, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Healy, 4901 Adams street.

Shannon Rovers Committee.

Committee members from the Shannon Rovers club include Tom Ryan, 4913 Monroe street, president of the organization which has members from each of the 32 counties of Ireland. Other committee members representing the club are Gerald Fitzgerald, 2217 Giddings street; John Harrington, 1453 North Lockwood avenue, and Daniel Kennedy, 1718 North Laramie avenue.

The Patrick Sarsfield club is represented on the committees by Mr. and Mrs. John Quillinan, 4847 Haddon avenue; Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy, 5309 Quincy street; Mr. and Mrs. Al O'Shaughnessy, 5430 Haddon avenue; Mrs. Nellie Heany, 248 North Pine avenue; Joe Keough, 4823 Chicago avenue; Mr. and Mrs. John Gilhooly, 4140 Van Buren street; Miss Anna Marie Gallagher, 4810 Jackson boulevard; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Weiler, 205 North Leamington avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Mike Gallagher, 4438 Monroe street; and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Novak, 1118 North Mayfield avenue.

ST. ROMAN CLUB TO HOLD FASHION SHOW ON SUNDAY

Members of the St. Roman Mothers' club will sponsor a card party and fashion show at 2 o'clock next Sunday afternoon in the school hall, Washtenaw avenue and 23d street. Proceeds will be used to purchase a stereoptic machine and to equip and furnish the school's first aid machine.

The fashion show will be in charge of Greta Swan, stylist, who will show the latest round the clock fashions. Mannequins will be Miss Waunita Rogers, Miss Loretta Zajac, Miss Mary E. Sperka, Miss Cynthia Dubiel, Mrs. Frances Domagala, Mrs. Emily Dubiel, and Mrs. Lillian Choliminski.

Mrs. Fred Nosal, president, is chairman of the affair. Committee chairmen are Mrs. John Domagla, tickets; Mrs. Frank J. Krol, table prizes; Mrs. Joseph Maslanka, refreshments, and Mrs. William M. Cooney, fashion show arrangements.

Oak Park High Drama Club Inducts 9 New Members

Make 1,000 Red Cross Bandages Weekly

Warns Against Fears.

"I believe if you will think this over carefully you will find that it was just a bad dream you had. Start all over again and try harder this time. Each time one of these fears comes to you cast it aside and try just a little harder. You are a sensible person and I know you love us all very much. Try trusting us very much. Please remember we wouldn't be in this thing is we didn't think you were worth fighting for. But you must fight for us too in your quiet way on the home front.

"I'm trusting you, Mother, and may God bless you."

MARINE WRITES MOTHER

From Pvt. Fred R. Weinberger, a marine, to his mother, Mrs. Fred Weinberger, 7007 26th place, Berwyn. Weinberger, an only child, enlisted in February, 1942 when 19 years old.

"I'm on an island in the South Pacific. Which one? Heh, heh won't tell ya. What do I mean, won't tell ya, I can't. Rain, rain, rain, and more rain. Sometimes a little bit; sometimes torrents, but always rain. We are located in a jungle. It's very hot and damp. When the sun shines here it really shines but the air is always moist. I've been getting every itch known to man since I got here but nothing else has bothered me. I'm a radiant picture of health. Skinny but healthy. You sweat off all your weight in this heat but we're getting used to it.

Fred Weinberger.

"In our tent at night we talk over old times and the good old days. You'd be surprised how much there is to talk about. Things you never thought you would remember. Newspapers and magazines are swell. The papers take a fella right back home.

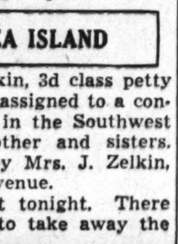
A SOUTH SEA ISLAND

From Robert Zelkin, 3d class petty officer in the navy, assigned to a construction battalion in the Southwest Pacific, to his brother and sisters. Letter submitted by Mrs. J. Zelkin, 3443 Belle Plaine avenue.

"It sure is quiet tonight. There is a slight breeze to take away the heat of the day. There's a pretty moon and light fluffy clouds. I can hear the faint tones of a sailor playing on his saxophone. We have the setting, the mood, and the music to make it the romantic spot it might appear to be and yet one gets little fascination for this island because for all its peaceful look it sure fools you.



Robert Zelkin.

"We have wooden floors in our tent now and we even built our own shower. We do our washing out of ammunition cans. Our greatest danger is falling coconuts.

Chewing Gum Stops Leaks.

"O, yes, I must tell you what use we make of chewing gum, when we have it. There are holes in our tent for the ropes that tie back the flaps. When it rains the water comes thru the holes. Yes, you've guessed it, we stuff the holes with chewing gum and presto — it's waterproof.

"I can stand anything out here but I don't know what I'd do if anything went wrong with any of you at home. So God keep you and hope to see you soon."

FROM PEARL HARBOR

From Lt. H. A. Ripkey, who was wounded in action at Pearl Harbor, to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Whelan, 6705 31st street, Berwyn. Lt. Ripkey has returned to the United States and is now stationed at Camp Hulen, Texas.

"I'll take this opportunity to wish you a belated very happy birthday, grandma, dear. I thought of you especially yesterday. I'll bet that silvery hair is prettier than ever now. What do you think, gramp?

"Altho we are constantly 'on the alert' with our men at their guns we find time to work in a game of handball on the courts, a stone's throw away. Daily we are becoming stronger, better, and more guns, more men, etc.

"How's the Windy City?"

"How's the old Windy City, anyway? I'd love to be in a good Chicago blizzard now. It sure looks funny to see the beautiful beaches of Oahu strung with barb wire and trenches.

"I hope that you people at home will keep your spirits high and your faith strong, because that is the best way you can serve the men away from home. The greatest concern of all of us is not ourselves but the loved ones at home."

A Big Response Greets Tribune Letter Contest

Response to the appeal of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for interesting war time letters was so spontaneous that five letters from the first mail received were selected in time for publication today. For each of the chosen letters $5 will be paid the sender.

Five of the letters that are considered best by the judges will be printed each week. Senders should bear in mind the following:

Letters or excerpts from them should not be longer than 200 to 250 words.

Copies of letters—not the originals—should be submitted as THE TRIBUNE cannot accept responsibility for letters lost in transmission, nor return the letters.

To add to the interest, it is suggested that a photograph of the letter writer and a brief biography of the writer accompany the letter. Do not send framed photographs or scrapbooks. Those requesting return of the pictures should write the request and address on the back of the pictures but THE TRIBUNE regrets that it cannot accept responsibility for such return.

MAYWOOD GROUP HELPS NEEDY BY MAKING LAYETTES

Success of the Maywood Layette unit is credited to the wholehearted support of residents of Maywood and the patriotism of home folks who know what war means. Many of their sons fought at Bataan. Each Thursday a group of Maywood women meet at 801 South 5th avenue, bringing such odd articles as old shirts, discarded underwear, and old gowns gathered from attics and closets. From the assortment are made layettes that are offered to needy mothers at no cost.

According to Mrs. Nina Powers, active in the program, most of the items so far produced have been made from objects which formerly would have been relegated to the old clothes bag. "The need today for layettes is particularly pressing," said Mrs. Lucille Hoy, who is in charge of the Maywood unit. In many cases, recipients appear at the headquarters where they are given instruction and where they assist in making the tiny garments. An applicant need not assist, however. We gladly welcome the services of women who wish to volunteer."

The Public Service Company of Northern Illinois has donated the use of its Victory center to the unit and supplies sewing machines and other equipment.

NEGROES LEARN FIGHTING TRADE AT FORT CUSTER

Soldiers Revel in Even Army Discipline.

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Fort Custer, Mich., March 13.—This historic place, dating freedom of the northwest and bearing the name of an epic American warrior, is rated the soldier's paradise

If there is such a thing as democracy of arms, it is here. Color, race, creed, the boast or pride of antecedent, none cuts any ice at Custer. The four corners and all tribes and bloods which make up America converge here and friction is wholly unknown.

Tho but a fraction of the Custer command, the colored soldier is in his element at Custer. He is both something of the pride and particular charge of staff and line of the fort. Here his ease and enthusiasm are inescapable to the observant eye. His grievance, if any, is personal and of the moment's experience.

Praised by Colonel.

There are thousands of white soldiers at Custer, and less than a thousand colored troops now, but all—both white and colored—are as one on the war. And there is no doubt as to how the colored soldier stacks up at Custer.

"Whenever I see a colored boy in uniform," said Col. Joseph V. Dillon," I feel that I am looking at a soldier." Col. Dillon, West Pointer and example of traditional West Point discipline, is commandant of the provost marshal general's school at Custer. "The millenium is not here," he said, "but we are making progress in the service." He didn't wish to overemphasize the work of the military police, but the colored boys divide tops, he added, in effectiveness and understanding with the best.

The pride of Custer seems to be the 795th tank destroyer battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Theophilus Mann, former Chicago lawyer, native of Illinois and a graduate of the University of Illinois. The post is unanimous in the prediction that the 795th will make military history when it moves into action. The enthusiasm and eagerness of the 795th are as marked as its intelligence. Its officers are all trained men, among them college graduates, while education, in one degree or another, distinguishes the entire outfit. It is a get-up-and-move unit and longs for combat.

Outfit Known for Industry.

Much of the popularity of the 795th is due to the industry and great military intelligence of Col. Mann, who is esteemed second to no officer at Custer and whose name is spoken by his superiors only to praise. The 795th seems to have completed all the training Custer has to offer and may soon move to a finishing school; thence, perhaps earlier than even its commander expects, to one of the theaters of battle.

That would please the boys, who harmonize a parody on Cohan:

"Over here, over here, over here,

Col. George L. Shank, commander of Fort Custer, spoke of Col. Mann as "in all respects a soldier, and his men seem to be of the same pattern."

Col. Mann assumed command of the 795th on Feb. 5, 1942. The order was precipitate, but between 4 in the afternoon and 2 a. m. he had whipped up his orders. From then on he has had the attention of war officials.

Proud of His Men.

There are only a few companies in the 795th, including the reconnaissance company and the medical company. The battalion is several hundred strong, and its personnel reads like a page from a country-wide census. "Of course I am proud of my men," said Col. Mann, "but my pride is a pardonable one when I tell you that we have had no trouble of any character, no friction, and only one or two cases of minor infraction of rules and regulations."

Lt. Col. John G. O'Brien, assistant in the provost marshal school, said that Col. Mann's statement was indeed a modest one. "The conduct of our colored boys," declared Col. O'Brien, "is in all ways and respects soldierly."

The executive officer of the 795th is Maj. Bennet G. Gray, member of one of Chicago's oldest families. There is no show about it, nothing of boast or brag, but there is the air of standard setting thruout the area of the 795th.

List of Officers.

Once Home of 184th Artillery.

Until issuance of the orders of Jan. 16, 1943, disbanding the 184th field artillery, the old 8th, from which the 184th was formed, and which for 40 years was the pride of Chicago, of Illinois, and Michigan avenue at the grand parade, dominated the area which was the show place of Custer. Both the 184th and its famous band, to which Sousa himself often listened, were severed and dispatched to southern camps.

Custer Historic Post.

Custer, an old and historic military center, is the democracy of training for war. Here the boys, white and colored, come and go at will without clash or friction. Competition in sports and recreation is keen and lively, and there is a post pride in the basketball team of the 795th, which is undisputed champion of these parts. Sound comradeship is in evidence, and the proprieties are respected without quarrel.

Capt. Richard L. Jones of Chicago, a former manager of a south side department store, is chief assistant special service officer at Custer. He is not the final authority in his department, but is usually the final word. His duties are not restricted and he shares office with his chief, Capt. George O. Kribs, a veteran of the first World war.

"I would not know what to do without Capt. Jones," declared Capt. Kribs. Col. Shank, commander of the post, went further. "I don't try doing without Capt. Jones," said Col. Shank, a soldier of a long, distinguished record.

"The Custer Atmosphere."

One of the crack sanitary companies at Custer is commanded by Capt. Adonis Patterson, a native of Battle Creek, who gave up a medical practice to rejoin the army. The work of his company has received high recognition.

SEES LIKENESS OF MISSING SON IN FLYING MAGAZINE

A recent issue of Flying magazine is particularly appreciated by Mrs. Anna Moravec, 2434 South Euclid avenue, Berwyn, because of the likeness it contains of her son, Marine Gunner Joseph F. Moravec, 28, of the marine air corps, reported Feb. 8 as "missing in action while in the performance of his duties and while aiding his country." After his graduation from Morton High school Joseph Moravec attended a flying school at Love field, Dallas, Tex. He enlisted in the marines in 1935 and earned his wings at Pensacola, Fla. Sent to the naval base at San Diego, Cal., he was assigned to the transport squadron. Shortly after the attack at Pearl Harbor he was stationed for many months at Pago Pago, Samoa.

ODT ORDER TRIMS BUS SERVICE FOR COUNTY SCHOOLS

8,000 Pupils Must Walk or Go in Family Car.

An ODT order restricting school bus use, scheduled to be effective April 1, will eliminate bus transportation for an estimated 8,000 to 10,000 Cook county school pupils, according to Noble J. Puffer, county superintendent.

The order, according to ODT spokesmen, will divert buses to more acute war needs. The restriction applies to approximately 90,000 school buses in the nation. At least 100 are used in Cook county.

The order prohibits transporting pupils who live within two miles of school, except in emergency cases.

Affects Grade Schools.

The two mile rule will affect elementary school pupils most seriously, Puffer said. He estimated that half a dozen districts now transporting all their pupils will be unable to transport any because they all live within two miles of school. Other districts will have to curtail sharply their bus service. Sixty-five of the county's 198 districts outside Chicago now transport some of their pupils.

Puffer emphasized that his estimates are tentative, pending findings of a survey launched recently. Government questionnaires have been distributed to the 65 districts affected, asking for data as to number of pupils carried, distances and routes covered.

Buses will continue to operate only if operators have certificates of war necessity. Applications must be approved first by Puffer, then by the state superintendent of public instruction, and finally by the ODT regional office, which will issue the certificates.

Tightens Prior Order.

The present action represents a tightening of a directive issued last November from Washington, asking that school bus operations be cut to the minimum. Since November, school buses have operated under emergency permits allowed on declarations made by the operators.

The family car will come into greater use for taking children to school in districts most severely affected, Puffer predicted, and he said share-the-ride school clubs may develop.

ODT spokesmen said they are not seriously concerned with passenger car tire conservation, since recaps may be had without ration board action and since they contain only about 9 per cent of crude rubber, compared with a reported 75 per cent or more used in truck and bus tires.

Pupils on Bus Route.

Pupils living along a bus route may be picked up if the bus is not filled, even tho they live within two miles of school, Puffer explained.

High school pupils are not expected to be affected much by the new system, since most of these students who use school buses live beyond the two mile limit.

Robert Nau, liaison officer of the ODT, who appeared recently before representatives of school districts in Puffer's office, said that of 150,000 buses in the nation last year, 90,000 were school buses. Merrill Knox, consultant of the Illinois commerce commission and liaison man between the ICC and the ODT, also was before the schoolmen to explain the new ruling.

CORPORAL TRIPS IN DITCH—IT'S NAMED FOR HIM

Corp. Philip Mooney, son of Christopher Mooney, 3424 Monroe street, has set a precedent in the way of tributes. After finishing digging a drainage ditch near Fort Sill, Okla., Mooney and his battalion held an informal christening of their efforts.

While lacking the fanfare and glamor of a battleship launching, the christening was of some consequence. During the ceremony Corp. Mooney happened to fall twice into the ditch. Inspired by the falls, the battery personnel drew and approved a petition calling for the erection of a sign post at the site designating the ditch as Mooney creek in honor of the corporal.

His buddies now report that Mooney is proudly waiting for the spring rains when Mooney ditch will become Mooney creek in all her glory.

WAR STAMP SALE AT WHEATON HIGH WON BY JUNIORS

Class Sells $4,646.55 to Take Contest.

Selling of war stamps to the amount of $4,646.55 during their allotted three days in the competition between classes at Wheaton Community High school, the juniors came off victors and were awarded a half holiday as the prize. Dale Carlson managed the winning group.

Results revealed the amount in stamps sold by seniors to be $3,779.05; by freshmen, $1,690.95, and by sophomores, $1,251.15, with $11,367.70 as the grand total.

The juniors took the lead on the first day of the exciting contest, the record then showing juniors, $522.40; sophomores, $331.70; freshmen, $325.60; and seniors, $248.25.

Principal as Adviser.

Under sponsorship of the student conference, with D. C. Burger, assistant principal, as faculty adviser, the campaign started off with a special assembly at which Miss Shirley Sollenberger, senior, gave a pep talk. Members of her committee were Miss Mary Tweedie, Miss Lois Cook, Jack Conrad and Wendy Loveless.

As the contest got under way, a thermometer for registering progress started from the east wall of the main hall and soon spurted to the ceiling. Each class was represented by a different colored tube.

Sales at School Only.

Under the rules, no student was permitted to sell stamps outside the school, but the purchase of parents of contestants counted. Most of the sales were made before school started in the morning, at the noon recess, and after classes closed in the afternoon. A booth in the main hall was utilized for stamp sales. Occasionally, members of the band were on hand to stir the patriotic pulses. Salesmen also worked thru the building.

The school's service flag which will contain more than 500 stars is being made by the home economics department taught by Miss Jennie Belle Miner, and will be dedicated this spring.

GOLFERS TO RIDE TO GREEN AGAIN ON BICYCLE LANE

War Adds Nostalgic Touch to Club's Jubilee.

Members of the Riverside Golf club now planning the celebration of the club's golden anniversary to be held in early June look upon gas rationing as a factor that will enable history to repeat itself after 50 years. During 1943 many members expect to cycle to the golf course as did members in 1893 when the club was organzed.

W. H. Ward, the only living charter member of the club, recalls that E. A. Driver, an early member, directed the preparation of a bicycle path thru the woods along the Des Plaines river and to the club grounds. These woods are now part of the county forest preserves.

The Riverside course was the second golf course to be laid out in the Chicago metropolitan area. The first was at Belmont but was later moved to near Wheaton, where it still operates as the Chicago Golf club. The Riverside club is the oldest club that continues to use its original grounds.

The early club saved money in the upkeep of grounds by purchasing a flock of sheep to keep the fairways cropped. The first membership dues were only $5.

Leading Citizens on First Roll.

By invitation there were 22 charter members, many of them prominent in Chicago's financial and commercial circles, who met at the home of C. H. Crosby early in 1893 to consider the formation of a club. Those present were J. S. Andrews, the Rev. George E. Adams, Frank G. Badger, J. J. Bryant, Clarence S. Brown, C. H. Crosby, George Chambers, J. S. Driver, William A. Havemeyer, George Hargreaves, William A. Havemeyer Jr., Thomas C. Hannah, F. Hellyer, N. W. Mundy, T. T. Morford, D. W. McCord, A. J. MacArthur, D. Richardson, E. P. Ripley, Isham Randolph, Jerome Simpson, Robert Somerville, and W. H. Ward.

During the first year of the Riverside Golf club the members played over a course they laid out northeast of the village and on village property. In 1894 a committee selected a site west of the Des Plaines river, now bounded on the west by 1st avenue, on the south by 26th street, and the north by 22d street. This was recognized as the most beautiful site along the river. A nine hole course was laid out measuring 3,000 yards.

Club Built in 1900.

The club members played on the property without lease or rental until the club's incorporation on April 8, 1897. In 1900 a clubhouse was constructed at the southwest corner of the grounds. The building was half timber construction, two stories high, and 136 feet long and 154 feet wide.

A spacious veranda occupied the front and two sides of the house. The first floor contained reception, smoking, and dining rooms, as well as a buffet, the men's and women's locker rooms, and a completely equipped culinary department with cold storage.

The dining room was floored with hardwood and had a capacity of 80 diners. Showers adojined the locker rooms. The men's room contained 104 lockers, the women's 36. Bedrooms and bachelor quarters were on the second floor. A matron's room and servants' quarters occupied the wing to the rear.

Robert Somerville, a thrifty Scotchman and well known Chicago business man, was president of the club during the construction of the clubhouse, which was completed for approximately $7,000.

Course Skirts River.

The nine hole course laid out in 1894 skirted the river, was partially wooded, and was crossed by creeks, swales, and a ridge called the "air line." It was an abandoned railroad right of way. The course was amply provided with hazards and was, and still is, considered one of the sportiest courses around Chicago.

The original nine hole course, with one or two minor changes, remained as laid out until 1914. Then the 85 acres comprising it were purchased. Later, additional property was bought east of the river, making in all about 115 acres. W. B. Langford reconstructed the course in 1919, making it 18 holes.

In 1918 the clubhouse was destroyed by fire and the following year the present house of brick construction was erected on the east bank of the Des Plaines river.

Optimistic About Future.

Members of the Riverside Golf club are looking toward their golden anniversary year with optimism. The course is close not only to Riverside but to many other communities, and may be reached by the elevated, surface street cars, and the Burlington railroad.

Dr. S. S. Fuller is president of the club during its golden anniversary year. Charter Member Ward and Mrs. ward will be honor guests of the club at the June celebration being planned by a special committee. Mr. Ward has been elected to honorary membership.

R. T. Pritchard is secretary and treasurer of the Riverside club, an office he has held for many years. The club professional is James J. Meehan who is starting out on his 23d year as one of the well known pros of the Chicago district clubs.

Aurora Boys' Club.

The biennial party of the East High Boys' club in Aurora will be held at 7 o'clock Friday night in the school. Movies will be shown and there will be boxing matches.

Three west side girls have had important parts in writing and directing the all-student original musical comedy, "How About That?" to be presented Wednesday night at Rosary college, River Forest. They are, left to right, Miss Jane Casey of Oak Park, Miss Blanche Bussiere, 747 North Austin boulevard, and Miss Harriet Ann Kruppenbacher of River Forest.

ROSARY PUPILS TO GIVE ORIGINAL MUSICAL COMEDY

Show Wednesday Will Aid War Charities.

"How About That?" an original musical comedy will be presented by the students of Rosary college, River Forest, Wednesday night for the benefit of war charities. The production, written and directed by the student body, will be given in the campus auditorium.

Music for the show includes seven tunes written and arranged by Harriet Ann Kruppenbacher of River Forest. Miss Kruppenbacher, a senior, is president of Grex guild, campus dramatic society. The lyrics are the work of Jane Casey of Oak Park, a senior drama student.

Former Dancer Assists.

The choreography has been arranged by Blanche Bussiere, 747 North Austin boulevard, a junior and member of the department of sociology and social work. She is a former Abbott dancer and is instructing her chorus from her background of experience.

The scene of the comedy is a girls' boarding school and traces the social rise of the campus "ugly duckling." The script was written by Eileen McAuliffe, 3251 Belleplaine avenue, a senior English major and president of the student government association. The leading rôle will be played and sung by Miss Joan Savage of Lincoln, Ill.

West side students who play the supporting rôles will be Patricia Butler, 225 North Mason avenue; Mary Kerwin of Oak Park, and Muriel Epcke, 2027 22d place. Among those who will take part in the chorus will be Patricia Barton of River Forest, Mary Carmody of River Forest, Catherine Clarke, 4928 Quincy street; Philomene O'Brien of River Forest, Loretta Omara of River Forest, Marie Petrillo, 1039 North Austin boulevard; Rita Quinn, 104 South Austin boulevard; Josephine Smith and Mary Jane Walsh of Oak Park.

The production is sponsored by Torch, the activity honor society. Among those assisting with the presentation are Miss Winifred Bowman of Oak Park who is in charge of tickets and Miss Doris Boughton of Berkeley who is helping with costumes and sets.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, March 15

Don't buy seeds too soon, for there will be plenty for all. You may buy, but make a plan first and order only enough to meet your needs.

Many small gardens had better be used for smaller leaf vegetables, such as lettuce, radishes, onions from sets, mustard greens, and similar kinds. Root crops should not be grown unless the soil is suitable. Potatoes and corn should not be grown.

Remember that soil conditions are the first essential for growing plants; a sunny place also is necessary, at least, six hours each day. It is a good plan to spade under manures, if they can be obtained, but if not, use shredded cattle manure, spent mushroom manure; sludge will add a little plant food to the soil and some humus, for it is organic in character.

Tuesday, March 16

Do not be in a hurry to plant, for April 10 is the time for the first outdoor sowing, and the weather conditions regulate the date. You may sow tomatoes, peppers, cabbage, and broccoli in flats or seed pans for early planting outdoors.

However, do not spade the garden until the soil is in condition. Sow radishes as soon as the ground can be spaded; before spading spread two pounds of fertilizer over each 100 square feet of area. Make the sowings at frequent intervals to give you the best and finest radishes at all times.

Onion sets also can be planted early. Make the rows 6 to 12 inches apart and place the sets 2 inches apart. Seed flats should be carefully watched, the soil kept moist, full sun given, except during the early stages while the seed is germinating; then they should have shade to prevent drying out. Transplant when very small into other flats.

Wednesday, March 17

In smoky areas in cities or congested areas that are hardly suited to vegetable growing, the following may be tried satisfactorily: Radishes, leaf lettuce, onions from sets, beets, carrots, Swiss chard, kale, a few parsley plants and possibly turnips. Don't try to grow potatoes and sweet corn, for they take too much room.

Repairs to the lawn should be made just as soon as possible to obtain early germination of the seed and a good growth before hot weather comes.

The garden fertilizers apply only to the vegetable garden, hence it will be necessary to use organic foods, such as pulverized sheep and cattle manure, specially prepared sludge and kindred foods for the lawn. Apply fertilizers early.

Thursday, March 18

It is not too late to start a hotbed in which to grow early plants for the garden. The gardener, however, has a difficult time to obtain manure to supply artificial heat thru fermentation, hence it may be best to wait and use the frame as a coldframe and sow the seeds later.

Country folk who have access to fresh manure will find the hotbed one of the most valuable assets possible for their gardening. Make the frame 18 inches high at the back and 12 inches in front to allow for the entrance of the sun's rays. Face the frame to the south and place it on the south side of a hedge or building and near water, but water can be easily carried to it.

The manure should be shaken out and turned two or three times before it is made up into a bed, and then tamped down firmly and covered. It can be placed on top of the ground to a depth of three feet, the frame placed over it, and covered with the sash. Six inches of soil may be used.

Friday, March 19

Many persons want a few parsley plants for seasoning and garnishing, but the seeds sometimes fail to grow. Soak the seeds overnight and sow radish seed thinly in the same row. The radishes mark the row and will grow so rapidly they can be pulled and thinned long before the parsley appears, but they will not interfere with it.

Why not a strawberry bed? Make the rows 24 to 30 inches apart and sow rows of vegetables, such as carrots, beets, onions, etc., in between. Train the strawberry plants by keeping the runner in a row.

Saturday, March 20

It is almost time to repot house plants. Some, like the palms, need only to have some of the soil removed and replaced with rich compost to enable them to flourish.

Those not in need of repotting should be given a little more water and plant food, for they are showing renewed activity after the winter's rest. Do not fill the pot too full of soil or the water will run off, the center being unwatered.

Do not plant too deeply and place the plant in the center of the pot. Pack the soil firmly around the plants and leave plenty of space for water. Use clean pots. If old, dirty pots must be used, first let them soak for 24 hours and then scrub the dirt off with a good brush.

Watch for plant lice; spray with two teaspoonfuls of nicotine sulphate and two teaspoonfuls of soap flakes to a gallon of water. The lice must be hit to kill.

TIME NOW RIPE TO CHECK YOUR HOME INTERIOR

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[Please send stamped, addressed envelope to this department if you wish more detailed information on products mentioned here.]

March is half gone and the time is ripe to check on the home and give it first aid wherever signs of wear and deterioration are found.

The weather may stay too cold for several weeks for much exterior work, but there's always the equally important interior to check.

How about breaks and cracks in plaster walls? These can be patched and redecorated, or covered with a new surfacing. Insulating boards will serve you well if you wish to add warmth to your house as well as new decorations.

Build Food Storage.

There'll be plenty of incentive to urge the home canner on to real effort this spring and summer and it isn't difficult to build a food storage room. An excellent place for this, if the house has a finished basement, is a special storeroom below stairs.

A carpenter or home owner with a talent for tinkering and tools can build such a room from materials that are available. You probably will need a room five or six feet wide and nearly as long and you can separate it from the rest of the basement by a tight wall.

Patch Cellar Cracks.

Inspect cellar walls and ceilings and floors carefully. There may be cracks to be filled, in walls or floor or between floor and walls where leakage often occurs. You can patch these cracks with a stiff mortar of 1 part cement to 3 parts sand, or check with your hardware or paint store in regard to patching compounds to do the work.

West Side Naval Air Cadets Finish Preface Training

Twenty-two west side naval aviation cadets from Chicago and vicinity recently completed their preliminary ground and flight training at Northwestern university and have been assigned to advanced schools. The group which totaled 59 cadets altogether constituted the first class to complete the eight weeks course given under the auspices of the war service training of the civil aeronautics administration.

While taking the course the fledgling flyers lived in a dormitory on the campus and took their ground work at the university's new Technological institute.

List West Siders.

Two from La Grange.

SCHOOL BUSES GO UNDER ODT KNIFE APRIL 1

8,000 Pupils Will Be Affected.

An ODT order restricting school bus use, scheduled to be effective April 1, will eliminate bus transportation for an estimated 8,000 to 10,000 Cook county school pupils, according to Noble J. Puffer, county superintendent.

The order, according to ODT spokesmen, will divert buses to more acute war needs. The restriction applies to approximately 90,000 school buses in the nation. At least 100 are used in Cook county.

The order prohibits transporting pupils who live within two miles of school, except in emergency cases.

Affects Grade Schools.

The two mile rule will affect elementary school pupils most seriously, Puffer said. He estimated that half a dozen districts now transporting all their pupils will be unable to transport any because they all live within two miles of school. Other districts will have to curtail sharply their bus service. Sixty-five of the county's 198 districts outside Chicago now transport some of their pupils.

Puffer emphasized that his estimates are tentative, pending findings of a survey launched recently. Government questionnaires have been distributed to the 65 districts affected, asking for data as to number of pupils carried, distances and routes covered.

Buses will continue to operate only if operators have certificates of war necessity. Applications must be approved first by Puffer, then by the state superintendent of public instruction, and finally by the ODT regional office, which will issue the certificates.

Tightens Prior Order.

The present action represents a tightening of a directive issued last November from Washington, asking that school bus operations be cut to the minimum. Since November, school buses have operated under emergency permits allowed on declarations made by the operators.

The family car will come into greater use for taking children to school in districts most severely affected, Puffer predicted, and he said share-the-ride school clubs may develop.

ODT spokesmen said they are not seriously concerned with passenger car tire conservation, since recaps may be had without ration board action and since they contain only about 9 per cent of crude rubber, compared with a reported 75 per cent or more used in truck and bus tires.

Pupils on Bus Route.

Pupils living along a bus route may be picked up if the bus is not filled, even tho they live within two miles of school, Puffer explained.

High school pupils are not expected to be affected much by the new system, since most of these students who use school buses live beyond the two mile limit.

Robert Nau, liaison officer of the ODT, who appeared recently before representatives of school districts in Puffer's office, said that of 150,000 buses in the nation last year, 90,000 were school buses. Merrill Knox, consultant of the Illinois commerce commission and liaison man between the ICC and the ODT, also was before the schoolmen to explain the new ruling.

TWO SCHOOLS CLOSE

The war has brought closing of two one-room, one-teacher schools in the southwest section of the county—the Willow Creek school on 135th street near Cicero avenue, and Cooper's Grove school at 183d street and Cicero.

Both were closed after their teachers went into other work. The 10 pupils who were enrolled at Willow Creek are taken by bus to Blue Island schools closest to their homes and the 18 from Cooper's Grove go by bus to Tinley Park. The new arrangements were made after favorable votes by school boards and with approval of parents.

Early Opposition Drops.

Some parents and board members at first opposed closing the schools, according to James S. McIntosh, southwest supervisor in the county superintendent of school's office, but indications are that the change is generally approved now.

The boards of Willow Creek school [139th district] and Cooper's Grove [161st district] pay the costs of tuition and bus transportation. These, however, total less than the former cost of operating the one-room buildings, McIntosh said. Willow Creek pupils ride in a bus owned by the Blue Island schools and the Cooper's Grove pupils ride in a school bus privately operated for Tinley Park pupils.

More Modern Advantages.

County Superintendent of Schools, Noble J. Puffer cited advantages of more modern, cleaner, warmer buildings and broader educational opportunities for the pupils in the larger school systems.

A recent tentative report of the Cook county school survey committee indicated that many smaller schools could be consolidated advantageously in larger units, but no action is planned soon because of war conditions, Puffer said.

ROSELAND MOOSE WILL OPEN SHOE EXCHANGE TODAY

Clean and Recondition Footwear for Use.

A shoe exchange, open to the public, will be held from 2 to 5:30 o'clock this afternoon by the Roseland lodge, Loyal Order of the Moose, in the lodge room, 10827 Michigan avenue. Livio Alfonsi, 421 East 88th street, is chairman.

Handle All Types.

All types of shoes will be handled, the chairman said, if they are in wearable condition. Shoes requiring minor repairs are acceptable, but those that need resoling, for instance, will not be accepted. Tables will be placed in the lodge room for assorted sizes and types of shoes. Irving Goldberg, manager of a shoe store at 111th street and Michigan avenue, has donated five shoe fitting chair stools.

Minor repairs will be made by Harry Kramer, 9247 Cottage Grove avenue, shoe repairman, who has offered his services free of charge. Shoes will be cleaned and sterilized by the Corey cleaners, 10831 Michigan avenue, also free of charge. Henry Herman of the cleaning company, a lodge member, has offered this service.

Women to Fit Children.

Women of the auxiliary will assist in fitting shoes this afternoon, particularly children's shoes. Mrs. Alice Curtis, senior regent; Mrs. Dolores Henney, junior regent, and Irene Rasputini are assistants in the project. Harry Manweller, lodge secretary, and Edward Henney are co-workers with Alfonsi. Henry Engelman is governor of Roseland lodge.

A 10 cent fee will be charged for handling the shoes, Alfonsi announced. The funds derived from this fee will be donated to three bodies—the Greater Pullman service men's center; Mooseheart children's home, Mooseheart, Ill., and Moosehaven, home for the aged in Florida.

GIRLS FAVORITE SOLDIER TOPIC IN SOLOMONS

Fighters' Writings Reveal Hopes.

Glimpses of life in the service as experienced by an infantryman later killed in action in the Solomons, a young woman in the WAACs, a marine on an island in the South Pacific, a sailor belonging to a construction battalion, and an air corps lieutenant at Pearl Harbor are contained in the first five letters published today in THE TRIBUNE's new Service Letter column.

The letter from the soldier who, under the command of Col. Le Roy Nelson, was killed in the Solomons, was written to Mrs. Gay Mac Laren Backman of Rolling Prairie, Ind., who became his friend thru correspondence as a result of the Adopt a Yank project sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for Christmas, 1941.

LETTER FROM SOLOMONS

From Pvt. Anthony W. Kasmauskas, age 23, 1527 South 49th street, Cicero, who since writing the letter has been killed in action in Guadalcanal, to Mrs. Gay MacLaren Backman of Rolling Prairie, Ind. The father of Pvt. Kasmauskas, a Lithuanian who came to this country, was wounded twice during the Russo-Japanese war.

"I want to thank you for the introduction to M . . . . I am looking forward to hearing from her [and so are my buddies]. From the way you write about her there is no doubt in my mind, but that she is a swell girl, not the bragging type. I'm sure that I'll like her, but what worries me is will she like me. I hope you realize that I'm no Clark Gable or Don Juan. I've aged so much since I've been in the army that I'll look like her father when I get out.

Would Welcome Snow.

"It is funny to hear about snow. This will be the second year that I haven't seen any, but I would gladly see a snow storm instead of a heat wave. It has been raining continuously for three days, but now the sun is coming out to fry us again. One can put on enough clothes to keep warm, but you can't take off enough to keep cool.

"You want to know what I am interested in. Well I'm mostly interested in getting back to the good old U. S. A. If I could get there I would be interested in anything that was American. But that is beside the point. I'm mostly interested in sports, basketball, football, and baseball. I am interested in good old American girls but I am not in a position to let that bother me much, but we do enjoy receiving letters from them. We do talk politics here but the subject is usually girls and the war.

"We don't get to hear much music now because our radio is gone. I haven't forgotten that dinner and dancing date with you and your husband and my girl friend. But she probably won't be my girl friend when I get back. I hear most of the girls are getting married, so we'll just take M—— along. We fellows will have to start life all over again where there are women. You say I don't know how the girls miss the men but you don't know how the men miss the girls and women.

Anxious to See Chicago.

"I suppose Chicago hasn't been very pleasant with the streets torn up but it would sure look pleasant to me. I am looking forward to marching down Michigan avenue with my bag full of Japs. That will be the happiest day of my life.

"I am looking forward too to that party you are going to give us at Backman pond and so are my buddies. O Boy, we could go for those weinies, stuffed with cheese and wrapped in bacon, in a big way. Everything we get here is in cans, but we are used to it and don't mind the food at all. But it is far from the good old meals that Mom used to make."

WAAC WRITES MOTHER

"Now you have a daughter as well as a son in service. It was no easy task for any of them to pull up roots and go forth. What all of them dream of and look forward to most is coming home some day. Not for glory but for peace and contentment. They picture that home with two lovely people. Really the only friends they have in the world.

Lillian Ruzicka.

"Things for you are also difficult. You have had a full life. Have raised a family. Now you have two lovely grandchildren and another daughter. Your life is devoted to those who remain near you.

Urges Loyalty and Trust.

"This war is being fought because a few people thought they were being picked on. There is no such thing. God moves in mysterious ways and we must help Him by giving all the love, loyalty, and trust we have to our own flesh and blood. We can only get out of life what we put in. Sometimes what we get doesn't seem like a just reward but if we are sensible we realize it is.

Warns Against Fears.

"I believe if you will think this over carefully you will find that it was just a bad dream you had. Start all over again and try harder this time. Each time one of these fears comes to you cast it aside and try just a little harder. You are a sensible person and I know you love us all very much. Try trusting us very much. Please remember we wouldn't be in this thing is we didn't think you were worth fighting for. But you must fight for us too in your quiet way on the home front.

"I'm trusting you, Mother, and may God bless you."

MARINE WRITES MOTHER

From Pvt. Fred R. Weinberger, a marine, to his mother, Mrs. Fred Weinberger, 7007 26th place, Berwyn. Weinberger, an only child, enlisted in February, 1942 when 19 years old.

"I'm on an island in the South Pacific. Which one? Heh, heh won't tell ya. What do I mean, won't tell ya, I can't. Rain, rain, rain, and more rain. Sometimes a little bit; sometimes torrents, but always rain. We are located in a jungle. It's very hot and damp. When the sun shines here it really shines but the air is always moist. I've been getting every itch known to man since I got here but nothing else has bothered me. I'm a radiant picture of health. Skinny but healthy. You sweat off all your weight in this heat but we're getting used to it.

Fred Weinberger.

"In our tent at night we talk over old times and the good old days. You'd be surprised how much there is to talk about. Things you never thought you would remember. Newspapers and magazines are swell. The papers take a fella right back home.

A SOUTH SEA ISLAND

From Robert Zelkin, 3d class petty officer in the navy, assigned to a construction battalion in the Southwest Pacific, to his brother and sisters. Letter submitted by Mrs. J. Zelkin, 3443 Belle Plaine avenue.

"It sure is quiet tonight. There is a slight breeze to take away the heat of the day. There's a pretty moon and light fluffy clouds. I can hear the faint tones of a sailor playing on his saxophone. We have the setting, the mood, and the music to make it the romantic spot it might appear to be and yet one gets little fascination for this island because for all its peaceful look it sure fools you.

Robert Zelkin.

"We have wooden floors in our tent now and we even built our own shower. We do our washing out of ammunition cans. Our greatest danger is falling coconuts. We are always dodging them and so we give the natives a candy bar to climb the trees and shake down all the loose ones.

Chewing Gum Stops Leaks.

"O, yes, I must tell you what use we make of chewing gum, when we have it. There are holes in our tent for the ropes that tie back the flaps. When it rains the water comes thru the holes. Yes, you've guessed it, we stuff the holes with chewing gum and presto — it's waterproof.

"I can stand anything out here but I don't know what I'd do if anything went wrong with any of you at home. So God keep you and hope to see you soon."

FROM PEARL HARBOR

From Lt. H. A. Ripkey, who was wounded in action at Pearl Harbor, to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Whelan, 6705 31st street, Berwyn. Lt. Ripkey has returned to the United States and is now stationed at Camp Hulen, Texas.

"I'll take this opportunity to wish you a belated very happy birthday, grandma, dear. I thought of you especially yesterday. I'll bet that silvery hair is prettier than ever now. What do you think, gramp?

"Altho we are constantly 'on the alert' with our men at their guns we find time to work in a game of handball on the courts, a stone's throw away. Daily we are becoming stronger, better, and more guns, more men, etc.

"How's the Windy City?"

"How's the old Windy City, anyway? I'd love to be in a good Chicago blizzard now. It sure looks funny to see the beautiful beaches of Oahu strung with barb wire and trenches.

"I hope that you people at home will keep your spirits high and your faith strong, because that is the best way you can serve the men away from home. The greatest concern of all of us is not ourselves but the loved ones at home."

St. Gerald's School Sees Double—7 Pairs

A Big Response Greets Tribune Letter Contest

Response to the appeal of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for interesting war time letters was so spontaneous that five letters from the first mail received were selected in time for publication today. For each of the chosen letters $5 will be paid the sender.

Five of the letters that are considered best by the judges will be printed each week. Senders should bear in mind the following:

Letters or excerpts from them should not be longer than 200 to 250 words.

Copies of letters—not the originals—should be submitted as THE TRIBUNE cannot accept responsibility for letters lost in transmission, nor return the letters.

To add to the interest, it is suggested that a photograph of the letter writer and a brief biography of the writer accompany the letter. Do not send framed photographs or scrapbooks. Those requesting return of the pictures should write the request and address on the back of the pictures but THE TRIBUNE regrets that it cannot accept responsibility for such return.

Address Service Letter Editor, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

VALENTINE CLUB BOYS WIN PRIZES FOR WAR ESSAYS

Prize essays in the Valentine Boys' club essay writing contest were chosen last week by the judges — Miss Margaret Fitzer, morale chairman for the Bridgeport civilian defense; Lewis Crane, secretary, Community council of the stock yards district; and Edward Drake, publisher.

Louise Cortiletti, 13, 338 West 29th street, and Bernard Baranski, 13, 3326 South Aberdeen street, were adjudged first place winners and awarded a two week vacation this summer at the Chicago Boys' clubs camp at Winona Lake, Ind.

Writing on the topic, "What the War Means to Me," the school children, who entered 19 essays from six public and four parochial schools, expressed themselves strongly on American democracy and their rôle and contribution to winning the war, Stuart W. Knarr, director, said.

Holy Name Society Giving Amateur Show Wednesday

Holy Name society of St. Clare of Montefalco church, 55th street and Talman avenue, will sponsor a home talent show Wednesday evening. Amateur singers, dancers, skits, and instrumentalists will entertain, and dancing and refreshments will follow the show. John J. Mahoney is chairman of publicity.

Twins—7 Sets —Romp in Oak Lawn School

St. Gerald's Catholic school, Oak Lawn, is a small parish school of 330 pupils, but among the 330 pupils there are seven sets of twins. Not only are there seven sets of twins in the school but, of the seven pairs, four sets alone are in the first grade—all boys.

One set of twins, girls, are in the second grade and two sets of twins are in the third grade. Of these, one pair is the only boy and girl set among the seven pairs.

The Rev. L. J. Welsh is pastor of the parish, whose school is located at 94th street and 55th court, Oak Lawn. The order of Franciscan sisters is in charge of the school.

Pride of Their Family.

Donald and Ronald Pheifer, 7 year old twins of Mr. and Mrs. George Pheifer, 5827 West 87th place, Oak Lawn, who are first grade pupils, are the pride of their nine brothers and sisters, all of whom are at home—except one, a brother who is with the navy in the Pacific area.

The Pheifer twins were born in the same hospital, and only a short time later in the month of March, as the twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Belz, 9114 South 52d court, Oak Lawn. The two families were not acquainted with each other at the time the events were taking place at Evangelical hospital, 55th and Morgan streets. Bobby and Buddy Belz, first graders, celebrated their birthday March 6, while the Pheifer boys will have a birthday party Thursday.

Wear Soldier Suits.

Bobby and Buddy Belz have an older sister, 9, and wear soldier uniforms in honor of two uncles in the army. Mrs. Belz, president of St. Gerald's Mothers' club, comes from a family which has twins among its near members, and the same is true of her husband's family.

The Walsh twins, David and Donald, 7, are the third pair of first graders and are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Walsh, 6917 West 95th street, Oak Lawn. They have a small brother at home. The Walsh twins are mischievous, but well behaved and well liked.

"Can't Stand Still."

"So much pep they can't stand still" is the way Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dehne, 6200 West 95th street, Oak Lawn, describe their twin boys, James and John, 7, who are the fourth pair of first graders.

Elaine and Eleanor Buehler, 7, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Buehler, 9545 Meade avenue, are in the second grade at St. Gerald's school. They are noted for their accomplishments in piano study. The second set of twin girls are in the third grade. They are Dorothy and Dolores De Runtz, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Nick De Runtz, 9817 South Minnick avenue, Oak Lawn. Dorothy plays the piano and Dolores likes to dance to her sister's music. The twins have two sisters and one brother.

Attentive to Sister.

Bobby and Betty Braun, 9, are the only mixed set of twins among the seven. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Braun, 9632 Austin avenue, Oak Lawn. Bobby is very attentive to his attractive little sister.

FBI Agent to Lecture Before Beverly Group

William J. White, special agent for the FBI, will give an illustrated talk on the work of the federal body at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening before the Northwest Beverly Improvement association at 8939 Bell avenue. The meeting is open to community residents.

FLYING BUSINESS NOT WHAT IT WAS FOR SIGHTSEERS

Transportation Lack Cuts Business.

Government regulations, lack of transportation facilities, and shortage of adventurers between 18 and 35 years old are putting a serious dent in the airplane sightseeing business.

Pierce "Scotty" O'Carroll, veteran airplane stunt man and barnstormer, was doing so well with his Monarch Air Service, Inc., a sightseeing business, that in 1940 he agreed to pay the city $30,000 plus a percentage of business over $70,000, for a franchise to operate at the Municipal airport for four years.

Council Eased Problem.

Then came Pearl Harbor and business began to disappear. Scotty was in quite a spot until recently when the city council eased his problems by reducing the franchise contract to a straight $200 a month. That is approximately one-third of the original contract or about the amount his business has shrunk, Scotty reported.

Now, unless he goes into army service soon, as he may do, Scotty hopes somehow to hang on to the business until after the war, when he figures any kind of an airplane business will be a pretty good thing.

Scotty got the airplane bug early and has kept it all his life. After he got tired of barnstorming back in the '20s, he settled down with his air service and civilian instruction at the airport 16 or more years ago, when, he says, the port had "only one little runway." He was there while it developed into the port with traffic volume near the greatest in the world.

Customers 18 to 35.

Most of his customers were between 18 and 35 years old, Scotty said, and the majority of persons in this age span now are in armed service. What few may be left are unable to get to the port for lack of gasoline or tires. Few folks will ride a street car to the port to take an airplane ride, he said.

Those who do take trips must register their names, addresses, and occupations, and they must be American citizens. Aliens are barred. When the plane takes off, it can travel only a specified route, which allows a fair view of the city, but keeps the passenger well away from certain strategic localities.

New Soldier Business.

But if the war has ruined his business, it also has brought some new business from the thousands of soldiers and sailors taking technical training in Chicago. Many of the boys studying airplane radio operation and taking airplane mechanics courses have never been up in a plane, Scotty said. So, even if they have to take a street car, some of these boys go to Scotty's place to find out how it feels to fly. They might have to do it again some time.

COAST GUARD HAS MANY CIVILIANS IN NEW BRANCH

Steel mill workers, manufacturers, bricklayers, lawyers, teachers, plumbers, dentists, as well as shipyard machinists and electrical engineers, are learning how to aid the coast guard in war time at the Calumet park fieldhouse every Monday evening, under leadership of the Calumet harbor flotilla of the coast guard auxiliary.

They are among hundreds of men in training in the Chicago area. The 56 trainees, all 1st class seamen in the coast guard's new temporary reserve, include also a former marine and a former coast guardsman. Many have defense jobs in the day time.

Study Rules of Sea.

A seven week training course similar to that received by new coast guardsmen is being given the temporary reservists. Among the subjects are safety at sea, ropes and knots, anchors, rules of the road, signaling, buoys, and navigation. On the subject of safety, they learn how to prevent fire, foundering, and accidents between ships, and what to do when a man overboard alarm is sounded.

Upon completion of the course the reservists, all volunteers as are their instructors, will be given ratings comparable to their ability. Office workers will become yeomen, truck drivers, or mechanics will be made machinist's mates, etc.

Altho the temporary reservists are all to be provided with coast guard uniforms, they receive no pay and are not exempt from the draft.

Three Hours Nightly.

Three and a half hours are devoted to training each class night. Instruction is provided by a dozen of the 30 members of the Calumet auxiliary flotilla, which consists of yachtsmen in the south and southwest sides.

Martin Denash, now a lieutenant [j. g.] in the coast guard reserve, organized the Calumet flotilla just two years before Pearl Harbor. The group was one of the first in Chicago, following the Diversey harbor flotilla, first in the nation. Lt. Denash, a veteran of the British merchant marine, was the Calumet flotilla's first commander.

Other members of the flotilla now in the services are William Ellinghausen, former vice commander, now an able seaman in the merchant marine; Lt. Thomas Ahern, also a former vice commander, now in the army medical corps; Boatswain's Mate John Rietz, U. S. C. G. R.; Edwin W. Sawyer, also in the coast guard reserve, and Quartermaster Norman Boysen of the navy's "Seabees."

Two public school teachers are among the student reservists enrolled in the course. They are Paul Busey, Chicago Heights, instructor of American history at Bloom township high school, who sails his 22 foot sloop "Lynx" on Lake Erie, and Charles Harper, 4755 Indiana avenue, who teaches gasoline and Diesel engine operation at Dunbar vocational school.

PRESBYTERIANS SEEK $1,500,000 IN ONE DAY DRIVE

The 50,000 Presbyterians of Chicago today at church services will seek to raise $1,500,000 for city religious and social institutions, national causes, and for global purposes on 16 different fronts.

The Rev. Clarence Wright is general chairman of the drive. Six committees of three persons each are assisting him.

Eighteen welfare and religious organizations in Chicago are to be benefitted, in addition to local activities of the 119 churches comprising the Presbytery of Chicago.

Neighborhood Women.

The Neighborhood Woman's club, which meets at the Ogden park fieldhouse, will hold a card party at 4149 State street, at 1 o'clock Wednesday, March 31, Mrs. Kathryn Daniels, chairman, announced.

TWO ROCK ISLAND SUBURB STATIONS GETTING REPAIRS

Two southwest stations of the Rock Island railroad will soon undergo changes in appearance. Remodeling of the Vermont street depot, Blue Island, will be completed this week, and modernization of the 103d street station, Beverly Hills, will begin within the next two weeks.

The Blue Island station interior has been modernized with new birch plywood wainscoting in a cinnamon finish, newly painted side walls, and a ceiling of prepainted coral fiberboard tile. New flush panel birch doors were placed thruout the building.

The ticket offices were rebuilt with a canopy projecting over the ticket windows and adjoining recessed telephone booths. Passenger baggage lockers were recessed to give more floor space. There is a new asphalt tile floor, new benches, and fluorescent lighting.

An Early American style will be followed at the 103d street, Beverly Hills, building, which is now an old-fashioned suburban depot. A Cape Cod finish will be used in the wainscoting and woodwork, and the side walls will be papered in a cream and red figured paper. The prepainted ceiling tile, cream colored, will be used and an asphalt floor will be laid.

U. OF C. EXPECTS 1,000 TO ENROLL IN ARMY COURSE

New Military Work Opens in April.

Approximately 1,000 men from all sections of the city are expected to begin study of the rudiments of military life April 8 in the 11th basic course offered by the Institute of Military studies at the University of Chicago.

More than 7,500 men have taken the course since the series was instituted in 1940.

Gives Basic Training.

The institute was organized by the university to provide basic military training for Chicago citizens before they enlist or are called into military service.

Trainees meet in the university's fieldhouse from 7 to 10 o'clock Thursdays and Fridays. Every applicant has the choice of one of the two evenings. Those who qualify for the instructors' school meet Tuesday evenings for intensive training.

Courses include close and extended order drills, manual of arms, bayonet practice, map reading, scouting, military courtesy and law, and army organization.

CLUB IN BEVERLY HILLS TO STAGE MYSTERY DRAMA

'Ladies in Retirement' Billed This Week.

Dramatists of the Beverly Hills Woman's club will stage the three act mystery play, "Ladies in Retirement," written by Edward Percy and Reginald Denham, at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and at 8 o'clock in the evening in the Ridge park fieldhouse, Longwood drive at 96th street.

The Broadway hit, which has played twice in Chicago, was chosen by Mrs. Charles A. Davis, 8938 Hoyne avenue, drama chairman, who will play the rôle of Leonora Fiske. The drama will be directed by Henry Salisbury Barbour, continuity writer at W-G-N, whose mother, Mrs. Harry F. Barbour, 2249 West 111th place, is a member of the woman's club.

Other Rôles Listed.

Mrs. Frederick Herrschner Jr., 10717 Hoyne avenue, will enact the part of Ellen Creed, the rôle portrayed by Flora Robson in the stage production. Mrs. Herrschner is fine arts chairman, and an actress and singer. Mrs. Karl B. Nagler, 9167 Pleasant avenue, will take the part of Louisa Creed, and Mrs. Charles E. Faulkner, 9855 Prospect avenue, will appear as the third spinster sister, Emily Creed.

Harry Thayer Mahoney, Oak Park, a student at Morgan Park Military academy, is the lone man in the Beverly Hills production. He will be Albert Feather, the nephew. Sister Theresa will be played by Mrs. Frederic Fenger, 10007 Longwood drive, and Mrs. Louis Sloke, 10536 Bell avenue, will be Lucy Gilham.

Aids Scholarship Fund.

Proceeds will be used in the club's scholarship fund. The director's fee which has been waived by Mr. Barbour this year, will be used for recreational work among service men.

PLAYERS GROUP BINDS VILLAGERS IN PALOS PARK

Studies Draw Scattered Community Together.

All the sociability of which a small community is capable is found within the new Palos Park Village Players, organized last fall by Zay Smith, Palos Park commuter and designer for the United Air-lines at the municipal airport.

Biweekly meetings take place in the village hall, but somehow, when the in-between Wednesday evening rolls around, something or other has a way of turning up, necessitating an unscheduled gathering. On these occasions the players may assemble in some member's home, and later in the evening the hostess—this is no surprise—hospitably invites her guests to enjoy refreshments. Which all adds up to a mellow feeling of community oneness.

Coördinates Village Life.

"We are amateurs, definitely," laughed Smith, who is president. "We really started the players to amuse ourselves. There isn't much activity in the village, you know. We are discovering that as the community gets to know itself it is better able to cope with defense activities, as they develop. Most of our people are commuters, and since our homes are spaced at some distance from each other, we formerly did not see our neighbors frequently."

Composed of married couples in their thirties and forties, the group, which started with 25 members at its first meeting in October, now has 70, whose ages range from 15 to well into the '60s.

Some Have Experience.

Perhaps a half dozen players have had a little theater experience, Smith said. Lynn Kelner has played in stock, and Mrs. Judith Bond, vice president, a librarian at the University of Chicago, has had amateur experience in both acting and playwriting. Orvis Henkle, business man and production manager of the players, once played with Chicago Little Theater groups. The same is true of Mrs. Gordon Gibbons' experience. Mrs. Gibbons directs make-up.

The president, who attended the army flying school at San Antonio, Tex., before he came to Chicago, played with a small repertory group in that city. Carl Glick, nationally known for his work in Little Theaters and also for writings on China, was the director. Smith also was a member of a stock company in Jacksonville, Fla.

Business Man Is Manager.

Mrs. William Andrews, a housewife, is secretary, and William Andrews, former treasurer, has turned his post over to Samuel Chamberlain, business man. Wallace Crawford, a business executive, is the players' business manager. Gordon Gibbons and Mrs. Orvis Henkle have directed short plays staged for an audience of players.

Six one act plays a year is the aim of the players, Smith said. Thus far, walking rehearsals have been held at meetings, with players acting out rôles, script in hand.

GEMAN CLUB GIVING PARTY WEDNESDAY TO BENEFIT SANITARIUM

The Kaye E. Geman Memorial club will hold a fund raising party featuring cards and mah-jongg on Wednesday at 7:30 o'clock. Proceeds will go to the Fox River sanitarium at Batavia, for care of indigent men and women afflicted with tuberculosis. The party will be held at 3242 Roosevelt road, and will be directed by Shirley J. Sterling, 1544 South Lawndale avenue.

BUNDESEN HELPS M'CARTHY TRACE RECORD OF BIRTH

BergenBratOffersReward—or Hush Money.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

This ad appeared in the Business Personals column in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

WANTED—Information concerning my parents; liberal reward or hush money as the case may be.
CHARLIE McCARTHY, NBC, Hollywood.

A letter received by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, disclosed the reason for the parental quest by Bergen's brat:

"Dear Dr. Bundesen: I take Bergen's pre-war portable in lap and beg and implore your services as a kind of statistical bloodhound. I am in need of some one of your high standing and authority to sniff thru the birth records of Chicago and locate my birth certificate. I have been promised a situation in aviation, but there is only one hitch between me and getting my lunch grapplers on that pay roll. They don't believe I was born. I have to prove I am a foundling who isn't a lostling. Now that's where you come in.

"Bergen tells me he found me on his doorstep, or do you think we should investigate that? Assuming that you will undertake the search at once, we can agree on some deal later. Don't bother getting any letters of character reference. I can take care of that because Skinny [Dugan] can sign names in six different handwritings.

Can Stay Within Law.

"And by the by, if you should find my parents and things don't look too good for me—what I mean is, if my old man is out of work, I will appreciate you forgetting the whole thing.

"After all, I am not unhappy in my present situation with Bergen, but as a practical professional man you can appreciate what a fine bargaining position it would put me in with Bergen if some one else claimed me, too.

"I promise you this will be worth while for both of us, and we still will be within the law. You have my word for it and you know what that's worth."

Dr. Bundesen has written Charlie that he is instituting the search. He added that Charlie's search for work was so at variance with his reputation as he knew it that as a medical man he feared that Charlie was ill. He suggested a week's rest.

Suggests Castor Oil.

"In the meantime," he added, "take a daily dose of castor oil." If the whole bottle is not consumed, he suggested, the remainder might be applied to airplane motors when the job is landed.

"Remember Bergen has been good to you," he concluded. "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush even if he bears some resemblance to a bald eagle."

Tip to Dr. Bundesen: No need to look around Venetian blind factories for Charlie's family tree. In an unguarded moment five years ago Bergen disclosed that Charlie was hewn from a hunk of pine by one Theodore Mack, a wood carver, now dead, on Van Buren street.

PARK TO GROW VEGETABLES FOR ZOO RESIDENTS

Plan Marquette Gardens to Relieve Food Crisis.

BY IRENE PONTO.

Mrs. Cabbage and the carrot family are moving into the perennial nursery of stately Miss Delphinium, the irises, and the shasta daisy—at Marquette park, 67th street and Kedzie avenue.

The precedent breaking march of plain vegetables into the beds of their attractive flower sisters will begin this spring, W. C. Blaesing, acting chief horticulturist for the park district, revealed.

And Lincoln park zoo animals and birds will fix a sharp eye on vegetable production at Marquette park, for the rows of lettuce, onions, celery, carrots, cabbage, and beans will be their salad this spring, summer, and fall. Served fancy or plain, the vegetables are for the monkeys, hoofed animals, and birds of the north side zoo.

Tomatoes Are Out.

Bears, deer, buffalo, the guanaco all eat carrots, according to Floyd Young, curator of the zoo, and the same goes for the leadbeater parrots, black cockatoos, and, in fact, all members of the parrot family. Lowries prefer lettuce, but none of the animals or birds like tomatoes, so there will be none planted.

Blaesing also said that from three to five acres in Lincoln park will be set aside for additional vegetable gardens. Lead crops, such as spinach, beets, radishes, lettuce, onions, and beans, will be grown in an area little used by the public. Celery and cabbage, which take longer to mature, will be grown in large quantities at the south side park.

Two-thirds of zoo vegetable requirements will be met thru the "home grown vegetable" policy, Blaesing estimated. To take care of the emergency vegetable gardens, he said, some outdoor work and boulevard gardens will be eliminated. Shortage of labor besets the park district, he added, altho several women have been employed, and more probably will be hired.

Aids War Gardeners.

The park vegetable gardens will serve the double purpose, Blaesing stated, of furnishing zoo animals with produce and showing amateur war gardeners the fine points of vegetable production, since the vegetables will probably reach their prime around the time home owners begin outdoor planting.

An oval flower bed near the Marquette park fieldhouse will become a demonstration garden this year, it was learned from John A. Lundgren, florist foreman for south side parks, stationed at Marquette park greenhouses. Laid out in ornamental design, with flowers added for artistic effect, the garden will be ready for public viewing around May 1. Produce from this garden will go to service men's centers.

Four Acres Ready.

Laying fallow for the past year, the four acres at Marquette park, formerly devoted to perennials and a tree and shrub nursery, are ready for planting without fertilization. Because the land, which is situated along the Grand Trunk railway and along West 71st street, will be used for vegetables for the first time, its soil is in top notch condition requiring no additional elements, Lundgren said.

Peter Mikesh, 5630 South Trumbull avenue, will have charge of vegetable growing at Marquette park. Eleven florists are on hand to assist, but more men and women may be needed, Lundgren mentioned.

Black seeded Simpson and early curled Simpson lettuce are the two varieties chosen for the zoo. Some lettuce already is growing in the greenhouse on an experimental basis. If the weather clears, Lundgren said, lettuce will be sown in two steam heated frames, 6 feet by 57 feet, this week. By April 1 lettuce started in seed flats should be transplanted to the 13 cold frames, he continued.

Sowings in Field April 10.

By April 10, if the weather is satisfactory, lettuce sowings will be made directly in the field. Other sowings will be made in cool spring temperatures, and again starting Aug. 1. Lundgren estimated that one-fourth of an acre would be given over to lettuce.

The monkeys will have their onions—two varieties. Ideal southport white globe and yellow globe Danvers, started in seed flats in January, will be transplanted next month to field rows, adding up to about half an acre. Other sowings in seed flats will be made later.

Golden plume celery, which was greenhouse sown on Feb. 4 and 26, will be transferred to seed flats this week, thence outside to the fourth of an acre alloted to the crop. Celery, unlike onions, is handled three times. As with the other vegetables, celery will be sown several times during the season.

Carrot Planting May 1.

Carrots, improved Chantenay and table queen, will be sown directly in Marquette park fields May 1, or in late April, should the weather be favorable. Subsequent sowings in the 1½ acre tract set aside for carrots will continue at intervals to June 1. Fall sowings, as late as Aug. 1, also will take place.

The lowly cabbage will use 2½ acres, Lundgren thought, and will be handled twice. Early and late flat Dutch and early and late varieties of Danish ballhead will comprise zoo cabbage fare. The main crop, sown in cold frames the latter part of this month, or April 1, will go outside to the fields when in seedling stage.

Green beans also are in the diet of zoo residents. Only green beans will be planted, wax beans not possessing enough vitamin qualities. Beans bush plentiful and beans bush bountiful will be sown directly in the field no earlier than May 20, and not then if it is cold and wet. Additional sowings in the 2½ acres are planned at two week intervals to mid-August.

Yanks Will Enjoy These Tasty Cakes

Twenty cakes had been baked and frosted when these women stopped to count the results of their first afternoon baking class for service men recently. Working in the window of the Commonwealth-Edison branch, 852 West 63d street, the women baked from 1:30 to 3:30 o'clock. The class, which meets five afternoons a week, was organized by Englewood merchants and Englewood office of civilian defense, whose commander is John Schowel. Cakes go to the service men's center at 176 West Washington street. Betty Schindler, 5745 South Talman avenue, community war garden chairman, will issue instructions at the rally for obtaining a suitable plot of land for a garden. Each block captain or block war garden warden will locate a vacant plot and report it to the community commander or garden chairman. The OCD will write the owners and secure permission to clear, plough, and plant the plot.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, March 15

Don't buy seeds too soon, for there will be plenty for all. You may buy, but make a plan first and order only enough to meet your needs.

Many small gardens had better be used for smaller leaf vegetables, such as lettuce, radishes, onions from sets, mustard greens, and similar kinds. Root crops should not be grown unless the soil is suitable. Potatoes and corn should not be grown.

Tuesday, March 16

Do not be in a hurry to plant, for April 10 is the time for the first outdoor sowing, and the weather conditions regulate the date. You may sow tomatoes, peppers, cabbage, and broccoli in flats or seed pans for early planting outdoors.

However, do not spade the garden until the soil is in condition. Sow radishes as soon as the ground can be spaded; before spading spread two pounds of fertilizer over each 100 square feet of area. Make the sowings at frequent intervals to give you the best and finest radishes at all times.

Wednesday, March 17

In smoky areas in cities or congested areas that are hardly suited to vegetable growing, the following may be tried satisfactorily: Radishes, leaf lettuce, onions from sets, beets, carrots, Swiss chard, kale, a few parsley plants and possibly turnips. Don't try to grow potatoes and sweet corn, for they take too much room.

Thursday, March 18

It is not too late to start a hotbed in which to grow early plants for the garden. The gardener, however, has a difficult time to obtain manure to supply artificial heat thru fermentation, hence it may be best to wait and use the frame as a coldframe and sow the seeds later.

Friday, March 19

Many persons want a few parsley plants for seasoning and garnishing, but the seeds sometimes fail to grow. Soak the seeds overnight and sow radish seed thinly in the same row. The radishes mark the row and will grow so rapidly they can be pulled and thinned long before the parsley appears, but they will not interfere with it.

Saturday, March 20

It is almost time to repot house plants. Some, like the palms, need only to have some of the soil removed and replaced with rich compost to enable them to flourish.

Those not in need of repotting should be given a little more water and plant food, for they are showing renewed activity after the winter's rest. Do not fill the pot too full of soil or the water will run off, the center being unwatered.

NEGROES LEARN FIGHTING TRADE AT FORT CUSTER

Soldiers Revel in Army Discipline.

BY ROSCOE SIMMONS.

Fort Custer, Mich., March 13.—This historic place, dating freedom of the northwest and bearing the name of an epic American warrior, is rated the soldier's paradise.

If there is such a thing as democracy of arms, it is here. Color, race, creed, the boast or pride of antecedent, none cuts any ice at Custer. The four corners and all tribes and bloods which make up America converge here and friction is wholly unknown.

Tho but a fraction of the Custer command, the colored soldier is in his element at Custer. He is both something of the pride and particular charge of staff and line of the fort. Here his ease and enthusiasm are inescapable to the observant eye. His grievance, if any, is personal and of the moment's experience.

Praised by Colonel.

There are thousands of white soldiers at Custer, and less than a thousand colored troops now, but all—both white and colored—are as one on the war. And there is no doubt as to how the colored soldier stacks up at Custer.

"Whenever I see a colored boy in uniform," said Col. Joseph V. Dillon," I feel that I am looking at a soldier." Col. Dillon, West Pointer and example of traditional West Point discipline, is commandant of the provost marshal general's school at Custer. "The millenium is not here," he said, "but we are making progress in the service." He didn't wish to overemphasize the work of the military police, but the colored boys divide tops, he added, in effectiveness and understanding with the best.

The pride of Custer seems to be the 795th tank destroyer battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Theophilus Mann, former Chicago lawyer, native of Illinois and a graduate of the University of Illinois. The post is unanimous in the prediction that the 795th will make military history when it moves into action. The enthusiasm and eagerness of the 795th are as marked as its intelligence. Its officers are all trained men, among them college graduates, while education, in one degree or another, distinguishes the entire outfit. It is a get-up-and-move unit and longs for combat.

Outfit Known for Industry.

Much of the popularity of the 795th is due to the industry and great military intelligence of Col. Mann, who is esteemed second to no officer at Custer and whose name is spoken by his superiors only to praise. The 795th seems to have completed all the training Custer has to offer and may soon move to a finishing school; thence, perhaps earlier than even its commander expects, to one of the theaters of battle.

That would please the boys, who harmonize a parody on Cohan:

"Over here, over here, over here,

Col. George L. Shank, commander of Fort Custer, spoke of Col. Mann as "in all respects a soldier, and his men seem to be of the same pattern."

Col. Mann assumed command of the 795th on Feb. 5, 1942.

Proud of His Men.

There are only a few companies in the 795th, including the reconnaissance company and the medical company. The battalion is several hundred strong, and its personnel reads like a page from a country-wide census. "Of course I am proud of my men," said Col. Mann, "but my pride is a pardonable one when I tell you that we have had no trouble of any character, no friction, and only one or two cases of minor infraction of rules and regulations."

Lt. Col. John G. O'Brien, assistant in the provost marshal school, said that Col. Mann's statement was indeed a modest one. "The conduct of our colored boys," declared Col. O'Brien, "is in all ways and respects soldierly."

The executive officer of the 795th is Maj. Bennet G. Gray, member of one of Chicago's oldest families.

Until issuance of the orders of Jan. 16, 1943, disbanding the 184th field artillery, the old 8th, from which the 184th was formed, and which for 40 years was the pride of Chicago, of Illinois, and Michigan avenue at the grand parade, dominated the area which was the show place of Custer. Both the 184th and its famous band, to which Sousa himself often listened, were severed and dispatched to southern camps.

Custer Historic Post.

Custer, an old and historic military center, is the democracy of training for war. Here the boys, white and colored, come and go at will without clash or friction. Competition in sports and recreation is keen and lively, and there is a post pride in the basketball team of the 795th, which is undisputed champion of these parts. Sound comradeship is in evidence, and the proprieties are respected without quarrel.

Women of Christ Church.

The Women's organization of Christ Lutheran church, 3101 North Parkside avenue, will hold a meeting at 1 o'clock Thursday. Lenten music will be included in the program.

It's Strenuous Life, but Pair of WAVES Find a Little Time for Fun, Too

One of the women who serve in navy blue, Petty Officer Vivian Anderson, tucks her "reserve blue" tie into place beneath her trim jacket. She and her good navy friend, Petty Officer Betty Sharpless, have taken a tiny apartment on the near north side—only three blocks from their "ship," the armory on Chicago avenue. They go "aboard" at 8 o'clock each morning, and so there can be no dawdling before mirrors. Vivian just makes certain she's "shipshape."

Half the fun of having an apartment is being able to invite guests for dinner, say Betty and Vivian. The boys are all for it and are unstinting in their praise of the girls' cooking. Here Betty, whose home is in Ebensburg, Pa., serves Bob Vernetti of Kincaid, Ill., while Vivian does her best to keep Dan Gannon's mind off his hunger. Dan is a native of Howell, Mich. Both young men are petty officers in ship's company in the Midshipmen's school at Abbott hall.

A letter is always an event in the apartment on East Delaware place, and frequently it's so good it has to be shared. Betty is giving even more than her usual rapt attention to this one. Perhaps that's because it was written by a "very special" navy lieutenant, and Vivian's tongue is twisted from all the deleting and censoring she's doing as she reads it aloud.

They're storekeepers third class in the navy, but that doesn't mean storekeeping at all. Their duties include typing and filing, and handling the clerical work which accompanies the training and commissioning of thousands of midshipmen. Five WAVES are stationed in the Abbott hall disbursing office.

Midshipman Robert A. Thompson of Gilman, Ia., duty officer of the day, holds open the door as Petty Officers Anderson and Sharpless leave the armory after another day of service to the navy and the nation.

Nautical Tale Shows Life of Waves Ashore

BY ANN FORD.

This is a nautical story with a near north side locale. As you would expect, its two major characters are sailors—tho they could hardly be called "men of the sea." These sailors are WAVES. And this is the story of their lives "aboard" and their lives "ashore."

The girls are Vivian Anderson, U. S. N. R., who hails from Minneapolis, Minn., and Betty Sharpless, U. S. N. R., of Ebensburg, Pa. Mainbocher-clad in navy blue, they serve as storekeepers with a 3d class petty officer's rating in the Midshipmen's school at Abbott hall.

They Don't Keep Store!

Perhaps, to the uninitiated, the term "storekeeper" is misleading. They're really not storekeepers at all! They're typists and file clerks. The bookkeeping that goes with keeping the pay accounts of thousands of midshipment is in their hands. The heavy paperwork that accompanies changes of orders and new commissions is their concern.

Their hours, by the book, are from 8 in the morning to noon, and 1 until 5 in the afternoon. Saturday is a half day. But let there be an emergency, and hours by the book vanish! Working an evening, a Saturday afternoon, or even a Sunday morning is considered no sacrifice, and there is no overtime pay.

Where do the two WAVES live? How do they live? Their "quarters" are a tiny apartment on East Delaware place—just three blocks from their "ship" [the armory]—and they live much as other working girls do.

Split Kitchen Duty.

It's up by 6:45, and the coffee perking by 6:55. Betty is the official coffee maker, but Vivian soon is at her side in the small-as-a-minute kitchen carving their breakfast grapefruit. Dishes done, the apartment straightened, the beds made and restored to their holes in the wall, the two WAVES scramble into their smart, trim uniforms.

Betty and Vivian both have two navy blue suits. These do for work and play. Each has four light blue shirts ["reserve" blue, in navy parlance]. They are their dress-up shirts—for inspection, dates, and Sundays. Three navy blue shirts serve for everyday wear.

Add to these a jaunty blue hat, a heavy blue topcoat with a button-in lining, and black oxfords with "sensible" heels, and you have almost the complete winter wardrobe of a WAVE. Summer will bring white oxfords, white shirts, white hats, and light weight uniforms. A clothes allowance of $200 is given them by the navy to take care of their winter wardrobe needs, but summer uniforms will have to come out of their own pocketbooks.

Still Wears Perfume.

A glance at the dressing table in the apartment reveals that neither

The lectures, under the sponsorship of CISCA, will be held at 4 o'clock and 8 o'clock Tuesday at Immaculata High school, 640 Irving Park boulevard, and Thursday at St. Bernard's Social center, 6552 South Harvard avenue. Subject of the talks will be "Spot Light on Alaska," illustrated by war films.

WINNETKA RIFLE TRAINING COURSE IS OPEN TO GIRLS

Prospective WAACs, WAVES, SPARS, and feminine marines along the north shore have a special invitation to attend the course in rifle instruction, beginning Friday and continuing for six successive Friday evenings, in the Gates gymnasium of New Trier High school, Winnetka.

An activity of the firearms instruction unit of the Wilmette civilian defense council, it is offered to all north shore residents. The course teaches the care and correct handling of firearms. According to letters received by the council, previous classes have benefited many young men who have entered the services.

The program of instruction follows the course prescribed by the National Rifle association, with which the firearms instruction unit is a class A affiliate. Qualified instructors are on duty at the range each Wednesday night, when class members may practice to improve their shooting ability.

James F. Chambliss, who will direct the course, emphasizes that regular attendance is necessary, and that classes begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

Harold W. Hammond is chairman of the firearms instruction unit, a program sponsored by the physical fitness division under Daniel M. Davis.

GIRLS FAVORITE SOLDIER TOPIC IN SOLOMONS

Fighters' Writings Reveal Hopes.

Glimpses of life in the service as experienced by an infantryman later killed in action in the Solomons, a young woman in the WAACs, a marine on an island in the South Pacific, a sailor belonging to a construction battalion, and an air corps lieutenant at Pearl Harbor are contained in the first five letters published today in THE TRIBUNE's new Service Letter column.

The letter from the soldier who, under the command of Col. Le Roy Nelson, was killed in the Solomons, was written to Mrs. Gay Mac Laren Backman of Rolling Prairie, Ind., who became his friend thru correspondence as a result of the Adopt a Yank project sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for Christmas, 1941.

LETTER FROM SOLOMONS

From Pvt. Anthony W. Kasmauskas, age 23, 1527 South 49th street, Cicero, who since writing the letter has been killed in action in Guadalcanal, to Mrs. Gay MacLaren Backman of Rolling Prairie, Ind. The father of Pvt. Kasmauskas, a Lithuanian who came to this country, was wounded twice during the Russo-Japanese war.

"I want to thank you for the introduction to M . . . . I am looking forward to hearing from her [and so are my buddies]. From the way you write about her there is no doubt in my mind, but that she is a swell girl, not the bragging type. I'm sure that I'll like her, but what worries me is will she like me. I hope you realize that I'm no Clark Gable or Don Juan. I've aged so much since I've been in the army that I'll look like her father when I get out.

Would Welcome Snow.

"It is funny to hear about snow. This will be the second year that I haven't seen any, but I would gladly see a snow storm instead of a heat wave. It has been raining continuously for three days, but now the sun is coming out to fry us again. One can put on enough clothes to keep warm, but you can't take off enough to keep cool.

"You want to know what I am interested in. Well I'm mostly interested in getting back to the good old U. S. A. If I could get there I would be interested in anything that was American. But that is beside the point. I'm mostly interested in sports, basketball, football, and baseball. I am interested in good old American girls but I am not in a position to let that bother me much, but we do enjoy receiving letters from them. We do talk politics here but the subject is usually girls and the war.

"We don't get to hear much music now because our radio is gone. I haven't forgotten that dinner and dancing date with you and your husband and my girl friend. But she probably won't be my girl friend when I get back. I hear most of the girls are getting married, so we'll just take M—— along. We fellows will have to start life all over again where there are women. You say I don't know how the girls miss the men but you don't know how the men miss the girls and women.

Anxious to See Chicago.

"I suppose Chicago hasn't been very pleasant with the streets torn up but it would sure look pleasant to me. I am looking forward to marching down Michigan avenue with my bag full of Japs. That will be the happiest day of my life.

"I am looking forward too to that party you are going to give us at Backman pond and so are my buddies. O Boy, we could go for those weinies, stuffed with cheese and wrapped in bacon, in a big way. Everything we get here is in cans, but we are used to it and don't mind the food at all. But it is far from the good old meals that Mom used to make."

WAAC WRITES MOTHER

"Now you have a daughter as well as a son in service. It was no easy task for any of them to pull up roots and go forth. What all of them dream of and look forward to most is coming home some day. Not for glory but for peace and contentment. They picture that home with two lovely people. Really the only friends they have in the world.

Lillian Ruzicka.

"Things for you are also difficult You have had a full life. Have raised a family. Now you have two lovely grandchildren and another daughter. Your life is devoted to those who remain near you.

Urges Loyalty and Trust.

"This war is being fought because a few people thought they were being picked on. There is no such thing. God moves in mysterious ways and we must help Him by giving all the love, loyalty, and trust we have to our own flesh and blood. We can only get out of life what we put in. Sometimes what we get doesn't seem like a just reward but if we are sensible we realize it is.

"Things are difficult enough without going out of one's way to look for minor details.

Warns Against Fears.

"I believe if you will think this over carefully you will find that it was just a bad dream you had. Start all over again and try harder this time. Each time one of these fears comes to you cast it aside and try just a little harder. You are a sensible person and I know you love us all very much. Try trusting us very much. Please remember we wouldn't be in this thing is we didn't think you were worth fighting for. But you must fight for us too in your quiet way on the home front.

"I'm trusting you, Mother, and may God bless you."

MARINE WRITES MOTHER

From Pvt. Fred R. Weinberger, a marine, to his mother, Mrs. Fred Weinberger, 7007 26th place, Berwyn. Weinberger, an only child, enlisted in February, 1942 when 19 years old.

"I'm on an island in the South Pacific. Which one? Heh, heh won't tell ya. What do I mean, won't tell ya, I can't. Rain, rain, rain, and more rain. Sometimes a little bit; sometimes torrents, but always rain. We are located in a jungle. It's very hot and damp. When the sun shines here it really shines but the air is always moist. I've been getting every itch known to man since I got here but nothing else has bothered me. I'm a radiant picture of health. Skinny but healthy. You sweat off all your weight in this heat but we're getting used to it.

Fred Weinberger.

"In our tent at night we talk over old times and the good old days. You'd be surprised how much there is to talk about. Things you never thought you would remember. Newspapers and magazines are swell. The papers take a fella right back home.

A SOUTH SEA ISLAND

From Robert Zelkin, 3d class petty officer in the navy, assigned to a construction battalion in the Southwest Pacific, to his brother and sisters. Letter submitted by Mrs. J. Zelkin, 3443 Belle Plaine avenue.

"It sure is quiet tonight. There is a slight breeze to take away the heat of the day. There's a pretty moon and light fluffy clouds. I can hear the faint tones of a sailor playing on his saxophone. We have the setting, the mood, and the music to make it the romantic spot it might appear to be and yet one gets little fascination for this island because for all its peaceful look it sure fools you.

Robert Zelkin.

"We have wooden floors in our tent now and we even built our own shower. We do our washing out of ammunition cans. Our greatest danger is falling coconuts.

Chewing Gum Stops Leaks.

"O, yes, I must tell you what use we make of chewing gum, when we have it. There are holes in our tent for the ropes that tie back the flaps. When it rains the water comes thru the holes. Yes, you've guessed it, we stuff the holes with chewing gum and presto — it's waterproof.

"I can stand anything out here but I don't know what I'd do if anything went wrong with any of you at home. So God keep you and hope to see you soon."

FROM PEARL HARBOR

From Lt. H. A. Ripkey, who was wounded in action at Pearl Harbor, to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Whelan, 6705 31st street, Berwyn. Lt. Ripkey has returned to the United States and is now stationed at Camp Hulen, Texas.

"I'll take this opportunity to wish you a belated very happy birthday, grandma, dear. I thought of you especially yesterday. I'll bet that silvery hair is prettier than ever now. What do you think, gramp?

"Altho we are constantly 'on the alert' with our men at their guns we find time to work in a game of handball on the courts, a stone's throw away. Daily we are becoming stronger, better, and more guns, more men, etc.

"How's the old Windy City, anyway? I'd love to be in a good Chicago blizzard now. It sure looks funny to see the beautiful beaches of Oahu strung with barb wire and trenches.

"I hope that you people at home will keep your spirits high and your faith strong, because that is the best way you can serve the men away from home. The greatest concern of all of us is not ourselves but the loved ones at home."

Bride of Sergeant

MRS. ALFRED NELSON.

Instead of a bouquet the former Corrine Salzman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Salzman, 6211 North Maplewood avenue, carried white camelias on a white Bible when she became the bride of Sergt. Elmer A. Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Nelson, 6614 North Maplewood avenue, at St. James United church. The couple is now residing in Salt Lake City, Utah, where Sergt. Nelson is stationed in the army air corps.

A Big Response Greets Tribune Letter Contest

Response to the appeal of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for interesting war time letters was so spontaneous that five letters from the first mail received were selected in time for publication today. For each of the chosen letters $5 will be paid the sender.

Five of the letters that are considered best by the judges will be printed each week. Senders should bear in mind the following:

Letters or excerpts from them should not be longer than 200 to 250 words.

Copies of letters—not the originals—should be submitted as THE TRIBUNE cannot accept responsibility for letters lost in transmission, nor return the letters.

To add to the interest, it is suggested that a photograph of the letter writer and a brief biography of the writer accompany the letter. Do not send framed photographs or scrapbooks. Those requesting return of the pictures should write the request and address on the back of the pictures but THE TRIBUNE regrets that it cannot accept responsibility for such return.

WOMEN OF SEA TRIM PAIR; TELL OF LIFE ASHORE

Betty nor Vivian has forsaken perfume.

"I guess there are no navy regs about perfume," Vivian said, laughing. "We just know better than to go aboard smelling too good."

Do they miss wearing civilian clothes? Vivian hesitated a moment. Before enlisting, she had been the assistant buyer of better dresses in a Minneapolis department store. She confessed there's nothing she likes much better than beautiful clothes. A bright red coat going down the street still gives her a twinge, but since she's indulged herself in the brightest red housecoat Chicago had to offer, she's been quite happy.

"From a professional point of view, I'd say our suits are smart and flattering," she concluded seriously.

Lunch and dinner are both home-cooked meals for the girls. At noon they make a dash home for sandwiches and salad and glasses of milk. After work in the evening they shop leisurely in the commissary in their apartment building, take their time getting a good dinner, and finish dishes along about 8 o'clock.

By cooking in their apartment, Betty and Vivian find they can stretch their subsistence pay of $2.75 a day to cover all day-to-day living costs.

How about the men in their lives? From the photos in their apartment, one gathers there is no lack of them, but perhaps they'd better answer that question.

"Men? Well, if you really want the truth, there are men—navy men," said Vivian with a broad grin and sparkle in her eyes."

"We might as well confess," Betty added with an air of finality, "that nobody else has a chance. We're partial to the navy."

Betty was thinking of a certain young man she met when she was studying in the WAVES' school in Bloomington, Ind. He's a storekeeper, too, but still stationed in Indiana.

For Vivian it was a handsome lieutenant [j. g.] in a navy flight school in Minnesota.

Yes—the navy's okay, Petty Officers Anderson and Sharpless agree. Besides men there are the women they meet. Being shipmates together is a bond that will endure long after the war.

"We've never regretted it for a minute," they chorused. "We're proud and happy to be WAVES."

HONOR CENTRAL Y.M.C.A. SCHOOLS ON W-G-N TODAY

300 Students on 'Citizens of Tomorrow' Show.

Students and faculty of the Central Y. M. C. A. college and high school will be honored at 1 o'clock today during the 92d broadcast of Citizens of Tomorrow over W-G-N. Three hundred of the high school and college's 2,300 students will participate in the show, which was recorded Wednesday in the school's loop auditorium.

Dean Wing.

Frank Pacelli.

Franklin Ramsey, 7427 Phillips avenue, vice president of the student council, who has been chosen for the program's honor roll, will be interviewed by Philip Maxwell of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE editorial staff, master of ceremonies for the programs. Ramsey, 19 years old, is a soldier. He is a member of Masque and Gavel, national honor speech society, and the National Honor society.

Dean Will be Heard.

Orion N. Wing, dean of the Y. M. C. A. schools, also will be introduced by Mr. Maxwell. Dean Wing will describe the war time activities of the schools.

Among the guests at the recording were Dr. Edward J. Sparling, president of the Y. M. C. A. college, and J. C. Vynalek, H. L. Sistrunk, J. R. Davis, H. A. Stotz, W. D. Gilliland, J. F. Mummery, Miss Wilhelmina Aveling, Merrill Enveart, R. M. Beyman, and M. L. Walters, all Chicago Y. M. C. A. officials. Miss Marian Crews, 17 years old, a senior at the Fort Dodge, Ia., High school will be named to the program's honor roll.

Miss Madi Bacon, dean of the school of music, will lead the combined chorus in Bach's "Planets, Stars, and Airs of Space" and "America," by Ernest Bloch, modern composer. The students will sing their alma mater song, "Old Central." Raymond Craig, 2300 Colfax street, Evanston, sergeant at arms of the student council and a senior in the high school, will lead several school cheers.

The Y. M. C. A. schools were founded a half century ago. One hundred fifty-five instructors are on the faculty.

Plan Quiz Session.

A quiz session in which six students, selected by F. J. MacGuidwin, Lincoln club adviser, and Day High, speech instructor, will participate, will be one of the highlights of the program. Among the contestants are Bruce Phillips, 244 East Pearson street, who acted in "Life with Father" two years ago at the Blackstone theater, and Frank Pacelli, 6235 North Artesian avenue, secretary of the student council. Pacelli has appeared in Chicago radio serials since he was 8 years old, including "Lights Out," "First Nighter," "Girl Alone," and "Mary Marlin."

EVANSTON SERIES OF TALKS TO OPEN WITH RATIONING

A talk on "The Rationing Plan" by Michael F. Mulcahy, ration head for the Chicago area at 8 o'clock Tuesday in Lutkin hall, Northwestern university, will open a series of lecture discussions sponsored by the Evanston defense council in coöperation with the university.

A second lecture, entitled "How Rationing Works," will be given the same evening by Ira Rosenberg of the Evanston rationing board.

IN WARTIME, AMERICA NEEDS TRIM, ENERGETIC WOMEN!

Don't Be Fat!

Reduce this proved way that requires no strict diet lists—
No exercises—
No harmful drugs

Lovely Radio Star, Irene Rich, 2nd Lieutenant in Women's Ambulance & Defense Corps of America, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16. She recommends the easy Welch Way to reduce.

READ AMAZING FACTS:
Today, thousands of patriotic American women are discovering a remarkably effective way to lose ugly, sluggish fat! To thus have that trim, "active look" and alert, peppy feeling so important today! ODT ORDER TRIMS BUS SERVICE FOR COUNTY SCHOOLS

8,000 Pupils Must Walk or Go in Family Car.

An ODT order restricting school bus use, scheduled to be effective April 1, will eliminate bus transportation for an estimated 8,000 to 10,000 Cook county school pupils, according to Noble J. Puffer, county superintendent.

The order, according to ODT spokesmen, will divert buses to more acute war needs. The restriction applies to approximately 90,000 school buses in the nation. At least 100 are used in Cook county.

The order prohibits transporting pupils who live within two miles of school, except in emergency cases.

Affects Grade Schools.

The two mile rule will affect elementary school pupils most seriously, Puffer said. He estimated that half a dozen districts now transporting all their pupils will be unable to transport any because they all live within two miles of school. Other districts will have to curtail sharply their bus service. Sixty-five of the county's 198 districts outside Chicago now transport some of their pupils.

Puffer emphasized that his estimates are tentative, pending findings of a survey launched recently. Government questionnaires have been distributed to the 65 districts affected, asking for data as to number of pupils carried, distances and routes covered.

Buses will continue to operate only if operators have certificates of war necessity. Applications must be approved first by Puffer, then by the state superintendent of public instruction, and finally by the ODT regional office, which will issue the certificates.

Tightens Prior Order.

The present action represents a tightening of a directive issued last November from Washington, asking that school bus operations be cut to the minimum. Since November, school buses have operated under emergency permits allowed on declarations made by the operators.

The family car will come into greater use for taking children to school in districts most severely affected, Puffer predicted, and he said share-the-ride school clubs may develop.

ODT spokesmen said they are not seriously concerned with passenger car tire conservation, since recaps may be had without ration board action and since they contain only about 9 per cent of crude rubber, compared with a reported 75 per cent or more used in truck and bus tires.

Pupils on Bus Route.

Pupils living along a bus route may be picked up if the bus is not filled, even tho they live within two miles of school, Puffer explained.

High school pupils are not expected to be affected much by the new system, since most of these students who use school buses live beyond the two mile limit.

Robert Nau, liaison officer of the ODT, who appeared recently before representatives of school districts in Puffer's office, said that of 150,000 buses in the nation last year, 90,000 were school buses. Merrill Knox, consultant of the Illinois commerce commission and liaison man between the ICC and the ODT, also was before the schoolmen to explain the new ruling.

The Day Bill Got SLAPPED..

. . . Into existence (1930) the world was going to hell on a handcar. Stocks and business were crashing to earth. The future was unpredictable. It took real nerve to assume new responsibility . . . But over all this great broad land thousands of Bills, Toms, Dicks and little Harrys were born. A new generation became exposed to all the hazards of life. A creative instinct, that same instinct which caused our forefathers to go on having children in spite of the Indians, wouldn't die within us.

. . . When we brought these lads and lassies into this world there was re-instilled in all of us a new desire to live once more in the lives of our children. Their lives would be our immortality. In their continued safe existence the only pledge we could ever know of a future we could only dream.

. . . Far in the outposts of the Pacific are Bills, Toms, Dicks and Harrys of another generation fighting a fight to the death with a horde of slant-eyed devils and savages with a lust to destroy our freedom and our very dreams. Right now the American Red Cross needs funds. We should supply them with all the money they need. Every life they'll save out there in the Pacific is someone's dream of Immortality here in the States and an assurance that we, the fathers and mothers of younger Bills, mayhaps, will be able to continue with our living dreams. . . .

PARK TO GROW VEGETABLES FOR ZOO RESIDENTS

Plan Marquette Gardens to Relieve Food Crisis.

BY IRENE PONTO.

Mrs. Cabbage and the carrot family are moving into the perennial nursery of stately Miss Delphinium, the irises, and the shasta daisy—at Marquette park, 67th street and Kedzie avenue.

The precedent breaking march of plain vegetables into the beds of their attractive flower sisters will begin this spring, W. C. Blaesing, acting chief horticulturist for the park district, revealed.

And Lincoln park zoo animals and birds will fix a sharp eye on vegetable production at Marquette park, for the rows of lettuce, onions, celery, carrots, cabbage, and beans will be their salad this spring, summer, and fall. Served fancy or plain, the vegetables are for the monkeys, hoofed animals, and birds of the north side zoo.

Tomatoes Are Out.

Bears, deer, buffalo, the guanaco all eat carrots, according to Floyd Young, curator of the zoo, and the same goes for the leadbeater parrots, black cockatoos, and, in fact, all members of the parrot family. Lowries prefer lettuce, but none of the animals or birds like tomatoes, so there will be none planted.

Blaesing also said that from three to five acres in Lincoln park will be set aside for additional vegetable gardens. Lead crops, such as spinach, beets, radishes, lettuce, onions, and beans, will be grown in an area little used by the public. Celery and cabbage, which take longer to mature, will be grown in large quantities at the south side park.

Two-thirds of zoo vegetable requirements will be met thru the "home grown vegetable" policy, Blaesing estimated. To take care of the emergency vegetable gardens, he said, some outdoor work and boulevard gardens will be eliminated. Shortage of labor besets the park district, he added, altho several women have been employed, and more probably will be hired.

Aids War Gardeners.

The park vegetable gardens will serve the double purpose, Blaesing stated, of furnishing zoo animals with produce and showing amateur war gardeners the fine points of vegetable production, since the vegetables will probably reach their prime around the time home owners begin outdoor planting.

An oval flower bed near the Marquette park fieldhouse will become a demonstration garden this year, it was learned from John A. Lundgren, florist foreman for south side parks, stationed at Marquette park greenhouses. Laid out in ornamental design, with flowers added for artistic effect, the garden will be ready for public viewing around May 1. Produce from this garden will go to service men's centers.

Four Acres Ready.

Laying fallow for the past year, the four acres at Marquette park, formerly devoted to perennials and a tree and shrub nursery, are ready for planting without fertilization. Because the land, which is situated along the Grand Trunk railway and along West 71st street, will be used for vegetables for the first time, its soil is in top notch condition requiring no additional elements, Lundgren said.

Peter Mikesh, 5630 South Trumbull avenue, will have charge of vegetable growing at Marquette park. Eleven florists are on hand to assist, but more men and women may be needed, Lundgren mentioned.

Black seeded Simpson and early curled Simpson lettuce are the two varieties chosen for the zoo. Some lettuce already is growing in the greenhouse on an experimental basis. If the weather clears, Lundgren said, lettuce will be sown in two steam heated frames, 6 feet by 57 feet, this week. By April 1 lettuce started in seed flats should be transplanted to the 13 cold frames, he continued.

By April 10, if the weather is satisfactory, lettuce sowings will be made directly in the field. Other sowings will be made in cool spring temperatures, and again starting Aug. 1. Lundgren estimated that one-fourth of an acre would be given over to lettuce.

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

A member of the squadron nicknamed "Hell's Angels," Thomas R. Kelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Kelly, 2414 Farwell avenue, won his wings and second lieutenant's commission when he graduated from the army bombardier school in Midland, Tex., recently. Kelly enlisted in the air corps Jan. 27, 1942. He had previously served a year in the signal corps.

Lt. Kelley.

A few months ago a Navajo Indian from Arizona, who couldn't read or write, was worried about getting ahead in the army. Then he met Corp. William Bergquist, 4718 North Damen avenue, who conducted "study periods" with the Indian. Proof of the success of the venture came in tangible form last week when Bergquist, stationed in the new quartermaster unit training center, Vancouver barracks, Washington, received the first letter ever written by his Navajo student.

Elmer A. Miller, 6743 North Wolcott avenue, has been selected to attend a specialist school to study radio mechanics, officials of Camp Wallace, Texas, report. Pvt. Miller graduated from Sullivan High school in 1942.

Announcement has just been made of the promotion of Claude E. Hawley, intelligence officer at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, to the rank of major. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hawley of Waukegan. Maj. Hawley entered the service in February, 1942, as a first lieutenant. In August he was advanced to captain.

After completing training in the adjustant general's school, Fort Washington, Maryland, Maurice H. Cazel of Deerfield and Arthur R. Flood, 7531 North Hoyne avenue, have been commissioned second lieutenants in the army.

Trained as an expert airplane mechanic, Pvt. James E. Mock, 5115 North Claremont avenue, was graduated last week from Keesler field's army air forces technical training command school. He is now ready for the important job of keeping allied planes in top flying condition.

Donald R. Nay, 20 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Nay, 5535 North Kenmore avenue, won his army wings on Feb. 18 at graduation exercises at the Hondo Navigation school in Texas. He was commissioned a second lieutenant. Nay is a graduate of Lane Technical High school.

Lt. Nay.

Three north siders have begun training as bombardier cadets in the army air forces school in Big Spring, Tex. They are Melvin Sargent, whose wife resides at 434 Roscoe street; Jack R. Nehrlich of Evanston, and Frank P. Winands of Kenilworth.

From the Naval Reserve Midshipmen's school at the University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind., comes word that the following young men are in training: Alidor J. De Wolf, 824 Sunnyside avenue; F. Edward Dore, 601 Deming place; Thomas C. Moarn, 4554 Malden street; John A. Ekblad, 4759 North Maplewood avenue; Harry F. Poll, 1802 Farwell avenue; Bernard C. Blumenthal of Evanston; John R. Keller, 65 East Oak street, and Jack H. Reich, 2828 Pine Grove avenue. On completion of their four month course by the end of May, the seamen will be commissioned ensigns and assigned to active duty at sea or shore stations.

Appointed an ensign in the naval reserve, Bernard J. Friedman, 440 Barry avenue, has entered training at Norfolk, Va. He will serve as an assistant civil engineer in a construction battalion. Ensign Friedman is a graduate of the University of Illinois where he majored in architecture.

Ensign Friedman.

On Feb. 13 Donald R. Siljestrom of Highland Park was graduated from Victorville Army Flying school in California as a bombardier and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the army air forces reserve. He is a graduate of the Highland Park High school.

Lt. Siljestrom.

Nine naval aviation cadets from north shore suburbs recently completed their preliminary ground and flight training at Northwestern university and have been assigned to advanced schools. They are Evanstonians William F. Barry, Thomas W. Erickson, Gordon M. Hallstrom, John H. Mitchell, and Scott S. Walker; Harry Arthur Jacobsen of Northbrook; Moxie S. George Jr. and John M. Jamieson of Wilmette, and William R. Page of Winnetka.

Last week the third of the three sons of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Booth, 1139 Walfram street, left for service. He is Edwin Booth, whose wife resides at 4153 Wellington avenue. He will follow his oldest brother, Capt. Robert Booth, into the army air corps. Capt. Booth is serving overseas. The other brother, David, is a lieutenant [j. g.] in the naval quartermaster station in Detroit. Edwin's destination was a flying field in Texas.

Capt. Booth.

After three months in the officer candidate school of Camp Davis, North Carolina, Gerald H. Rotstein, 1116 North Shore avenue, William V. Scribner, 38 South Dearborn street, and Richard L. Blake, 350 West Harrison street, have graduated with second lieutenants' commissions.

NORTHWEST SIDE GARDEN CLUBS WIN SHOW PRIZES

Members of the Des Plaines Garden club received special recognition last week in the annual Illinois Garden Club show, being held at Marshall Field & Co. store. The club was awarded a purple ribbon for its superior shadow box, and a blue ribbon for flower arrangement in identical containers with vertical lines. The show will close Saturday.

The Little Garden Club of Barrington was awarded a red ribbon for its mantel arrangement. Also entering exhibits in the show were the Garden Club of Barrington, the Park Ridge Garden club, the Edgebrook Garden club, and the Portage Park Garden club.

Judging this year's exhibits was a committee including Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Mrs. Katharine Lord, and Erns von Ammon. Proceeds from the traditional wishing well, as well as from the sale of tickets to a series of garden lectures, will go toward supplying flowers and plants for service centers, chapels of training camps, and military hospitals.

PRESBYTERIANS SEEK $1,500,000 IN ONE DAY DRIVE

The 50,000 Presbyterians of Chicago today at church services will seek to raise $1,500,000 for city religious and social institutions, national causes, and for global purposes on 16 different fronts.

The Rev. Clarence Wright is general chairman of the drive. Six committees of three persons each are assisting him.

Eighteen welfare and religious organizations in Chicago are to be benefitted, in addition to local activities of the 119 churches comprising the Presbytery of Chicago.

We Quote:
"Experience here and abroad shows that dining out for the average family is an important recreational lift for morale"

That is particularly true in wartime when more and more housewives, engaged in war work, no longer have the time, energy or materials to prepare elaborate home meals.

Ration regulations notwithstanding, we feel certain that we can make it an extreme pleasure and "recreational lift" for you and your family to dine out at least one night a week at Cooley's, where fine appetizing foods, expertly cooked and served, have been the keynote for 15 years.

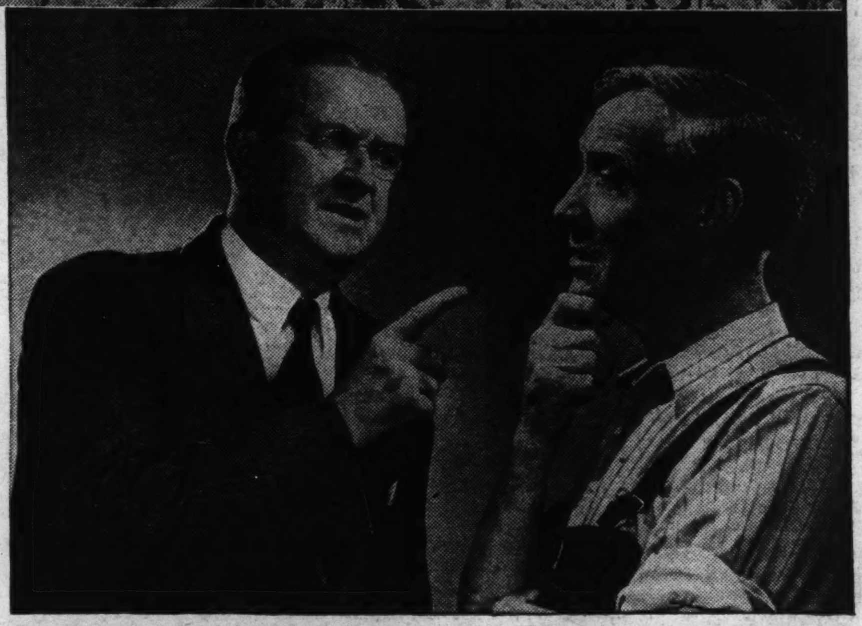
You Really Begin To Live... AFTER 35

1. Look at us! Nearly 50 and just beginning to live! We weren't always like this but old "Doc" Johnson tipped us off. "Nature meant you to take things easier now — even slowed down your system to make sure you would."

2. "These can be your best years," said the Doc, "if you keep as regular as you should. And that brings up a mighty important question. What kind of laxative do you take?"



3. When we showed him the stuff, he gave me a good talking to. "No more pills, salts or oils!" he explained. "After 35 — it's Serutan. That's the preparation which is ideally suited for folks your age."

4. At dinner that night, he introduced us to Serutan —took some himself. "Sure," he said, "we doctors are no different from anybody else." Well, we've been using Serutan ever since — and never felt better in our lives!

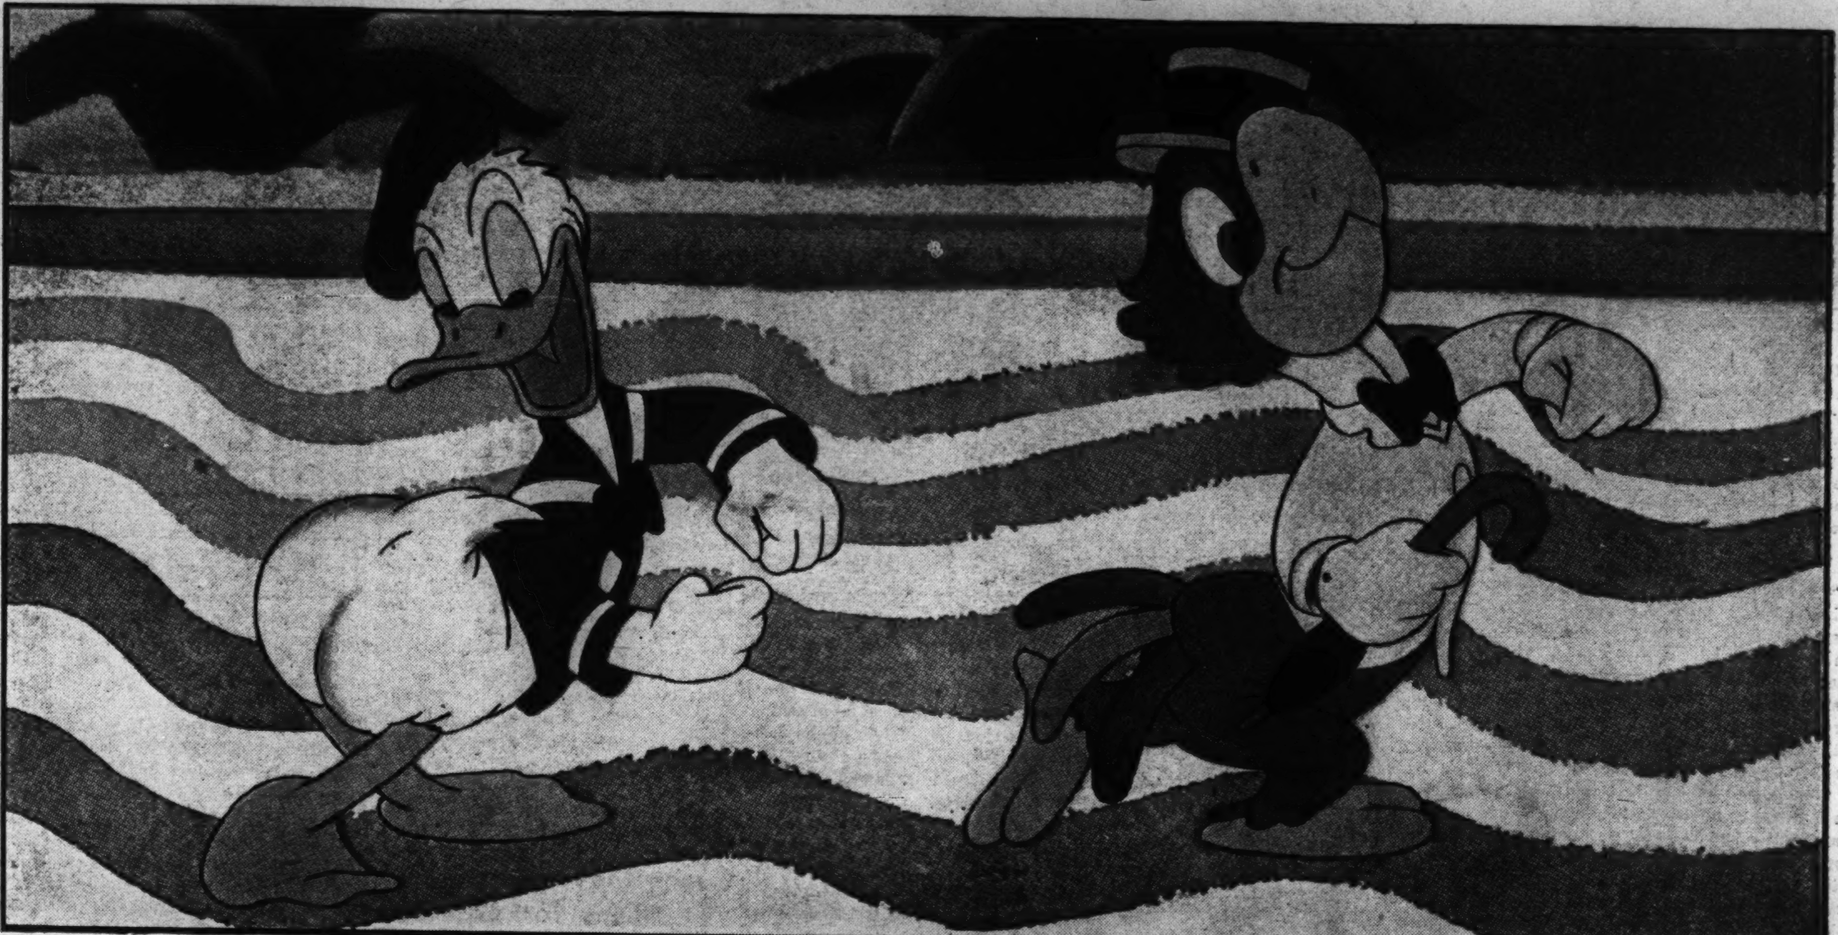
WALT DISNEY'S

"Saludos Amigos"

STARRING DONALD DUCK



Walt Disney's latest technicolor production is "Saludos Amigos," in which Donald Duck and other Disney characters, both old and new, explore various countries in South America. In the merry musical Donald finds himself co-starring—and loving it—with Jose Carioca, a witty and sophisticated. Brazilian parrot.

Donald, as an inquisitive North American tourist, uses a pair of big binoculars to inspect Lake Titicaca, over 12,000 feet up in the rugged Andes.

Donald, on a tour of Rio, thinks cachaca is soda pop, but he finds that it really has the kick of the Brazilian version of a Missouri mule.

Goofy starts out as a North American cowboy, but winds up as an Argentine gaucho. Here he swings the bolas while sipping mate from a bombilla.

Pedro, a baby mail plane, receives instructions from his mama, a middle-sized plane, before going on his first trip across the Andes.

Three Plays Add Dash of Novelty to Loop Stages

Critic Selects 'Private Lives' as 1st Choice

By Cecil Smith.

After a half year topheavy with return engagements of recent successes like "Claudia," "Arsenic and Old Lace," and "Life with Father," the loop stages are at last refreshed by a perceptible dash of novelty. Three new plays have come along in the last fortnight to give playgoers their first fresh conversational fodder since "Lady in the Dark" and to offer a variety of entertainment which ought to suit a good many kinds of tastes. These three, I need not tell you, are "Private Lives" at the Erlanger, "Cry Havoc" at the Studebaker, and "The Doughgirls" at the Selwyn.

Of these three, each of which deserves attention in its particular way, my own first choice is "Private Lives." Noel Coward's brittle comedy is not, technically, a novelty; but its performance here a decade ago was mediocre, and anyway the play is probably new to the great majority of present day playgoers.

• • •

"Private Lives" heads my own private list, if for no other reason than that its small cast is headed by Ruth Chatterton, who is one of the best actresses you will run across. I was surprised the other day to hear some one refer to Miss Chatterton's acting as "old fashioned," until I stopped to think what has happened to most acting in the last few years. I should not call its quality old fashioned, but permanent in its identification with the necessary values of first rate theatrical projection. She believes, for instance, that it is not only legitimate but desirable for an actress to have a command of diction and pronunciation which rise above the speech habits of the man on the street. She also thinks that the lines of a play must be treated like the orchestration of a piece of music, with the color, inflection, and phrasing that properly reveal their relationship to the total continuity and structure. Concentration upon these factors is not old fashioned; it is classic, and Miss Chatterton's performance might be described as a textbook if it were not so volatile, and amusing, and full of life.

• • •

Then, too, "Private Lives" is really a good play, which is more than can be said for either "Cry Havoc" or "The Doughgirls." It is written by a minor master of style who knows how to maintain, without a blemish, that mood of high facetiousness which was Oscar Wilde's gift to the English stage. In the balance, order, and symmetry of its construction, "Private Lives" is a skilful work of art, and one which deserves the respect of all who admire really good craftsmanship in playwriting.

Compared with "Private Lives," "The Doughgirls" is, of course, just a hash. Every line and every action is a compromise with expediency—a mere device to create a laugh. But many of the devices are good ones, and the laughs are honest and hearty much of the time. If "The Doughgirls" is less roof-raising than "My Sister Eileen" or "The Man Who Came to Dinner," the difference is one of degree and not one of kind. The truth is that there are places in "The Doughgirls" in which Mr. Fields, the author, and Mr. Kaufman, the director, have tried to milk the audience dry by introducing repetitions of gags which brought down the house in earlier plays. The play made me think of all those Viennese ballets we have seen because "Beau Danube" was such a success; no warmed over Viennese choreography has ever been able to rediscover the original charm of "Beau Danube."

• • •

"The Doughgirls" is based upon an attitude more characteristic, perhaps, of Hollywood than of New York. Anything that has succeeded once ought to be done over again with as few changes as possible. An idea good enough for one script is made to serve repeatedly for several.

But even if the formula is getting a little threadbare by now, "The Doughgirls" is the play for you to see if you want to sit back and laugh from the diaphragm, and if you like your humor good and sooty. It has the inestimable advantage of being topical; and it has the shrewdness to satirize a subject—war time Washington—which is an easy and deserving prey for all the hazing a playwright can give it.

• • •

"Cry Havoc" is the product of an author who could not make up his mind. That might have been a desirable state of affairs for Jenny in "Lady in the Dark," for it is apparent that there are hazards about making one's mind up too definitely. But for Allan Kenward, a little more definiteness surely would have been an advantage.

He never really knew, I am afraid, whether he wanted to write a saga of heroism and courage or an enticing girl show. One would think that he would have sensed from the first that besieged Bataan was no locale for a derivative of "The Women," and yet there are many evidences in "Cry Havoc" that he did not sense this fully. I do not intend to take a further potshot at defenseless Margie Hart when I inquire why it was necessary, or even useful, to introduce a former burlesque stripper as one of the group of girls.

At the opening there were a couple of lines bluer than any in "The Doughgirls"—lines so offensive in their context that the censor ordered the scissors applied. Much as I hate to espouse the dangerous cause of censorship in any form, I must say that the censor showed impeccable taste in this instance.

All three of these new plays have one quality in common—they are well acted. Or at least there is a great deal of good acting in each of them. After a slow start Ralph Forbes becomes an exceedingly good vis-à-vis for Miss Chatterton in "Private Lives," and the poor acting of the secondary rôles, tho lamentable, becomes a matter of subsidiary consequence. The cast of "The Doughgirls" is uniformly splendid and represents a regeneration on Max Gordon's part after that wretched "Junior Miss" performance he sent us last fall. "Cry Havoc" gives an interesting opportunity to the infinitely gifted Flora Campbell, and also suggests that Florence MacMichael, who plays the little southern girl, also is an actress with a real future whenever somebody finds the right play to put her in.

IN "PRIVATE LIVES"

Grace Moore Abandons Plans for Operetta

Grace Moore's plan to appear in a lavish revival of Offenbach's operetta, "La Belle Helene," has fallen by the wayside. She and Michael Todd, the presumed producer, reached the parting of the ways, and Miss Moore proposes to find solace in a trip overseas to entertain the soldiers in foreign fields. Todd expected her

POPULAR RECORDINGS

That provocative love song, "Murder, He Says," is a catchy tune that capitalizes on jive jargon in an unusual way. As sung by Dinah Shore on Victor's new record it is a lot of fun. This is something of a departure for Dinah, but she has a winning way of telling about her discovery of the almost perfect man—perfect except for the fact that the couches his sentiments in such terms as "solid," "shoot the snoot to me," "my ticker's giving out," and "it's murder." The backer upper on this disc is a complete contrast, "Something to Remember You By."

Bluebird has a jumping version of the "Murder" tune, played by Teddy Powell in his slower but swingier tempo. It is backed by a torchy "Let's Get Lost."

• • •

Because of its extreme popularity following a revival in the movie "Casablanca," the old tune "As Time Goes By" has been revived by Victor in a pressing made by Rudy Vallee in the early 1930's. It's a nostalgic Vallee treatment. Back of it is one of Artie Shaw's last recordings before entering the navy, "Two in One Blues." Strings, brass, reeds, and rhythm form a good background for Artie's clarinet.

Drama Notes

"Arsenic and Old Lace" has broken all records at the Cleveland playhouse by staying there nine weeks. This is a local production and not the touring company Chicago saw last fall. The play is now in its third year in New York and has been playing to capacity in London since its opening there last December.

• • •

"Away We Go," the Theater Guild's new musical version of Lynn Riggs' folk play, "Green Grow the Lilacs," began its career in New Haven, Conn., last Thursday evening. The score is by Richard Rodgers, and the book and lyrics are by Oscar Hammerstein II. Tomorrow the musical moves to Boston, where it will remain until the New York première early in April. Rouben Mamoulian was retrieved from the movies to direct "Away We Go." Agnes De Mille, choreographer of "Rodeo," has directed the dances. The settings are by Lemuel Ayers and the costumes by Miles White. The cast includes Betty Garde, Alfred Drake, Joseph Buloff, Joan Roberts, Lee Dixon, Howard De Sylva, and Celeste Holm.

• • •

When he was here last fall in "Priorities of 1942," Willie Howard was toying with the idea of trying to break into serious drama. The result of his cogitation has now become public property: He will appear in "My Dear Public," a musical comedy Irving Caesar has been intending to get onto the stage for about a year. So apparently Willie's serious aspirations are checkmated for the time being.

• • •

Helen Hayes suffered a bit of bad luck with the opening of "Harriet" in New York. Before the first night she contracted laryngitis. She went thru with the première despite her affliction, but was forced to cancel two days' performances immediately afterward before she was able to return to her part. The play received good notices, and is in the hit classification.

• • •

Few men hide their names from the public more successfully than Jules J. Leventhal, the theatrical impresario. In addition to the immense task of operating the theaters of New York's "subway circuit" successfully thruout the summer months, Mr. Leventhal also invests in more pretentious undertakings. His is the controlling interest in the Ruth Chatterton-Ralph Forbes production of "Private Lives" at the Erlanger, and he has a small piece of "Cry Havoc." His name does not appear on the program, for he prefers to remain behind the scenes. Most recently he has made a deal to save the life of "Counterattack," a play of the Russian war, which would have had to close in New York if he had not been willing to give it a needed injection.

UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN

this area. I'll have to talk to him." He glanced at his wrist watch, and then at the stack of papers on the desk. "Well, what about it, Victoria? Is there anything that you know—anything unusual——"

There was nothing, of course. Nothing and no one except—she leaned forward. "Some one did enter the house that night," she said. "Agnew saw her and Michael saw her, but no one else. I don't mean she came to see Hollis. I don't believe Hollis could bring himself to sell any information even if he had it. But some one did enter the house and——"

But they knew about the maid Agnew and Michael had noticed going upstairs.

Col. Galant said, "Beasley told us. I think it was the girl—what's her name—Lilibelle, the upstairs maid. Both Agnew and Michael only saw her fleetingly."

Maj. Campbell said to Victoria, "Do you think Lilibelle was lying when she said she wasn't in the house at that time?"

"No."

"The alternative, of course," said Maj. Campbell watching her, "is not a very pleasant one. That is that some one you don't know, some one nobody knows of—yet knows enough of you to come and go in your house; somebody who has nerve enough to get hold of a maid's uniform and walk in the front door [for the kitchen door was locked] and up the stairway right under Agnew's nose. Somebody who must know, even, that he's nearsighted."

Col. Galant spoke quickly into the telephone, "Yes, yes, put him on . . ." and waved to Victoria. "Think it over, Victoria," he said rapidly. "And keep quiet about this. I don't need to tell you that. Perhaps Maj. Campbell is right. Certainly that girl didn't know much and we can protect what she did know. If there's any hanky-panky going on, I'm going to stop it. That girl, Joan Green, had, so far as anybody knows, only one possible importance to anybody, and that was her connection with Camp Blakoe and this office. Maj. Campbell will investigate. It's entirely in his hands. Beasley knows about it of course and will coöperate. That's all now, my dear. Thanks." He said abruptly into the telephone: "Yes. O, yes, Gen. . . ."

He nodded at her as she rose. Maj. Campbell opened the door and walked with her thru the outer office, and into the narrow, deserted little corridor. There was a smell of new wood, a water cooler against the wall at Victoria's elbow, and the sound of steady typing somewhere near.

Something Friendly in His Presence

There Maj. Campbell stopped and turned to face her.

The night before when Beasley had questioned her, with that little gleaming red belt upon the table like a red stain of blood, there had been something about John Campbell's presence that was friendly. He had said only a little, there at the last when Beasley all but accused her of murder. He had merely stood for the most part, listening, smoking, immobile. Yet there had been something friendly in his very presence. She had felt defended.

She realized it now because that intangible thing seemed to have gone. He looked now as he'd looked after Henry's death, remote, hard, with impersonal bright hazel eyes in a brown face and his black head a little arrogant.

He said, "I really am sorry, Miss Steane. This rather puts me on the other side of the fence again, doesn't it?"

He didn't sound sorry. He sounded as distant, and impersonal and as hard as a Diesel engine.

John Campbell, before, had said she'd murdered Henry Frame. And now, it was her own red belt around Clistie's neck. Material evidence.

The bare walls behind him softened and blurred—so did his face against them. With a clutch of inward dismay she knew there were tears in her eyes. He saw them.

He said, "Victoria," and put his arm around her shoulders. His arm tightened. He bent so his face was against her own suddenly. He said again, whispering, and unevenly, "Victoria——" And unexpectedly, blindly, as if he didn't mean to, as if he didn't know, his mouth moved to her lips.

The sound of typing, the bare walls went away, didn't matter; became immeasurably distant—and then gradually began to come back. As suddenly as they had moved together they were apart again.

John Campbell said abruptly, "I'm always apologizing. This time—but I didn't mean—I didn't intend——" He stopped, looked at her, and said: "O, the devil—where's your car? This way?"

Somebody, not Victoria, but somebody inside her body turned and walked coolly along beside him. As they reached the door, probably the same person thought suddenly, all those doors—how idiotic—did any one see——?

Victoria's cheeks tingled.

It was absurd. It was preposterous. She was behaving like a school girl. Nevertheless she glanced backward along the narrow, bare little passage. None of the doors was open. Well, that was just lucky.

The hot western sun blazed upon them as they went out the door and down the little flight of steps. Thalia and Michael and Agnew were sitting in the car in hot, weary silence, drinking sodas.

There was a spark of laughter in Maj. Campbell's eyes as he put her into the car. But he looked, too, a little shaken.

She Thinks of Kisses with Dismay

Michael said, "Hello, Campbell." Thalia smiled, Agnew scowled.

Then the car was moving away. John Campbell turned quickly into the administration building again. Victoria thought with dismay that she had kissed him as closely as he had kissed her. And Agnes hunched forward, to inquire why Col. Galant had sent for her.

What reason could she give? "He wanted to know about the inquiry," said Victoria. "He's very busy. He couldn't come to the house."

There was a short silence. Then Agnew said, "That girl, Joan Green, worked here. I suppose they have spies on their mind and are being very hush-hush about it."

"Spies!" said Michael. The car swerved as he glanced swiftly across Thalia, at Victoria.

"Agnew," said Victoria, "sees spies in his dreams. It's his idea of adventure. He's very romantic . . ."

"Why, Victoria Steane," began Agnew in an indignant sputter and then, abruptly, fell silent.

And Thalia murmured rather cryptically, "It takes a thief to catch a thief. Or do I mean a spy?"

"As far as I can tell from what you say, you don't mean anything," said Agnew emerging momentarily and rudely from his sudden and brooding silence.

Thalia, unruffled, smiled at the road ahead of them. And after that there was very little conversation. Agnew said presently, rather sulkily, that they hadn't let them look inside the new magazines that were being built. Thalia said after a while that it was very hot and she'd seen a lot of soldiers crawling on their stomachs in the mud and swamp below the storehouses and wondered if Hollis were among them. Michael drove very fast so as to cool them, and the road elastic and soft-looking from the heat spun under the gray hood of the car. Once Agnew saw some cows in the road and shouted to Michael to look out. At the corner they had to wait for a long convoy to lumber past.

There were—or seemed to be—no police around, which was, again, like the days following Henry's death. Even when suspicion of murder was strongest, they had not been, really, under police guard. None of them could have escaped, perhaps. And anyway an attempt to do so was almost a confession. But at the same time they had been actually under a certain amount of surveillance and they were again. A motorcycle policeman was very busy with the engine of his machine when they passed the corner below the house—the corner where the bus had stopped on Monday night.

The commotion was due to Bessie. She was sitting on the porch, in a draggled mauve tea gown, sobbing into a large green chiffon handkerchief, with Jody hovering helplessly around her with a tray on which stood a glass of brandy, and Judson, the gardener, standing in dour and disapproving silence behind her.

The only word they could get out of her for some time was "ashes" and eventually Judson, giving Bessie a scornful look said that it was the police. State troopers, not Beasley. They had been there and had searched the place.

"The whole house," said Bessie becoming suddenly lucid and dabbing at her great dark eyes. "And the attics and the wardrobes and Clistie's writing desk."

Michael said, "Well, did they find anything?"

"Ashes," said Bessie sobbing wildly.

Judson said, his eyes little and hard as agates, "They took ashes out of the furnace, Miss Victoria. Took them out with a shovel. I saw them. They took them away."

"Ashes?" squealed Agnew sharply. "When kind of ashes?"

Judson, who hated talking, shook his head once and said that he had to go back to the potting shed.

"Can I speak to you a moment, Miss Victoria?" he said. "Alone."

Agnew said thoughtfully, "But nothing was burned. Not that anybody knows of, anyway."

Michael took the glass from the tray Jody held and gave it to Bessie. Victoria followed Judson down the path. When they reached the garden he turned to her. "I didn't want to say anything before Mrs. Isham. She's a vurra uncontroled woman," he said severely. "But—well, I've never thought that Mr. Frame was the kind of man to commit suicide." He stopped there and looked at the ground.

"Judson, what are you trying to tell me? Do you know anything about this—his death?"

Clistie Would Have Protected Them

He looked up quickly. "No," he said directly. "If I had, I'd have told the police. But Miss Clistie wouldn't have, that is, if she knew anything that involved—well, any of the family."

He was, of course, quite right. Clistie would have protected any of them with her life if need be.

Judson said, "It's the spade, Miss Vicky."

"Spade! What do you mean?"

He drew himself up. His deep-set eyes were secretive and stubborn. "I didn't tell the police. Or the state's attorney when he questioned me this morning. It was none of his business. But Miss Clistie came to me, you see, after you and Mrs. Isham and Miss Thalia had gone to Camp Blakoe that afternoon, Monday, and asked me for a spade. She didn't bring it back. It's nowhere around. Why did she want it, Miss Vicky? And what did she do with it?"

"But that . . ." Victoria pushed her hair back from her hot face. "That didn't have anything to do with the murder, Judson."

"How do ye know that, Miss Vicky?"

"Well, I—I don't know, of course. Only—well, nothing's been buried anywhere." Death and burying, the words seemed wrong and out of place in the hot, still sunshine with the bougainvillea over the porch in full blazing glory. Wrong and rather ominous as if their utterance invited misfortune.

She said quickly, "Well, it's nothing, Judson. Thank you for telling me."

"Mind ye," he said emphatically; "if I thought any of this was evidence, it would be my duty to tell the police. But I do not consider it so." He looked fiercely at her, as if daring her to give him credit for either loyalty or affection, turned around and went down the path, his thick body obstinate and dogged in every move.

She turned slowly back toward the house. Probably the spade meant nothing. It had always been Clistie's habit to poke about the house and grounds, quietly accomplishing her own domestic ends without explanation. On the other hand, it was an odd thing to disappear, like that.

What remained of the afternoon was quiet. Bessie stopped crying and ate a large slice of cake, which Jody brought her, with a good appetite. The police did not return. Michael fended off several telephoned calls and two more reporters. Agnew sat hunched on the edge of the porch, reading a large book. Bessie, eventually, asked him what it was and he said, reading and engrossed, that it was about murder. "There's a fine chapter on garroting," he said.

"Agnew!" Bessie sat upright in the wicker chaise longue. "Where did you get such a book! Give it to me at once."

"'The next step,'" read Agnew dreamily, "'will be to examine the instrument of strangulation and its employment." He read on further, squinted across the river, thrust out his under lip and said in a faraway voice, "Well, we all know the instrument. That was Vicky's red belt. There wasn't anything special about the way it was employed. I asked one of the police. It was just put—" his voice faltered a little "— put around her—" he swallowed and went on "—her throat and tied once and—pulled."

Nobody spoke. Then Agnew went on rapidly, "There are only two possible theories about Vicky's red belt. No, three. One: it was discovered accidentally somehow by the murderer—not in the house, which would mean either that Vicky lost it——"

"No," said Victoria, "I didn't lose it."

"——or that somebody else lost it. Two; Clistie herself had it. I can't imagine why. I asked Lilibelle when she'd last seen the belt but she never knows anything. The police had asked her, too, she told me."

"What's the third theory?" said Michael.

"Intention, of course. Somebody got into the house, and took the belt with the intention of using it exactly as it—as it was used. That is," said Agnew, conquering the tendency of his voice to falter whenever he spoke of Clistie's death, and going on quickly, "That is, whoever did it, intended either to involve you, Vicky, or to divert suspicion from himself, or both. Himself," said Agnew, "or herself. For the maid I saw could have done it. So that theory has something to back it up. Victoria went to her room before I saw the maid, but Vicky says she was on the balcony. The maid—or whoever it was—could have gone into Vicky's room, got hold of the belt and then——"

"Then disappeared into thin air," said Bessie irritably. "I wish you'd stop talking about that. It was either Lilibelle or nobody." Her voice was defiant. Her eyes, roving the shrubs and hedges of the garden, were uneasy.

Agnew went on, "Then of course, the maid—excuse me, mother—the unknown quantity, could have waited in Victoria's room until Michael and I came upstairs, and the coast was clear. And then she came down again. Yes, that could have happened."

"I think it was Lilibelle you saw on the stairway," said Bessie stubbornly. "If it's an opportunity for some—some tramp to get into the house unobserved and take Vicky's red belt that you're thinking of, I should say a whole regiment of tramps could have walked right under your nose without your knowing it."

"A tramp," said Agnew somberly, "wouldn't have murdered Henry. And then come back to murder Clistie and Joan Green. A tramp wouldn't have remembered that Victoria was the choice suspect of the police when Henry was killed. That must be, you know, the reason for the red belt. To make Victoria the suspect again."

"Agnew!" said Bessie. "Put that book away and shut up."

"All right," said Agnew sulkily. "If you don't want to know who murdered her——" He complied in outraged dignity, and returned to sit with a wounded and brooding air on the edge of the low porch.

Beyond All the Obvious Facts

After dinner, with the river misty and the moon half-hidden by clouds so the whole night, the sky and river and mist were pearly and luminous, Michael and Victoria walked in the garden again to the point above the river where there were chairs and a sundial.

It seemed a long time since they had stood there together in the moonlight; a long time since the colonel's tea party—where John Campbell had talked to her of murder. She had never told Michael of that. She did so then, looking out across the river thru wraiths of Spanish moss and mist which in the diffused pearly light were strangely beautiful and a little ominous.

Michael was angry and astonished. "But good grief, Vicky," he cried, "why didn't you tell me! The man was warning you of danger."

"I didn't believe him."

"Look here," said Michael suddenly. "Do you know much of Campbell? I mean beyond the obvious facts."

Victoria thought back. He lived in Ponte Verde. He had been state's attorney, therefore he must be a lawyer. He was in his 30s probably. He liked dogs and horses and didn't like murder and that was all she knew. All, that is, except that she knew so many other things—odd things like the way he walked, and the way his eyes laughed, and the way he said Victoria. The way he held a woman and kissed her. She caught that thought back, quickly.

"What is the matter, Victoria?"

She said hurriedly, confused, "Nothing. That is, I don't know anything at all about him. Why?"

"It struck me that it was queer the way he let the thing drop. If he still believed Henry was murdered, why didn't he do something about it?"

"He said he had to abide by the decision of the coroner's jury."

Michael uttered an impatient exclamation. "If it wasn't for him and the unwarranted stand he took against you, Vicky, you wouldn't be on the—on the spot you're on right now."

UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN

By MIGNON G. EBERHART

What Has Gone Before

Ten weeks have elapsed since Henry Frame's death and the trying ordeal in which Victoria Steane was suspected of his murder by John Campbell, coroner and state's attorney. Victoria had quarreled with Frame about his management of the Steane mills, in which she owned most of the stock. Then Frame was found drowned. But the coroner's jury said it was suicide after Michael Bayne, manager of one of the mills, discovered Frame was embezzling from the business. Victoria lives with Aunt Bessie Isham and her two sons, Agnew and Hollis. Thalia, Frame's daughter, has stayed on with them after her father's death. At a party given by Colonel Galant at Camp Blakoe, Campbell, now a major, tells Victoria he is still sure that Frame was murdered and warns her there might be more murders. He is surprised to learn that she is planning to marry Michael. With the wedding only two days off, Victoria realizes she does not love Michael. She tells him she cannot marry him, but he begs her to think it over. Victoria notices that Clistie Forbes, their loyal housekeeper, seems worried. In the dead of night Victoria hears a scream in the pine woods, then a splash in the river. She awakens Agnew. Clistie appears and promises to get Judson, the gardener, to investigate. Clistie fails to return, and when they report her disappearance to the police they learn that a woman's body has been found in the river. They are unable to identify the body, altho the woman is wearing Clistie's dress. Victoria and Thalia say her face is familiar. Clistie is found in the pumphouse, strangled with Victoria's belt. Michael's and Victoria's wedding is postponed. The unidentified woman is discovered to be Joan Green, a secretary in Colonel Galant's office. Beasley, the new state's attorney, refuses to believe Victoria didn't recognize her. At night Victoria and Agnew search the pumphouse for clews. During their search Agnew is knocked unconscious by an unknown assailant and Victoria barely escapes. Thalia tells Victoria that Michael loves her and is marrying Victoria only because of chivalry. Colonel Galant summons Victoria to camp and in Campbell's presence asks if she has noticed anything unusual about Hollis' actions. He says Hollis dated Joan Green, who might have passed on military secrets.

INSTALMENT IX.

"MAJOR!" snapped Col. Galant.

John Campbell swung around toward Col. Galant. "Believe me, colonel," he said impetuously. "Everybody knows these secret things exist. If you want my opinion, it is that these murders have nothing to do with espionage."

"What is the purpose then? What's back of it all? If you've got an opinion, what is it?" demanded Col. Galant, angrily, rapping on the table.

John Campbell's face sobered. "Well, I don't know," he said slowly. "But I think it's some very deep, and personal motive—something as strong, and something so urgent that—that there was no way out."

No way out—but murder.

No one moved for a moment. Then Col. Galant said testily: "But the girl—this Greeen girl. My word, John, I've got to know if there's a leak in my own office!"

"Yes, sir," said Maj. Campbell a little grimly.

"There's some connection with the camp! That girl—Clistie's dress——"

"And Henry Frame?" asked Maj. Campbell.

"Yes. No. I don't know. It's your business to find out!"

"Certainly, sir," said Maj. Campbell, his mouth tight. He turned to Victoria. "You see, Miss Steane—there's no one but you in the house whom we can ask, like this, for information. Mrs. Isham——"

"Bessie would have a fit," said the colonel gloomily, staring at the desk.

"What information do you want?" said Victoria stiffly.

"Anything! Everything!" snapped the colonel.

Maj. Campbell said quietly: "Anything that strikes you, in view of this, as suspicious. Anything, particularly, that seems to be connected in any way with Camp Blakoe. Anything about Hollis such as—O, if he had more money than he ought to have had. If he's been seeing, or writing to, or talking to anybody who might possibly be a foreign agent."

"Perhaps Joan Green was quite innocent, you see," said Col. Galant. "Perhaps she gave information without intending to, indiscreetly and against definite orders, but unintentionally. But suppose, then, she realized what she had done and intended to try to fix things—to tell me—to try to undo the harm she had done. And suppose Hollis was afraid she would do just that. Suppose he—stopped her——"

"He couldn't have done that!"

No one spoke for a moment. Then Bruce Galant said heavily, "The girl was there in the pine woods. He did know her. And he did lie about it."

"But Hollis was not with Joan Green that night. He went to the movies with Thalia."

"If the scream you heard was uttered by Joan Green then she died after Hollis had returned," said John Campbell. "And besides, the little moving picture theater was so crowded with soldiers that he and Thalia couldn't get seats together. He sat, according to him, some rows back of her. The show lasted a little over two hours. It is a 15 or 20 minute drive from Ponte Verde to your house.

"They left about 9:30 and returned about 12:10. But Thalia and Hollis didn't actually see each other from the time they entered the theater until they left. And Beasley—the state's attorney, you know—says the exact time of Joan Green's death is not possible to determine. But he also makes a point of the fact that you said you heard the scream after a car had driven up to the house, and you thought it was Hollis."

"How did Joan Green get there?" said Victoria, suddenly. "Somebody must have brought her from Ponte Verde. She couldn't have walked. Somebody—whoever murdered her—could have left his car at the other end of the pine woods. There's a road and a place where you can turn into the pine woods for a little way. He could have . . ."

Maj. Campbell was shaking his head. Col. Galant was staring bleakly at her. John Campbell said rather gently: "She came by bus—the 11 o'clock bus from Ponte Verde to Pine Beach. At the corner below your house, she got out. The bus stops there at about 11:20. It's about a quarter of a mile from the entrance to your place. And at about a quarter to 11, a woman's voice had talked to her over the telephone at the Ponte Verde hotel, where she lived. The driver of the bus identified her. She got off the bus at that corner, and was never seen alive again."

"That's why——" began Victoria and took a long breath. The room was very hot and the fan very loud. "That's why he made me telephone—to see if it was my voice the hotel clerk heard. But I didn't telephone to her. I didn't——" again she stopped. Then said "What was she wearing when she got off the bus?"

A Lonely Part of the Road

Maj. Campbell shook his black head again. "The bus driver doesn't know. He says he didn't notice. He told Beasley that the only reason he remembered her is because she got off at such a lonely part of the road."

"But—then when she left the hotel? What was she wearing then?"

"The clerk didn't see her. No one [except the bus driver] has yet been found who remembers seeing her after about 7 o'clock when she ate dinner in the hotel dining room. Nobody remembers exactly how she was dressed except that there was nothing unusual about her. They don't change for dinner at the hotel, as a rule. Probably she was dressed in whatever she'd been wearing during the day. The telephone call for her came at about a quarter to 11. Clistie Forbes was wearing the brown lace and chiffon dress at about 10:30 that night. Between 10:30 or 11 and the next morning——" he stopped with a kind of shrug. Some time between a quarter to 11 Monday night and 5 o'clock the next morning that strange and tragic transference had been effected.

Maj. Campbell turned to Col. Galant. "May I ask, Colonel, if there is anything else in the transcript which struck you as being of any possible importance?"

"No," said the colonel. And looked at the back of his hand and said again, his face bleak and lined and old, "No——"

Maj. Campbell waited. Victoria waited, too. And Col. Galant said suddenly, "That is, it can't mean anything." He looked at Victoria. "Victoria, do the words," he lifted his voice over the roar of the fan, "do the words 'cara nome' mean anything to you?"

John Campbell's brown face looked startled.

"That's not what I mean," said the colonel. He glanced at Maj. Campbell. "It probably has nothing at all to do with—with anything," he said.

Maj. Campbell waited. Col. Galant gnawed his lip, and then said shortly, "It's only a bit of idle conversation, really. Between Bessie and Clistie. But it sticks in my mind and I keep trying to remember——"

"What was it?" asked John Campbell.

"Well. As I say, it probably means nothing. It was that night, you know, Monday night, after dinner. We were having coffee—Bessie and Clistie and I. Thalia and Hollis were at the piano. Agnew was in a corner with his nose in a book. So none of them heard it. Anyway, Clistie—she was looking a little odd, you know; thoughtful and quiet—at least I think so now—Clistie all at once asked Bessie."

He stopped as if he'd finished.

After a moment Maj. Campbell said, "Asked Bessie what?"

"Why, what I asked Victoria! About the words 'cara nome.' Did they mean anything to Bessie. Bessie said, like you, Victoria, a song and a brand of cosmetics and literally the English meaning, 'dear name,' and that was all. Clistie, tho, insisted a little. I thought it was a little queer. It seemed so unimportant. Finally Bessie said it seemed to her to have some sort of special familiarity but she had no idea what and wasn't even sure of that, and tried to change the subject. But Clistie turned around to me and asked me if it meant anything to me."

"What did you say?"

"Good heavens, I said no, of course," exploded the colonel.

Tries to Recall Special Connection

Maj. Campbell waited again. The colonel cast him an icy blue look, tapped his fingers on the desk and said, "And it didn't. At least—not then. But—well, it's annoying, you know, John, but since then I—I keep thinking of it. As if I did remember something, do you see? Except I don't. Clistie was very earnest about it. And—well, the fact is, John, I think, too, that I've seen those words, just lately, somewhere. I can't remember where. At the time, certainly I paid no attention to them at all. But now——" he whirled around impatiently so the swivel chair squeaked. "Now I keep trying to remember some special connection——"

He frowned at John Campbell, who said "Connection with what, Col. Galant? The camp? Clistie?"

"Advertisment?" suggested Maj. Campbell. "Concert program? Opera?" His voice was casual. His hazel eyes very bright and intent.

"How should I know!" snapped Col. Galant. He looked at his desk irresolutely. And added, "A tremendous volume of detail goes across my desk. I can't remember everything——" The telephone whirred. "I told that girl," he muttered but took up the telephone. "Who is it—O—O, all right, all right, put him on——" holding the telephone he looked at Victoria. "It's the commanding general for

Huge Advance Sales Promise Success of Met Opera

TO SING IN MOZART'S "THE MARRIAGE OF FIGARO"

Four members of the cast of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro," to be sung at the Civic Opera house Monday evening, March 22, when the Metropolitan Opera opens a two week visit in celebration of its first Chicago appearance in 33 seasons. Left to right are Marita Farell, who sings Barbarina; Ezio Pinza, Figaro himself; Eleanor Steber, the Countess Almaviva, and Jarmila Novotna as the page, Cherubino. Bruno Walter conducts, and major roles also are sung by Bidu Sayao, John Brownlee, and Salvatore Baccaloni.

'Magic Flute' Is First Choice of Chicagoans

By Claudia Cassidy.

At last report the customer onslaught on the Civic Opera house was a sight to behold, as long lines of bundled up buyers snake danced thru the windswept portico, determined to capture tickets for the two week engagement of Metropolitan opera, opening March 22. The avalanche of mail orders has staggered the management, which had considered itself conditioned to prosperity by the engagements of "This Is the Army" and "Lady in the Dark."

Bruno Walter.

As far as I am able to discover, Chicago is chiefly out to buy the three Mozart operas and the two Wagner operas, which is not surprising as they are carefully cast and we have not heard any of them in recent seasons. "The Magic Flute" apparently has been first choice, and this may furnish ammunition for opera in English fans, tho the labyrinth of the Masonic plot is not likely to be too clear even in the vernacular.

• • •

By a curious quirk of booking, "The Magic Flute" has been sung only four times in the history of resident Chicago opera, all four performances taking place in 1931. The late Egon Pollak conducted, and the cast held Frida Leider, Maria Olszewska, Noel Eadie, Maria Rajdl, Rudolph Bockelmann, and Alexander Kipnis. The Metropolitan's revival, to be conducted by Bruno Walter, offers in corresponding rôles Eleanor Steber, Anna Kaskas, Josephine Antoine, Jarmila Novotna, John Brownlee, and Ezio Pinza. Charles Kullman will sing Tamino, and Norman Cordon the high priest.

Mr. Walter, one of the most celebrated of living conductors, will make his long desired Chicago début when he takes charge of opening night's "The Marriage of Figaro," another Mozart favorite, this one not heard here since 1929, when the cast glittered with Edith Mason, Marion Claire, Eva Turner, Virgilio Lazzari, Richard Bonelli, and Vittorio Trevisan. The Metropolitan's counter cast offers the lovely Brazilian, Bidu Sayao, Jarmila Novotna, Eleanor Steber, Ezio Pinza, John Brownlee, and Salvatore Baccaloni.

Altho the third Mozart opera, "Don Giovanni," has not been sung here since 1940, and then with a less than topnotch cast, we have in earlier seasons basked in some luxurious performances, what with Raisa, Leider, Mason, Schipa, Hackett, Lazzari, and the two notable Dons, Vanni-Marcoux and the redoutable Pinza. Mr. Pinza will have the Metropolitan's title rôle, again with Mr. Walter in the pit, while Zinka Milanov, Bidu Sayao, Jarmila Novotna, Salvatore Baccaloni, and James Melton appear in other major rôles.

"Tristan and Isolde," last heard here in 1940 with Flagstad and Melchior, will mark the first Chicago appearances of Helen Traubel as Isolde, Kerstin Thorborg as Brangaene, and Erich Leinsdorf as conductor. Mr. Melchior is the Tristan, of course, and Alexander Kipnis the King Marke. "Tannhäuser," which lapsed from the repertory in 1939, brings the brilliant conductor, George Szell, in his Chicago opera début, and Marjorie Lawrence, the Australian soprano, making a courageous comeback from serious illness, as Venus, a rôle which does not demand that she rise from a couch. Mr. Melchior sings the title rôle, with Lawrence Tibbett as Wolfram, Rose Bampton as Elisabeth, and Norman Cordon as the Landgrave.

Other productions of outstanding interest are the revivals of Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," not sung here since 1934, and of Moussorgsky's "Boris Godunoff," last heard in 1939. "Forza," once so superb a vehicle for Raisa and the unforgotten Muzio, will be under Mr. Walter's direction, with a cast including Stella Roman, Kurt Baum, Lawrence Tibbett, Irra Petina, Ezio Pinza, and Salvatore Baccaloni. Mr. Baccaloni sang "Father Melitone" here about 12 years ago, when he was for one season a member of the Chicago Civic Opera. "Boris Godunoff" will bring Alexander Kipnis in the name part for the first time in Chicago in a production directed by Mr. Szell. The rôle has been sung here only by Chaliapin, the incomparable; by Baklanoff, Vanni-Marcoux, and Pinza.

• • •

A new Carmen is always news, and the Metropolitan has two, tho we get to hear only Lily Djanel, and not Irra Petina. Miss Djanel is a blonde siren, and I have no way of knowing if she emulates Miss Petina in singing the Habanera from the floor while eating an apple—which sounds a bit like Jeritza's "Tosca." Djanel is a Belgian, and she is a highly successful Salomé, which should promise good things for Carmen, considering the remembered impact of Mary Garden in both rôles. She will have Sir Thomas Beecham as conductor, Raoul Jobin as Don José, Licia Albanese as Micaela, and Leonard Warren as a new Escamillo.

• • •

Few other novelties are to be discovered on the bills, which will depend on carefully rehearsed and well conducted performances to hold their own above the average opera mark. Martinelli, Milanov, and Moscona will sing a "Trovatore" with Bruna Castagna as Azucena. Bidu Sayao will sing her enchanting Rosina in the "Barber" with Pinza and Baccaloni as a new pair of comedians. Why two performances of "Traviata," I couldn't tell you. Licia Albanese sings her first Chicago Violetta closing night, with Kullman and Tibbett as the Germonts, while the earlier performance goes to Jepson and Melton, with Warren a new baritone father. Cesare Sodero conducts. Jobin, the French-Canadian, sings his first "Faust," opposite Albanese, with Norman Cordon a new Mephistopheles, and with Beecham conducting.

Guizar Mixes Fun and Fine Singing at Blackstone

Tito Is Proving Popular Hit in Mayfair Room

By Will Davidson.

Huzzar for Guizar!

Tito can sing, he is handsome, he is a smart showman, and he's a sincerely friendly chap. If he does not establish himself as one of the most popular and successful entertainers the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel has had there will be a lot of surprised persons in town.

Tito Guizar.

This young Mexican has a voice that evidences years of careful training and he knows just how to use it. Let him start with a fiery "Granada" or the dreamlike "Perfidia" and just at the moment when you are becoming satisfied he switches to a brief strain of "Chattanooga Choo Choo" in Spanish. It's that delightful sense of fun that gives his programs a lift far beyond even the very great natural talent they exhibit.

Tito strums a guitar like the dream caballero he is, never any pyrotechnics, just the soothing sort of strumming that sighs like the night wind in Guadalajara, and shines like the moon over Monterey. His songs may now and then be sad, but with the sadness of a beautiful night that is gone. Always there's a glint of humor, of happiness in his eyes, a quiet laugh in his voice.

Boxer and golfer, Tito has that strapping good health that goes well with a man who numbers a president and many generals among his forbears. He has green eyes, girls—but, girls, he has a lovely wife and two very adorable children. Don't worry, tho. When he sings he is the personification of all the gay romance of Mexico . . . all that is strong and great and good to look upon in our colorful neighbor to the south.

It is unfortunate that the Mayfair room doesn't have facilities for a more dramatic lighting of Tito's work. It could be one of the most impressive presentations in town. Fortunate it is, tho, that Neil Bondshu is playing there—for Neil's music is a brilliant spotlight in itself, adjustable to the most tenuous mood.

The Drake, which will bring in a young eastern singer—Barbara Whitney—Tuesday, is drawing heavily upon the well stocked talents of Dawn Roland and Charlie Wright, the highly amusing family team that gives out with such good music and dancing in Camellia House.

Dawn is a gay little pixie who dances with laughter in her steps. One moment she's starlight on a breeze ruffled lake; the next a sardonic zephyr mimicking a pompous line storm. Husband Charlie is a perfectly delightful singer. When he brings his accordion onto the floor and tunes up a slightly nasal aside on the frailties of what we laughingly call human beings, he's tremendously entertaining. On the stand he has a sense of humor, too, in his direction of the neat little band. No wonder the Drake wants to keep them on and on.

Boswelling the Bistros:

On the "future attractions" side of the ledger: Jimmy Joy replacing Art Kassel at the Bismarck early in April. . . . Gene Krupa doing a fast return to the Panther room in July, after Tommy Dorsey's first visit there. . . . Harry James doing a one-nighter at the Aragon April 10 and at the Trianon April 11, and T. Dorsey doing a one-weeker in the Aragon starting May 7. . . . A St. Patrick's day party at the Aragon Wednesday, with Eddy Howard playing. and one at the Merry Garden ballroom with Gay Claridge and Guy Colby co-starring.

If I seem dottier than usual and go about mumbling incoherent objections to the obstinacy of a piece of string, it is just because bedeviling Bert Allerton has made my waking hours hideous by showing me how to tie a knot in a length of cord without letting go of either end. I say he has showed me how, but I still don't KNOW how, and that's what worries my family.

Bert will be closing his long stay in the Pump room and Buttery in a week or so to fulfill a series of stage engagements in the east, and how I'm going to miss him. He'd better hurry back, because they tell me I'll get pretty tired of that strait-jacket rather soon.

It is slightly late, for Griff Williams returns on the 25th, but I want to give Joe Reichman a long deserved laurel for his work in general in the Palmer House's Empire room, and especially for the Little Show which features his superb Gershwin tribute. It's a seven minute medley of Gershwin's best music and Joe and his band play it beautifully. Little Penny Lee, his singer, is a darling and when she sings Frances Faye's "Shut My Mouth" you wonder if maybe Frances has the right slant on it, after all. Artie Wayne, Joe's balladeer, is another strong addition to the talent ledger.

Talia Wermuth, the beautiful little dancer who will be back in the Bismarck next month, is now out on tour. . . . Winnie Hoveler and her new line of dancing girls are getting fine notices in Montreal. . . . Insane, turgid Dick Buckley of the dimmer spots here has reformed and bathed his material and is a smash hit in St. Louis at the effete Chase hotel. . . . Artini and Consuelo and Tung Pin Soo are in the Bismarck show now. . . . Lennie Gale is in the Latin Quarter. . . . And Ralph [Cookie] Cook, the only man I know who has less blood than I, has journeyed to a successful run in Florida. Gaunt but not forgotten.

DANCE REVUE PRODUCER

Gloria Lee is the new producer of dance routines in the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel. She's also still dancing in the line, to Art Kassel's music.

Jessel Under Contract to Write Autobiography

George Jessel is under contract with Random House to write his autobiography, tentatively entitled "So Help Me." In view of Mr. Jessel's exceptional wit as a toastmaster and raconteur, the book may well be worth reading. The comedian is now busy in New York with the successful variety entertainment, "Show Time." His last Chicago appearance occurred in May, 1942, in the short lived musical comedy, "High Kickers."

Notes of Music and Musicians

Witold Malcuzynski, a young Polish pianist of considerable renown, will make his Chicago debut in recital at the Civic theater next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Born in Warsaw, Mr. Malcuzynski studied law and philosophy at two Polish universities before turning to music as a profession. Awarded first prize for piano at the Polish conservatory in 1936, he was encouraged by Paderewski, who invited the young pianist to his Swiss home, and subsequently became his teacher. Malcuzynski won the Chopin competition at Warsaw, began a series of successful recitals in continental cities, and recently came to the United States after a tour of South America. The usual New York debut garnered a fine crop of quotable adjectives.

Altho there is every expectation that the Ravinia festival will take place on schedule, the Berkshire music center in Massachusetts has suspended its 1943 season. Serge Koussevitsky, who with the Boston orchestra has been the center of musical life both at the school and the pre-war festival, already is making plans to resume work there when war conditions permit.

Men in uniform like music, and not just popular music, either. So says evidence of figures released by U. S. O. Camp Shows, Inc. In the past eight months more than 238 concerts have been given before at least 208,260 men in service, according to Andrew Baldini, concert division manager, who says these concerts invaded the realm of opera, symphony and even chamber music. Recently at Fort Sheridan a program was devoted to the music of Mozart, Verdi, Brahms and Beethoven. The officials were nervous about it, but the soldiers said to the performers, "Come back again, and soon."

Eugene Ormandy has written an open letter to members of the Philadelphia orchestra audience, asking for a "spirit of tolerance" in listening to new music. The average conductor is between the devil and deep blue sea when it comes to the part of his audience that quarrels about hearing "the same old thing" and the part that takes something new as a personal insult.

• • •

Adolf Busch and his chamber music players will open a series of four subscription concerts at New York's Town hall March 26, while this afternoon at the same concert hall Lotte Lehmann and Bruno Walter appear in lieder recital. These are things Chicago has far too little of, and a discreet booking might do an impresario credit. However, radio listeners may be comforted by hearing Wanda Landowska, the brilliant harpsichordist, who opens a series of seven Sunday concerts this afternoon, sponsored by the Canadian Broadcasting corporation. Her concertos are mysterious works said to have been found in a pile of old music in a Salvation Army salvage depot—14 of them, the story goes, and 12 now identified as the work of Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach. Five of them, Miss Landowska believes, never have been played in public.

The Chicago Piano Symphony orchestra and the Chicago Youth Piano Symphony orchestra, each made up of 19 pianists at 12 pianos, will appear in concert at Orchestra hall Monday at 8:30, under the direction of Antoinette Rich. The program, which presents numerous soloists, including a Spanish dancer, ranges from Chopin, Strauss and Liszt to Gershwin and Grofe.

• • •

The Musicians Club of Women will present a program of organ music at Kimball hall Monday at 2:30. The concert is open to the public without charge.

Books Telling Foreman How to Do His Job

By Arthur C. Bergholz.

A crucial segment of the stresses and strains of our intensified industrial program impinges upon the problem of supervision.

Particularly is this true at the level of middle management supervision and at the end point of executive authority: foremanship. The qualities needed for supervision are such that at first blush it appears that neither enough individuals can be found with them to fill the needs nor can enough individuals be trained in the time allotted.

The literature in which this apparent dilemma is rationalized is of great importance. The sampling of current publications which follows indicates that for immediate needs much of what is being written is adequate.

For instance, "Industrial Supervision," by Lewis A. Froman and Scott B. Mason [Foundation Press, $3.50], is the product of collaboration between one who has had 25 years' experience in the industrial field and another who, tho having little direct factory experience, has organized projects of industrial and business research. The result is a good working tool, with many apt practical illustrations of the simple principles of supervision. The unpretentious, good sense of the many illustrations makes this a valuable book.

C. M. MacMillan is equally successful in his compact work, "Foremanship and Safety" [Wiley, $1]. In simple, direct prose MacMillan sets forth the basic obligations which the foreman as representative of his concern has in regard to the safety of employé, material, and facilities. Each exposition of a principle of industrial safety is followed by a prepared talk which the foreman can address to his men. This rearrangement into colloquial discourse is nicely done.

All in all this is a likable book. A quotation will show its quality: "The execution of any plan projected by top supervision eventually finds its way to the foreman. What the noncommissioned officer is to the military the foreman is to industry—its backbone. And too often the foreman is required to administer a plan or institute a new mode of operation which he has been given no opportunity to study thoroly and about which he has been given insufficient advance information."

• • •

In contrast, Richard S. Schultz' "Wartime Supervision of Workers" [Harper, $2.25], is a more ostentatious study, tho he disclaims offering a panacea. He has designed a hundred control statements for selecting, training, and developing supervisors.

The author is not as aware as he might be of a serious fault in personnel work. For want of a better term this fault might be identified as "paper standards." Much of what is well written and appears as good sense in personnel literature does not get beyond the paper it is written on. This discrepancy between what is proposed and what can be accomplished in fact still nullifies much of what appears in the writing on personnel.

Nevertheless a careful and selective reading of "Wartime Supervision of Workers" will give many helpful suggestions. Both top executives and foremen can gain insight thru careful evaluation of the form and selection of statements which Schultz has made.

Space permits only short mention of a more comprehensive work—"Elements of Supervision," by William R. Spriegel and Edward Schulz [Wiley, $2.25]. The detailed discussion of the elements of supervision is preceded by a short exposition of the "essentials of organization," "types of organization," and "interpreting company policies."

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

It all started when Kenneth Kaufman, who writes reviews for THE TRIBUNE in between his English classes at the University of Oklahoma, contributed a rhyme, or a jingle, or something to this paper's 1942 Christmas Book section. . . . The four line epic, entitled "Intimate Significance of an Iowa Idyll," was a commentary on Phil Stong's new book, "One Destiny," and it read:

The short-handed farmer fights our foes,
While the Triple A comes and the Triple A goes,
And Phil Stong glowers and thumbs his nose

• • •

We suspected that Mr. Stong's sense of dry humor was quite a bump rather than a dent, and so we sent him a clipping of the poem. . . . For once we were right. . . . He came back with some pointed remarks about certain Oklahomans. . . . We forwarded his note to Prof. Kaufman, and the professor had a snappy rejoinder. . . . One word led to another, and pretty soon we wished we had never got into such a mess. . . . We had to knock off work while we tried to decide which was the funnier — the professor or the author. . . . But we were sure of one thing: that at least two midwesterners, either present or transplanted, hadn't yet let the news of war and taxes get them down. . . . Meanwhile we had Stong's threat: "I probably won't be thru Chicago again till late spring, when I usually visit Keosauqua to commune with my newer pigs. I'll give you warning."

Phil Stong.

It wasn't late spring, but rather one of those days we've all been complaining about, when he carried out his threat last week. . . . He was on his way from his home in Connecticut to his old home state of Iowa, and we bogged down when he showed up at Tribune Tower and began talking about Keosauqua and Gov. Hickenlooper. . . . We discovered that Stong is one author who talks the way he writes. . . . Some of the others scintillate on paper but not in person. . . . Any one who recalls "State Fair," with which the Iowan hit the jackpot 11 years ago, will have some idea of how he bubbles over with humor. . . . Remember Blue Boy, the Hampshire hog that was the hero of that novel?

• • •

"State Fair" was the thirteenth novel written by Stong, but it was the first one published. . . . He threw the first 12 away because he wasn't satisfied with them. . . . After the story of Blue Boy and its owners had established the author as one worth watching, he deserted the corn belt and moved east. . . . From then on his career was checkered. . . . Some of his stories clicked, and others didn't. When he was writing about his native state his readers liked it; when he wandered to other fields the readers weren't so sure. . . . Last fall, when "One Destiny" was published, nearly everybody agreed that it was the best he had done since "State Fair." . . . One reason was that its locale was Iowa, the place he knew best and therefore could write best about. . . . Thruout the years of successes and comparative failures Stong clung to his original disposition, best described by the word ebullient.

• • •

"I was still doing newspaper and magazine work, and not getting anywhere financially or otherwise, when I wrote 'State Fair,'" he told us. "The money that poured in from that one opened my eyes. I hadn't known there were people willing to pay you so much for just putting down one word after another on paper. I separated myself from the pay roll and struck out on my own. The sailing has been sort of rough at times, but I've never regretted my decision."

"In the fiction writing business doesn't the big money come from the movie rights?" we asked. "Yes," he said, "but the job of turning out short stories for the magazines pays mighty well, too. For the amount of time and energy consumed, short stories bring in much better returns than do most full length novels." "Then why don't you write more short stories?" we wanted to know. "I've tried it, but I'll be damned if I can make a go of it," he said. "Some time ago I sat down to do one for a magazine, and I couldn't stop writing it, and the first thing I knew it had reached 60,000 words. Then a book publisher grabbed it up, and my magazine story was ruined."

• • •

What does he do with his money? . . . That's not even a two dollar question. . . . Part of his royalties have gone into the purchase of a 500 acre farm in Iowa, and another part into the purchase of a country place in Connecticut. . . Of the two he prefers — quite naturally — the one in Iowa.

We left him at le Petit Gourmet. . . . We had to get back to our own farm before the blizzard closed in on us. . . . So he was going to have dinner alone before embarking for Keosauqua and thence to Des Moines for an interview with Gov. Hickenlooper. . . . We never did find out just where Keosauqua is or what he was going to ask Gov. Hickenlooper.

Dr. Fosdick's Sound Advice for World Full of Neuroses

"ON BEING A REAL PERSON," by Harry Emerson Fosdick. [Harper, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Dr. Felix A. Levy.

Every minister worthy of his salt realizes that his chief function as a servant of God and His creatures is to make religion the driving force in human life. To make faith most effective he must close the gap which separates his preaching from the distant pulpit to the pew and come into intimate and close association with his people. His pastoral function gives him his greatest opportunity, not so much when he makes his routine calls as when his parishioners come to their spiritual guide for help and advice. Nor need they come uninvited. The true minister will take every chance and use every means at his disposal to make faith effective.

The world suffers from little faith and from a weakened religious outlook. Religion is truly dynamite that blasts a whole personality; it is a leaven that can transform a disorganized bundle of desires into noble aspirations, that can take random and contradictory thoughts and transmute them into a noble idealism; that will take the fears and the terrors of the soul, subconscious as well as conscious, allay them, and bring peace to the distracted and divided personality.

This sounds like psychiatry, and much has been written, by Link, Jung, and others, of the healing power of religion in crises, sudden or prolonged in the human soul, in times of sorrow or bewilderment, in the presence of despair and in the grip of inferiority complexes. Physicians on the whole agree that religion is a salutary discipline the practice of which frequently enables the patient to return to normalcy.

Few ministers, however, have taken a leaf from psychology and applied its techniques to heal the soul that is sick and to make "better" the soul that is well. Dr. Fosdick, in collaboration with Dr. Thomas W. Salmon, a well known authority on mental hygiene, has developed a sound therapy, using religion as medicine for moral disorders and certainly in this country has pioneered in an important field—with a great measure of success, it must be added.

• • •

The stresses of the world we live in produce neuroses, with the result that many men and women break down and find no peace in their religions, nor do they get relief from their doctors' ministrations. For such persons the sympathetic pastor can really perform miracles. Thru confession of and conversation with the patient, thru the minister's tactful exploration of mental and moral history, thru prayer and other religious stimulation, the victim's moral disorganization disappears, and the broken pieces of personality that would not fit come together into the right pattern. The skilful practitioner reintegrates the lost soul, and the previous gloom in that life is changed into a brighter and more hopeful hue.

Dr. Fosdick not only gives us an account of his clinical experience and practice, but from them he has learned much which he puts, in a simple, engaging form, at the reader's disposal. The author has a remarkable facility and felicity in conveying his findings. The 10 chapters are full of sound advice and keen reflections, sprinkled with telling quotations from religious as well as medical literature.

It is a book for the ordinary intelligent man who has problems of personality. We are told how to be our best selves, how to release, under the inspiration and guidance of a sane religious outlook, our latent powers; how to transform the demonic in us into the angelic; how to get the maximum out of life and living for ourselves; how to use faith positively for good.

No review can do just credit either to Dr. Fosdick or to this fine volume. All who are heavy laden—and who of us is not or can ever completely escape being—should study these pages. A perusal will give new insight, new hope, new courage, and new faith in self, man, and God.

Hilarious Tale of an Army Private

"IT'S A CINCH, PRIVATE FINCH," by Sergts. Ralph Stein and Harry Brown. [Whittlesey House, $1.50.]

The transformation of George Finch from a mild mannered 3-A'er to a corporal-sergeant-captain-general hating private first class is the hilarious tale told by Artist Stein and Arthur Brown.

In cartoon and whimsey they trace George's amazing career from that fateful day when wife Susan hands him the draft board's "Greeting . . ." while George is in the tub. George wants to drown right there, and several times later, particularly when draftee-surfeited Corp. Crud assigns him to K. P. for the umpteenth time, he wishes he had followed that impulse.

But George, who wanted to go into the signal corps and inevitably got into the engineers, finally learns to be a soldier, even to the secret delight of Corp. Crud. Most certainly to the obvious delight of the reader.

Maj. Hartzel Spence, editor of the soldier magazine Yank, writes a foreword for this book by two of his former staff men. W. D.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Charles Collins.

YOU may think that the Great Lakes Naval Training station is no place to hunt for a new author with a title on the March list of the Macmillan company, but you will find such a character there among the enlisted men. He is W. Angus Murdoch, photographer's mate, first class, and his book will soon come to reviewers' attention as "Boom Copper: the Story of the First U. S. Mining Boom."

• • •

"Boom Copper" deals with the history of the Keweenaw peninsula of Upper Michigan. Six years before the California gold rush started there was a copper rush into this wilderness, and Mr. Murdoch has brought that story down to World War II. The publishers say: "The book is full of lusty yarns, but it is much more than that: it is a conscientious, authentic, factual account of the copper mines of the Keweenaw peninsula." It has 16 pages of pictures, all from the camera of Photographer's Mate Murdoch, who will go to a photographic school at a naval air base after he completes his "boot" [recruit] training at Great Lakes.

• • •

Mr. Murdoch, aged 38, feels old enough to be the father of most of his present shipmates, whose average age is 20. But they did not think he was old enough to write a book, because he lacks a beard and didn't arrive carrying an umbrella. After an advance copy of "Boom Copper" was passed around, however, they began addressing him as "Mister," and asking him for professional advice on the spelling, punctuation, and style of their love letters.

• • •

When the English reading world comes out of the war fog it may find that a new young man of letters has been quietly lifting his head above the storm. He is Frank Baker, represented on Coward-McCann's March list with "Sweet Chariot." This is a beautifully written novel of fantasy handled in an objective manner. Its hero, a school master, meets and captures his guardian angel and trades places with him. The human learns to fly like an angel, while his guardian double takes his heavenly ideals into the grubby life of an English public school. . . . Baker is already known to American readers by his "Miss Hargreaves," which we have missed. It seems to be a sophisticated ghost story.

• • •

When William Butler Yeats was on a lecture tour in this country he found Chicago much to his liking. Joseph Hone's new biography of the poet [Macmillan] quotes this letter by Yeats, written on Jan. 21, 1904:

"I had a charming time in Chicago, where I was entertained by a certain woman's club, lectured to it, and also to another—the Twentieth Century club. The lecture to this club was given in Mrs. Pullman's house, the widow of the man who made all the Pullman cars; and the house was decorated right thru in the style of a Pullman car. One could see that the somewhat flamboyant woodwork of the cars was an expression of his enthusiasm. I have seen a great many charming places, but I do not like the Pullman type."

• • •

If Yeats could see the site of that lecture now, and look around the neighborhood for the other charming places that he liked, he would wail like a banshee.

• • •

Among the reprints, we have selected for "ivory tower" purposes a new number in the Modern Library [Random House] called "The Consolation of Philosophy." It contains the work of that title by Boethius, written in a Roman prison in the sixth century; "The Imitation of Christ," by Thomas à Kempis, written in a Flemish monastery in the 15th century; and "Religio Medici," by Sir Thomas Browne, written in a provincial English town in the 17th century. All three are famous expressions of the meditative and contemplative life, and the book will fit into our pocket while we are house hunting for a suitable ivory tower.

• • •

Every Chicago historian—and they are numerous—is saying of some passage or other in "Giants Gone: Men Who Made Chicago," by Ernest Poole: "I wish I had heard that story when I wrote my book." Mr. Poole has a happy knack of finding excellent anecdotes and illuminating character sketches of the old First Citizens.

• • •

This column's favorite item in Mr. Poole's easy and entertaining chronicle deals with Long John Wentworth, Chicago burgomaster, and the prince of Wales, afterward Edward VII. It seems that the prince carelessly spat over the river bank and into a ship's wheat bin, whereupon Long John said:

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself, spitting on wheat that is going to be eaten by your mother, the queen."

• • •

The hotel which sheltered that royal personage during his visit is not named in "Giants Gone." Few Chicagoans know where it was, altho the places where a later Wales, afterward Edward VIII, and now the duke of Windsor, was entertained are well remembered. Windsor's grandfather had rooms in the Richmond House, at the northwest corner of South Water street and Michigan avenue.

A Memorable Tale of Trek of Acadians

"THE SEA IS SO WIDE," by Evelyn Eaton. [Harper, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Marcia Winn.

Historians in general have neglected one of the most unjust and shameful episodes in the history of North America, the deportation of the Acadians from Nova Scotia in 1755. Maybe it was because the deportation involved only 12,000 persons. Maybe it was because the British, perpetrators of the injustice, concealed it so vigilantly for so long.

Americans, schooled in childhood in the poems of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, have a vague idea of it all stemming from "Evangeline," but the average adult, altho he still can recite: "This is the forest primeval . . . the murmuring pines and the hemlock," is wont to believe it only a legendary happening which attained its first reality only in the lines of the poet.

It is of this that Evelyn Eaton, author of "Quietly My Captain Waits," treats in this new novel, prefaing it with a brief historical treatise.

The story, as it unfolds with remarkable restraint in Miss Eaton's book, is based on fact thruout; how the British first took the Acadians' guns; next ordered all men and boys to come to a mass meeting in the church at Grand Pré, for a conference; then led the men and boys under armed guards to transports based in the nearby basin; days later brought their wives and children to the ships and tossed them into filthy holds with no regard for family ties, and shipped them where the winds pleased. Some went to Virginia; some to England; most of them to Louisiana.

Miss Eaton's tale deals particularly with the Comeau family and the oldest Comeau daughter, Barbe, who fell in love with Graham Starr, a British captain who fought bitterly and futilely against the deportation. Together with her father and a servant she was landed in Virginia and there befriended by George Wythe, later a signer of the Declaration of Independence. The love story is not incidental, but you remember it only as incidental, for it is the story of the deportation, gently and magnificently told, that makes this little book memorable.

FAMOUS QUESTIONS.

Here are some famous questions that have been asked by famous poets. You don't have to give the answers—just name the poets. Before the name of the poet, in the column on the right, place the number of the question that he asked. Answers are on page 13.

1. O wind, if winter comes, can spring be far behind?
   [ ] William Blake.
2. Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
   [ ] Robert Browning.
3. How do you like to go up in a swing, up in the air so blue?
   [ ] John Keats.
4. Was it a vision, or a waking dream?
   [ ] Edwin Markham.
5. What immortal hand or eye dare frame thy frightful symmetry?

Suave Conflict of U. S. Agent and Saboteurs

"DEATH OF A SABOTEUR," by Hulbert Footner. [Harper, $2.]

Reviewed by Drexel Drake.

This contest of wits between Amos Lee Mappin, for the United States government, and a clique of murderous but highly polished saboteurs gets so smoothly under way that you settle deeply into the cushions wholly content to be beguiled from surrounding worries and concerns. In the early stages, when Mappin and Prince Lenkoran are tossing elaborate dinners in each other's direction, each fencing for a weak spot in his adversary's suave armor, there is an impression of sitting in on a well-done modernized version of some of those classic conflicts between Holmes and Prof. Moriarity.

The plot, however, takes a definitely different twist. Not long after Mappin neatly dodges the early death the prince planned for him the prince himself is murdered. Mappin meanwhile has enlisted on his side the dazzling Jocelyn d'Arcy, which merely makes her the principal suspect of murdering the prince.

Mappin's job thereafter becomes that of cleaning out Lenkoran's oily band of villains, operating on a cross-continent scale under the guise of working for Russian relief. The job proves plenty tough, as Count Deduchin is no puerile successor to the defunct Lenkoran. Excitement never lags. Mr. Footner has put some capital characters and alluring scenes into this story.

"FILE FOR RECORD," by Alice Tilton. [Norton, $2.]

Leonidas Witherall stumbles again into an exciting murder puzzle in his Massachusetts community, this time by doing nothing more than calling at the lost and found office of R. H. Haymaker's department store for his forgotten umbrella. Abruptly he is plunged into unconsciousness and awakens with a considerable lump on his head. That is still an unsolved puzzle to him when, returning from warden duty in a mysteriously staged blackout, he finds the corpse of R. H. Haymaker in his study, stabbed by a curious Samurai sword.

Certainly those are baffling elements, but they are only the beginning of adventure for Leonidas, and some odd personages cross his path and pile hazards upon him before he solves the crime. This is innocuous murder mystery, amply intricate and genially related.

• • •

"MURDER WEARS A MUMMER'S MASK," by Brett Halliday. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]

Michael Shayne in this exploit will appear at least a trifle subdued to readers familiar with earlier recordings of this private detective's tempestuous adventures in Miami. Perhaps that is to be expected as, instead of operating in his home grounds and feuding with the police, he happens to be on vacation with his young wife, Phyllis, in Central City, Colo. It is the festival and opera season and Mr. Halliday does a good job of staging.

The story doesn't exactly suffer, however, because Shayne manages to barge into a murder that has its sinister aspects, giving the detective opportunity to put his hard boiled capabilities to work profitably. There is a neatly rounded-out and exciting plot involving crooked prospectors, a villainous gambler, and a Broadway actress.

"DEATH IN THE BLACKOUT," by Anthony Gilbert. [Smith & Durrell, $2.]

Arthur Crook does one of his most competent sleuthing jobs in bomb-ridden London. Only a detective with brilliant ingenuity could have unraveled the murder of absent-minded T. Kersey's Aunt Clara, whose abandoned hat was found in her nephew's flat. Mr. Gilbert spins a thoroly interesting yarn of detecting, staged without frills.

This Photoplay Reminiscent of Silent Movies

"QUEEN OF BROADWAY"

Produced by Producer's Releasing Corporation.
Directed by Sam Newfield.
Featuring Rochelle Hudson, Buster Crabbe, and Donald Mayo.
Presented at the Oriental theater.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

KIND: Sort of an old-fashioned opus—reminiscent of the silent movies.

ACTING: Not bad at all. . . . Miss Hudson, who will be remembered best for her work in Will Rogers' pictures, has a great deal in the way of looks and charm, and does all that's humanly possible to put sparkle into a dumb little rôle. . . . Buster Crabbe works hard and to good effect and there's a precious little boy, Donald Mayo, whom you'll love.

DIALOG: Terribly trite.

DIRECTION: As good as the story permits.

STORY: The heroine is an authority on sports. . . . When she picks winners—they win. . . . Consequently her predictions are in great demand. She runs an office with lots of telephones, a devoted right hand man, and an equally devoted "bouncer." . . . One day, for reasons the picture shall reveal, she decides to adopt a small boy. . . . Tho her private life's pure as the driven snow and there's nothing really the matter with her public one, the courts decide that she is not what is so quaintly put in legal argot as "a fit person." . . . You may or may not be interested to discover how she becomes "fit." . . . Wearing the while some rather goshawful clothes.

SETS, PHOTOGRAPHY and the LIKE: Will pass.

AUDIENCE APPEAL: Depends on the audience.

See you tomorrow.

It's the Cat's Whiskers —Being Movie Prop Man

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—Being a prop man isn't glamorous exactly, according to George Sweeney, but it is fun. Prop Man George's trickiest assignment was to make a catfish out of an ordinary carp. He did it, too. He affixed some cat's whiskers to the carp by tiny strands of gut. "Things like that test a man," says Sweeney.

Film Prop Men Have an Answer for Everything

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. (AP).—In chase scenes, where one or more cars are shown pursuing another, the first car usually tows the others, to save gasoline. For war hospital scenes, sheets cut in strips serve as bandages, colored water substitutes for antiseptics, and axle grease is used for salve.

SEEN IN "THE HARD WAY"

These two clean cut looking people are Joan Leslie and Dennis Morgan, who play feature roles in "The Hard Way." Chicago.

Substitute for Icicle? Sure They Have One in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. (AP).—Priorities have even frozen icicles. And the boys at Universal studio spent a few anxious minutes before they evolved a way of getting around the problem.

For a winter resort sequence the lads were all set to fix up the set so that the audience would shiver in sympathy with the actors. Then some one discovered that one of the ingredients the fake icicles formerly used was being lovingly handled by Washington. This was silica soda, which went with cotton and paraffin into the movie icicle formula in the old days.

Well, they tried everything before discovering that a substitute could be made out of transparent paper. This, oddly enough, not only cost less to manufacture but looked more realistic than the old style icicle.

Hope's Prints Embedded for Posterity, and Jokes

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—Director Sidney Lanfield was slightly amazed at the tales arising from Bob Hope's recent footprint in the forecourt of Grauman's Chinese theater. "Was it true that you also left your nose print in the cement?" he asked Hope. "Was it true?" Hope answered. "They've just installed a French 75 in the hole!"

Actor Joining Marines to Be on Winning Side

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., (AP).—Glenn Ford says he's joining the marines as a matter of self-defense. In every one of the 15 pictures he has appeared in, he has been shown in a fight in which he's had the livin' daylights knocked out of him. "Now," says he, "I'm joining the marines so I can be on the winning side for once in my life!"

Here's Your Movie Shopping List

By Mae Tinee

Ruth Hussey and Van Heflin are great favorites with the movie goers. SO I guess the news that they'll soon be seen together in a new movie will be acceptable.

The name of their coming picture is "Tennessee Johnson." The story is based on the biography of Andrew Johnson, the uneducated tailor's apprentice who became president of the United States following Lincoln's assassination. . . . Van Heflin, of course, plays Johnson. Miss Hussey is Mrs. Johnson and then look who's here—Lionel Barrymore! As Thaddeus Stevens, Johnson's political opponent! Others featured in the cast are Marjorie Main, J. Edward Bromberg, William Farnum—and a number of other beloved veterans. . . . One of the smallest historical landmarks ever constructed for a motion picture was the tailor shop of Johnson, which is now a memorial in Greenville, Tenn.

• • •

"Three Hearts for Julia" co-stars Ann Sothern and Melvyn Douglas. It's another opus with a foreign correspondent as man of its hour. This f. c. returns home to find his pretty wife deeply interested in music AND two musicians. And, judging from the press sheet, from here on things get foolisher and foolisher. . . . I understand that Mr. Douglas goes in a bit for caveman tactics.

AT ORIENTAL

Ralph Bellamy to Appear in N. Y. Play, 'Roadside'

After an absence of 13 years, Ralph Bellamy has been persuaded by Theron Bamberger to return to Broadway for the latter's forthcoming production of "Roadside," the collaboration by James Gow and Arnaud D'Usseau formerly known as "Suffer Little Children." Mr. Bellamy will appear as a midwestern college professor who is the guardian of a 12 year old German refugee. Elliott Nugent will direct.

This Town Called Hollywood - - - - - - - -

By Philip Scheuer

Young John and Dorothy Hampton, as nice a couple as you could know, recently celebrated their first anniversary, not as man and wife [they've been happily married eight years], but as motion picture exhibitors. Together they run a real theater, one unique in all these United States; they call it the Movie and describe it parenthetically as "the show that John and very little 'Jack' built."

John did build it; not with his own hands, but out of his own head. He incorporated all the ideas he'd ever had about what a theater should be like; staggered seating, bowl-shaped floor, acoustical sound "by reflection as well as by absorption," and—silent pictures. Seating only 250, admission 5 cents [children] and 11 cents [adults], the Movie stands, like a white sailed ship that has come to rest, on Fairfax avenue below Melrose boulevard in Hollywood. Its policy is, additionally—"closed Sundays. Shows at 7 and 9 p. m. No double features. No newsreels. No screeno. No bank night. No lotteries. Clean pictures always—fun for the family!"

• • •

The trouble is—or was at first, as John admitted—that members of most families don't see eye to eye on silent films. John tried carrying the problem direct to his customers, displaying a handsome scroll [he paints all his own, having been an advertiser's assistant back in Oklahoma City] which set forth the case as follows:

"To most folks over 30, silent pictures recall the happiest memories of their younger days. . . . To the young folks under 20, silent pictures are a never-ending novelty. They are both amazed and amused at the acting of the stars of yesteryear and the ways people behaved and dressed. Reaction is likely to be expressed in wisecracks, horse laughs, wild cheers and loud applause."

• • •

The two groups, Hampton hazarded, "will not mix." So he dedicated two nights a week to the kids and their horse laughs. But that didn't work either: The adults kept coming on those nights and the kids on other nights. Lately, he's noticed, the young generation is getting the knack of silents and doesn't whoop and holler the way it used to. He attributes this not so much to any new-found tolerance among the smaller fry as to the fact that the old flickers had something the talkies lack. "Their appeal is more to the emotions, less to the intellect," is how John dopes it out. "Why, the kids even prefer silent serials to the present ones," he added.

John is an ardent silent fan himself, but he doesn't overlook music as an accompaniment to the chest heavings and chases which fill his screen. I saw "Spangles," a Universal feature [1926] with Marian Nixon, Pat O'Malley and Hobart Bosworth, last week, and marveled not only at Spangles, a circus performer with a heart of gold and the brains of a pigeon, but at the "sound track."

For it wasn't a track at all, but John manipulating records and turntables in the projection room and never missing a cue.

How he does it is his own little secret. [Anyhow, he wouldn't let me inside.] He also operates both projectors, keeps an eye on the house, cuts and splices film [it took three mutilated prints of "The Phantom of the Opera" to assemble one that was finally whole], and literally makes the lobby displays. In short, he runs the joint—with Dorothy in the box-office and one assistant—"when you can get one"—to help with the minor chores. Finally, he and Dorothy live upstairs.

"We make a living," he said simply. He picks up what old prints he can around the country—from independent exchanges, private owners, anybody—and manages somehow to come up with a new balanced bill every Thursday. Most prints and negatives have long since been scrapped, he admits sadly, or melted down for their silver nitrate content; and great stars like Chaplin won't part with their classics because they cherish hopes of reviving 'em themselves, as Charlie did "The Gold Rush."

• • •

John still thinks there's a place for pantomime pictures. "If the same improvements that we've seen in talkies were applied to silents," he said, "they'd be really great." Bitten by the movie bug, as he puts it, early, he and a brother, Gilbert, got hold of a battered projector for $8 and gave performances in their living room from 1923 until 1926 "when mother and dad decided to remodel a house nearly wrecked by 75 to 100 kids every Friday night!" John wangled a job with the exchange that had been supplying him films, afterward sponsoring more Friday night movies at the Epworth Methodist church. Still later he sold bankrupt stocks, designed theater posters, and barnstormed with silent reels in schools and churches.

The Movie's weekly grosses [possible top, less tax, $300; probable average, $150] don't make the pages of the trade papers, but the customers are satisfied. One comes from as far as San Diego whenever he gets leave. I was an easy convert myself. Next week: Pola Negri in "The Spanish Dancer." [Adv.]

IN NEW ROLE

Here's One Scene That Akim Won't Forget Very Soon

HOLLWOOD, Cal. (AP).—Remember the scene in "For Whom the Bell Tolls" in which Pablo led a murderous mob which killed the officials and aristocracy of an entire village? The story is told by Pilar and is a sequence of sheer horror.

Well, it was filmed the other day and, tho it will look thoroly and revoltingly realistic, no one was hurt.

It was all very simple: Pablo and his gang were to murder 8 or 10 persons and toss their bodies over a cliff. On the screen, this is what you will see.

But, beneath the cliff was a life net padded with mattresses. The actors dropped about 10 feet and bounced into this.

The only casualty, in fact, occurred when Akim Tamiroff, playing Pablo, decided his fellow thespians were having too much fun. He decided to try the circus act himself. But he forgot to remove his revolver.

The imprint of the gun, he swears, will be a permanent memento of the scene.

Movies Create Illusions by Use of Miniatures

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—Whenever you see bridges, automobiles, airplanes, buildings, and other seemingly large objects involved in spectacular crashes in the movies, the illusion usually is created thru use of miniatures, with the automobiles measuring only a few inches in length and the bridges or steamships up to 40 feet.

Boarding House Days Give Writer Amusing Material

By Harry Hansen.

NEW YORK.

A NEW writer named Rosemary Taylor was being introduced to New York's literary whirl at the One-Two-Three club, so I went over to pay my respects. The party was being given by her literary agent, Lurton Blassingame, and her publisher, Whittlesey House. There was a tremendous crush around the bar and the drinks were setting the hosts back a trifle. The author was nowhere near the bar, but I finally spotted her because she was wearing orchids. An author always wears orchids at her party; no publisher would dare omit this traditional courtesy.

It turned out that Mrs. Taylor's book, which will appear in April, is called "Chicken Every Sunday: My Life with Mother's Boarders," which is, I think, a perfect selling title, for it tells exactly what one may expect to read and warns off people who raise poultry. Mrs. Taylor told me that she had begun writing about the amusing antics of her mother's boarders thinking she had an article for a magazine, but the more she recalled the larger the manuscript grew, and finally it became a book. It is, I understand, both amusing and frank; Mrs. Taylor said she was determined to tell the truth and would start right on the first page. This I haven't seen, so I reserve judgment. The boarding house was in Tucson, where Mrs. Taylor's mother lives, and she was going there soon after the party. Her husband is in the Canadian army.

A number of friends recalled that chicken on Sunday was the rule in their childhood, but one complained that she never got much of it. "We dined at my grandfather's," said she, "and he was a minister and always entertaining the bishop. The bishop got all the white meat, and, I may add, always accepted it."

Saroyan's Book Puzzles New York.

When you read a book one day and see it as a motion picture the next you have a pretty good basis for determining just how the two differ. In the past I often have found Hollywood taking great liberties with a text and yet the Hollywood workers will tell you that they have followed the book faithfully.

William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy" gives us all a chance to see just what happens. It may not, however, be a good test, for, thanks to the author, the book was an excellent scenario. I had just reviewed it when I went to the movie preview. New York gave a mixed reception to the book, for it is difficult for men trained in naturalist ways of writing to accept the illusions and surface values that make a romantic novel or movie. Reviewers who all their lives had approved the writings of James T. Farrell, Sinclair Lewis, Theodore Dreiser, John Dos Passos and many of the younger naturalists had a hard time estimating the merits of Saroyan's writing. I had approved it, partly because I do not think an author has to perform a surgical operation every time he puts simple, friendly people into a book.

I was not prepared, however, for the effect the picture had on me. I thought the characters excellent, but the sentiment became cloying to me before the end. There was simply too much good will all around. I credited this to the kindness and generosity of Saroyan himself and mentioned this to a theatrical producer who has watched Saroyan at work. "Kindness, indeed!" said he. "Did you ever see Saroyan work his actors in a theater? I've seen him put little kids like these thru their parts at rehearsal for 12 hours at a stretch without the slightest feeling. Let me tell you this: As an author he is full of good will, but as a man he can be a terrible taskmaster."

Oldest Hokum Liked Best.

A New York first night audience has in it many professionals—writers, editors, producers. I am always interested in their reactions. The gopher and Ulysses won their hearts at the start. The manager's girl bored them to tears. What did they laugh at most heartily? At the schoolroom scene, in which Homer gets ready to punch the nice boy who is making up to the girl Homer loves. And that is one of the oldest incidents in the history of stories about boys.

One Army Book That's Not Funny.

Why should we always expect stories of camp life to be excruciatingly funny? I'll leave that to students of behavior while I indorse the sane point of view and first rate writing of young Pvt. E. J. Kahn Jr., who is our chief source of information about life in the armed services in the New Yorker. If you read "The Army Life," published last fall by Simon & Schuster, you will know what I mean.

Kahn told just what a selectee did—sensible stuff, not merely blunders. He told how he felt the first time he shot a gun, what the kick was like; he also told what camp does for a man. He writes with great facility and his articles are piling up on the desk of the New Yorker's editor, while another new book is in the offing. He must be the women's ideal soldier, for he looks like a boy they would like to mother, with a skin that seemed never to have known the touch of a razor. He has been home for the customary furlough and magazine editors have been thronging about; if he can fill their orders while fighting for his country he probably will be able to pay that life insurance premium that he thought, according to "The Army Life," he could never cover with his private's pay. He has stepped up a bit and is now a warrant officer.

New Works from the Chiangs.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's addresses, as well as those of her husband, the generalissimo, are going to be published in a sort of companionate edition. The house of John Day, which issues all of Pearl S. Buck's books, will publish two books of almost identical size and appearance. "All We Are and All We Have" will contain the talks by Chiang and "We Chinese Women" the talks by Mme. Chiang.

More Fame for the Chicago.

The Art alliance scheduled an evening devoted to the Rivers of America series, which will have been held when you read this. Stephen Vincent Benet was to speak and your correspondent was to tell Philadelphians why a body of water that flows backward and is navigable only five miles is more important than the Tiber, the Rubicon, the Spree and the Wapsipinicon, known to Iowans as the Wapsie. I'll not only prove it; I'll make them curious to read about it—and you know which river that is.

'Life in Putty Knife Factory' Is First Rate Entertainment

"LIFE IN A PUTTY KNIFE FACTORY," by H. Allen Smith. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]
"PROPHET FROM EXPERIENCE," by Jack Iams. (Morrow, $2.50.)

Reviewed by Arno L. Bader.

Of these two new books of humor, my guess is that readers will laugh more with H. Allen Smith and his "Life in a Putty Knife Factory" than with Jack Iams and his "Prophet from Experience." Smith belongs to the lusty, rough and ready American tradition of humor, whereas Iams is more polished. But of the two Smith is funnier.

H. Allen Smith, author of "Low Man on a Totem Pole," is a journalist, ace interviewer, and plain man with no frills who, as he says, "likes to shoot off his typewriter." His "Life in a Putty Knife Factory" is a collection of anecdotes and swiftly drawn character portraits, mostly of prominent people whom the author has interviewed. Mixed in for variety are reminiscences of his childhood, his early days as a reporter, and his experiences as a columnist, radio writer, and man-about-bars. The book is somewhat uneven, but on the whole is first rate entertainment. Smith can be genuinely funny. He has an enthusiastic disrespect for his great personages, and a feeling for the absurd situation, the picturesque detail, and for the timing of his stories.

• • •

Part of the fun is learning about Smith. Like every humorist he talks a good deal about himself. He is mildly Rabelaisian and likes an off-color story if it's fairly subtle. He hates snobbery and gentility, and associates these with people who wear tailored suits and say "Yes?" when they answer the telephone. He likes practical jokes, good or corny. And he is something of a Philistine, a "cultural hard head," as he himself says. He considers Westbrook Pegler one of the great writers of our day despite his possession of "a foggy noodle," but he keeps James Joyce's "Ulysses" in his clothes closet to drive out the moths. His favorite people are H. L. Mencken, Fred Allen, Thorne Smith, and Tallulah Bankhead, and he tells some good stories about them.

In general, what we learn about Smith makes us think of Mark Twain. The man and the manner are in the tradition.

• • •

Of Iams we do not learn nearly so much. His "Prophet from Experience" is a humorous novel in which Hylobates Hoolock, a hermit of 15 years' standing, is discovered by Birdseye, a weekly magazine. He is brought to New York as a news stunt, and immediately falls into a series of difficulties which involve the editor of Birdseye, a married couple on his staff, and Hylobates' former Latin teacher, as well as the New York police. When the plot becomes sufficiently complicated, the author untangles it by sending Hylobates back to his old teacher, the married pair back into each other's arms, and the editor back to his editing.

Iams achieves some neat satire on American journalism and politics, and on morals, both conventional. He can create farcical scenes and characters, good dialog, and a big city world of newsmen, bars, double talk, and police. Yet somehow it fails to add up. What should be a light, humorous story moves haltingly and at times heavily.

"Prophet from Experience" aims higher than "Life in a Putty Knife Factory." But Smith succeeds better than Iams, perhaps because Smith is more pleasantly mad.

Russian Life as Viewed by Envoy's Wife

"MOSCOW MYSTERY," by Ivy Litvinoff. [Coward-McCann, $2.50.]

Reviewed by William Shinnick.

Mme. Litvinoff, wife of the Russian ambassador to the United States, wrote this workmanlike mystery story about 1926. The publishers suggest that it is something more than a who-done-it, and that it should be given the nobler stature of a novel of Russian life. It is hard to agree with this theory; our guess is that it's at least 95 per cent mystery. And what's wrong with a good mystery yarn placed under the walls of the Kremlin?

One Pavlov, a small business man who has a hankering for the companionship of ballet girls, is snicked right out of this life when somebody sticks a Caucasian dagger in his jugular vein.

• • •

They find his body in his Moscow apartment, and the district procurator, Nikulin, begins looking about for the killer. The dagger is identified as belonging to the ballerina Tamara, who had gone by invitation to Pavlov's lair the night before. Nikulin, who seems to be something like an assistant state's attorney, puts her into the district jail and keeps her there as he wills in the absence of any writ of habeas corpus.

Just the same, Nikulin pursues other folk who might have daggered Pavlov. In the quest he has the aid of Julius Caesarovich Itkin, the "highest paid correspondent in Moscow," who gets most of his information from a troupe of the wild boys whose treatment—by the Russian people and government—aroused the indignation of the rest of the world some years ago. Eventually the killer is caught and Tamara goes back to her work.

• • •

It is interesting to note that Mme. Litvinoff, who is an Englishwoman, makes her Russian policemen the same dunderheaded flatfoots that are so beloved of American and British detective story brewers, but don't seem to exist in real life.

In a preface, the authoress has explained that the story was written ten years ago and that things are different now. Tamara would be living, not in a shoemaker's shop, but in a fine apartment, she says, and the wild boys have been made into good citizens by a government that at length came to see how mistreated these gamins were.

An absorbing story of early Colonial refugees by the author of Quietly My Captain Waits

In this story of Barbe Coméau and the exiled Acadians, Evelyn Eaton has vividly recreated one of the most fascinating yet little-known aspects of our Colonial history. How Barbe settled at Williamsburg, Virginia, and was swept up in the strange and exciting life of the Royal colony, make up a tale, told with sympathy and dramatic force, which is rich and stirring reading.

Helen Hayes Opens Drama, 'Harriet', in New York

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" Author Well Portrayed

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK [Special]. — Harriet Elizabeth Beecher Stowe, being "the little lady who made a great war," and Helen Hayes, being the little actress who has made many a little play great, these two form a happy combination in the new biographical drama called "Harriet."

Helen Hayes.

It is the story of the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" told sympathetically. It gives Miss Hayes generous opportunity for the expression of her most charming gifts as a woman and as an actress. It should serve her for two, and possibly three, seasons as the sort of stage vehicle favored actresses love to propel.

Now that Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements have cleverly turned the trick, many observers are given to wondering why it was not done before. Why have the dramatists, always hard pressed for subjects, heretofore slighted the little lady who wrote a simple story about a lovable old slave and started a national conflagration with it?

The answer is probably that, viewed from afar, or even quite closely, the life story of Harriet Beecher Stowe was not of itself especially exciting nor promisingly dramatic, save for her one great success. She was, and still is in the play, a simple, likable soul who attended mostly to her knitting and let her booming relatives do the world's crusading.

She married a theological pedant named Calvin Stowe, and Calvin, being a helpless sort of individual, kept her extremely busy as a combination housewife, mother and guardian. She had six children the first years of their married life, and there was not a great deal of time for "scribbling," as she called her short-story efforts. She had none of the overbearing self-confidence of the other Beechers.

• • •

She let her sister, Catherine, march up and down the country shouting for women's rights. She let her wordy parent, the Rev. Lyman Beecher, shout his head off about heaven. She was content to read of the excitement caused by her brother, Henry Ward Beecher, when he sold pretty slave girls in the pulpit of his Brooklyn church, or pretended to sell them, for amounts sufficient to buy their freedom. [Incidentally, it is slyly insisted in the play that they had to be very pretty slave girls, else Henry wasn't interested.] And she let her uncles, William and Edward, work themselves into a succession of lathers explaining how God wanted the world run.

It was not until the children, and particularly her young son, Freddie, came running home in a state of hysteria, telling of the beatings of colored folk they had witnessed; and specifically, not until the slave, Sukey, whom the Beechers were trying to smuggle thru the underground to Canada, was grabbed from Harriet's living room, that she decided to finish a sketch about Uncle Tom she had started and put aside months before.

Interestingly that sketch, which Mrs. Stowe later explained had come to her in a vision in church, with the names of the characters attached, and all the details of an aged Negro being beaten to death by two other slaves under the orders of a villainous Simon Legree, that sketch eventually became one of the concluding chapters of the book.

Once she starts on "Uncle Tom," however, she writes feverishly in one of those typical stages scenes suggesting that authors customarily work in the living room, surrounded by the family and innumerable other distractions. This was in 1851, 10 years before the firing on Fort Sumter.

It was the success of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" that brought Harriet Beecher Stowe out of the kitchen, as it were. Run originally as a serial in The National Era, it was probably the most marvelously timed publication in literary history. Large sections of a public torn with abolitionist and anti-abolitionist arguments at every turn of its daily lives awaited each released chapter expectantly, even feverishly; cried with old Tom and little Eva, laughed with Topsy, fought and bled in defense of its favorites. And little Mrs. Stowe, with no exact idea of how her story was to end, wrote on and on, missing, it has been written, but one deadline in all the months the story continued.

The Beecher family wasn't very approving of the effort. It was not considered exactly ladylike for women to be mixed up with controversial subjects in those days. And at least one publishing company refused to publish the book when it was completed. Another firm, Jewett & Co., however, took it on and published it just 91 years ago this month. They sold 3,000 copies the first day, 20,000 the first month, 350,000 the first year, in America alone.

The book's success, too, has a marked effect in the play. "Until she wrote the book Harriet Beecher Stowe always was referred to as the wife of the distinguished Prof. Stowe," Lyman Beecher Stowe, the author's grandson, declared the other day. "After she wrote the book he was referred to as Harriet Beecher Stowe's husband."

As the Stowe fortunes brighten they acquire stuffier and more expensive homes, settling finally in a "mansion" in Andover, Mass. Harriet goes on with her writings, altho nothing she writes attracts much attention. She also takes on a little of the self-satisfaction of the other Beechers. She becomes a pronounced crusader in liberty's cause, criticizes President Lincoln, referring to him on one occasion as "that baboon in the White House," and she probably would be more than a little smug if she were not the heroine of a play.

• • •

The children grow up; Freddie goes to war; Lowell Denton flirts with the twins, Hatty and Eliza, but marries their younger sister, Georgie, and mother goes to visit Mr. Lincoln in the White House. It is then that he takes her small hand in his great big one and says: "So this is the little lady who made a great war!"

After that Harriet Stowe continued her crusading for freedom with increased zest, and spoke pleasantly of the President. She was now ready to make a speech for any one of the four freedoms at the dropping of a cue, and fulfilled her years eloquently and completely.

Grandson Lyman Beecher, above quoted, insists that his grandfather, Calvin, was really a great scholar and a wise and witty gentleman, and not the absent-minded tho learned dub the play makes him. It was Calvin, insists Lyman, who, speaking in the Horace Greeley campaign, said: "The Democratic party has been no more reformed by swallowing Horace Greeley than was the whale made a prophet by swallowing Jonah."

• • •

Miss Hayes' Harriet is one of her best characterizations in that it conveys perfectly the gentleness and lovableness of the simple little home body who became a great authoress without losing any suggestion of the force of character that must have been a Harriet Beecher attribute.

Rhys Williams plays husband Calvin, Jane Seymour the crusading Catherine, and Sydney Smith the booming Henry. The Wade twins, Betty and Lenore, are the Stowe twins, Eliza and Hatty, and Robert Harrison is the Rev. Lyman. These are all neatly etched characterizations. Elia Kazan did the directing.

Since that time, however, her admirers have seen her in the motion picture, "Tales of Manhattan." The stage show also offers Marty May, last seen here in "Best Foot Forward," and the Four Franks, who appeared in the tabloid version of the same musical when it was shown in eastern film houses. Future attractions at the Chicago are: Week beginning March 19, Jan Savitt and his orchestra, and Hal Le Roy, dancer; week beginning March 26, Charlie Spivak and his orchestra; week beginning April 2, Tito Guizar, Latin American singer, and Joe Reichman and his orchestra.

Notes of the Theater

Last warning: This is the final week for the only two plays in town which deal seriously with the war. "The Eve of St. Mark" concludes an engagement of nine weeks at the Harris theater Saturday evening, moving on to other cities between here and the Atlantic seaboard which have not yet seen Maxwell Anderson's soldier drama. "Cry Havoc," Allen R. Kenward's play about volunteer nurses on Bataan, ends its allotted term of three weeks on the same evening, and leaves the Studebaker for a tour of Theater guild subscription cities which will keep the company busy until June. These departures leave both theaters untenanted, with no bookings in the near propect. Delays in the touring schedules of "Let's Face It" and "Uncle Harry" and the decision to omit Paul Muni's tour in the revival of "Counselor-at-law" have left local theater managers with empty houses on their hands. In so changeable a world as that of the theater it is rash to make sweeping predictions, since they are likely to prove wrong before press time, but it now looks dangerously as tho there may not be any additions to the playgoing calendar until Easter time.

• • •

"Ice-Capades of 1943," the last of the season's big ice extravaganzas, begins a limited engagement of undefined extent tonight at the Chicago Arena, 400 East Erie street. The length of the show's stay depends on Hollywood contracts still in process of negotiation. Chester Hale directed the spectacle, and the $40,000 worth of costumes was designed by Freddy Wittop, now in the army, and formerly the dance partner of Argentinita under the alias of Frederico Rey. The chief production numbers are "Toys for Sale," "Gypsy Rhapsody," "Design for Victory" [a salute to the United Nations], "Minuet in Gold," "Drums on Parade," "The Dance Lesson," "Dancing on Ice," and the "Ice Ca-Pony Ballet." Important featured skaters are Donna Atwood and Vera Hruba. Joe Jackson Jr. perpetuates the classic comic act of his late father.

• • •

Sandra Tucker is a relatively new member of the lush cast of "Good Night, Ladies" at the Blackstone. She joined the company a few weeks ago when Gayle Mellott departed for a vacation in Hollywood; and it now appears uncertain whether Miss Mellott will return. Miss Tucker is a former Earl Carroll beauty, and was featured two years ago—when she was 19—in Carroll's show at his Hollywood restaurant. Ambitious to make a success on the legitimate stage, she expresses herself about the movies with a tone of contempt. "Screen work," she says, "is too lazy for my energies."

Lenore Ulric, who is renewing her hold upon the Chicago audience as the Russian sniper in "The Doughgirls" at the Selwyn, is a product of Milwaukee, like her celebrated fellow-citizen, the singer Hildegarde. Miss Ulric first saw the light of day in New Ulm, Minn., it is true, but Milwaukee was the scene of her education, and it was in Milwaukee that she made her first professional stage appearance, in the title rôle of a stock company's nonmusical presentation of "Carmen." Her successes here led not to Broadway but to the movies, right here in Chicago in the old Essanay studio. In 1915, five years after the "Carmen" experience, she finally made her way to New York, where she won critical praise in her first play there, "The Mark of the Beast." Her ability won the attention of the late David Belasco, who forthwith signed her to a long term contract. A list of successes followed, all produced under the Belasco banner. "Tiger Rose" and "The Son-Daughter" led to "Kiki," perhaps her most famous hit, in which she acted for three seasons in New York and on tour. The nearest rival to "Kiki" as a popular triumph was "Lulu Belle," which occupied the actress for more than two years. In 1938 she played Martha in Max Reinhardt's Hollywood al fresco production of Goethe's "Faust." Her most recent appearance in the Chicago region was at the Michiana Shores summer theater in 1941, in "Idiot's Delight."

Burton Holmes, whose audiences have been even larger than usual in his 50th anniversary season, concludes his series of five lectures this week in Orchestra hall with a motor tour to "Glorious Glacier Park." The travelogs will be presented on Wednesday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoon. On Friday, March 26, the first lecture of the series, on "Charm Centers of the Old South," will be repeated.

• • •

"Little Black Sambo," the children's play at the Goodman, will receive two final performances on Saturday, in the morning and in the afternoon. "The Elves and the Shoemaker" will be the next children's attraction, opening Saturday afternoon, March 27. The current play for adults, presented nightly except Monday at the Goodman, is the touching drama of schoolgirls in Switzerland at the outbreak of war, "Letters to Lucerne." The closing performance will be given on Saturday.

• • •

Howard Bay, the scenic designer of "The Eve of St. Mark," has built himself a remarkable reputation in only five years of professional work. His first designs were made for the Federal Theater project productions of "Chalk Dust" and ". . . one-third of a nation." In the Broadway big time he has created the settings, among other plays, for "The Little Foxes," "The Corn Is Green," "Uncle Harry," "The Moon Is Down," and "The Great Big Doorstep." Last year he designed seven shows—more than any other professional designer—and was named Variety magazine's choice as the outstanding scenic designer of the year.

This Home-Mixed Cough Syrup Is Most Effective

Easily Mixed. Needs No Cooking.

Cough medicines usually contain a large quantity of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Take 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. Or use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It makes a real saving because it gives you about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

This is actually a surprisingly effective, quick-acting cough relief. Promptly, you feel it taking hold. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes and makes breathing easy. You've never seen anything better for prompt and pleasing results.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Professor Cites Achievements of Russian Soldier

Traces Victory Records Back to 1242 Battle

By the Rev. John Evans.

Prof. Paul Haensel of Northwestern university has described the Russian soldier as traditionally one of the world's best. Speaking with historical perspective, the professor, who until 1928 had served some time as dean of the University of Moscow, also spoke from first hand knowledge.

"One of the greatest achievements of the Russian soldier occurred in the year 1242, when a Russian army under King Alexander Nevsky, decisively defeated a German offensive against Russia," Prof. Haensel said. "The soviet government, on July 29, 1942, recognized this achievement by creating the Alexander Nevsky medal, made of silver, for the highest display of bravery."

Prof. Haensel pointed out that even the city of Berlin had been stormed by the Russians in the 18th century, and that on Oct. 9, 1760, a Russian army entered Berlin after Frederick the Great was defeated at Kunersdorf. The keys to the city were turned over to the Russian commander, and are now kept in Kazan cathedral, Leningrad.

"Under Gen. Suvorov, the Russians were the first to defeat Napoleon's army as early as 1799 at Trebi and Novi, in Italy," Prof. Haensel recalled. "Suvorov led more battles than probably any other man in history and was never defeated; an accomplishment above that of Alexander of Macedonia, Julius Caesar, or Napoleon."

Last year, the soviet government created a Suvorov decoration for brilliant achievements of commanders. The World War I. record of Russia, often overlooked, was recalled by Prof. Haensel. He said that despite reverses, Russian armies took 2,200,000 prisoners during the first 39 months of the war, whereas the allies captured only one-sixth of that number in the 51 months of the war. Russia, he added, captured two and a half times as many big guns as the allies.

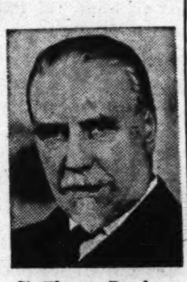
CLASSICAL RECORDINGS

By Claudia Cassidy.

To Chicagoans, nowadays, any new recording that bears the imprint of the late Frederick Stock is worth investigating. But it remains a recurring disappointment to dip into a new batch of records and come up with something trivial like the Glazounoff waltzes when we might just as easily have had Brahms' First Symphony. However, not to carp too loudly at fate, here they are, both of them, the innocuous concert waltz in F and its equally inane mate in D, played by the Chicago Symphony orchestra smoothly, serenely and silkily under Mr. Stock's direction [Columbia X-232. Two 12 inch records].

• • •

With a shortage of record materials, you might not expect two sets of Sibelius' Seventh Symphony within a month, but Sir Thomas Beecham's with the New York Philharmonic - Symphony [Columbia M-524. Three 12 inch records] just arrived to challenge Victor's album recorded by Vladimir Golschmann and the St. Louis orchestra. Both are sound recordings of a short and powerful work. Beecham's is wrapped in legend and sometimes more subtly played. Golschmann's has more drive and drama, and, considering the symphony, I lean in his direction. If you can't make up your mind any other way, consider Sibelius' strange music for Maeterlinck's Melisande. If you happen to enjoy it, it takes up the sixth side of Beecham's set. He manages it by filling each record side full to the brim.



Sir Thomas Beecham.

When Paul Robeson sings Russian songs the deep melancholy of his half voice sounds so much like Chaliapin's, it seems a pity he never gets a chance to sing "Boris Godunoff." At the moment he is concerned with "Songs of Free Men" [Columbia M-534. Four 10 inch records]. With Lawrence Brown at the piano he sings eight songs of revolt, of defiance, of refusal to bear injustice. They include Red army and soviet marching songs, the "Moorsoldaten" from Nazi prison camps, the "Four Insurgent Generals" of Loyalist Spain, "Joe's Birthday Song" from Blitzstein's "No for an Answer," and "Joe Hill," a compassionate ballad by Earl Robinson and Alfred Hayes about a labor organizer who was killed but didn't die. In the Russian, German, and Spanish songs, Mr. Robeson sings an English translation before reverting to the original. You can understand him, and he can sing.

Current Music News

Jascha Heifetz will be this week's soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra, playing Sir Edward Elgar's Violin Concerto under the direction of Hans Lange at Orchestra hall Thursday evening and Friday afternoon. Mr. Heifetz had been booked to appear in December, but was forced to postpone the date because of illness. His choice of the Elgar concerto comes as a near novelty, because it has been played during but three of the orchestra's 52 seasons, the 21st, 31st, and 48th.

Jascha Heifetz.

An actual novelty on the subscription repertory is Robert Sanders' Little Symphony, composed in 1937 by the Chicagoan who had previously been associated with Mr. Lange in the work of the Civic orchestra. Still another work which rates as rare is Handel's Concerto for Orchestra with Organ, D major, given a single hearing nine years ago.

Nelson Eddy, popular baritone of screen and radio, returns to the Civic Opera house this evening to sing his annual recital, which is sold out as usual, even to the orchestra pit. Mr. Eddy, whose press agent says he likes to sing, farm, chop wood, swim, fish, play tennis, ride, model in clay, collect pewter and Chinese ceramics and go to baseball games, will confine himself to singing, with a touch of acting. His program ranges from arias of Handel and Mozart to a Russian group chosen from Gretchaninoff, Dargomijsky, and Rachmaninoff and songs in English which include Erich Wolff's beautiful and rarely sung "You Are So Young." Theodore Paxson, Mr. Eddy's accompanist, will play a group by Debussy.

Book News and Reviews

Tense Novel of Life on the Great Lakes

"NOVEMBER STORM," by Jay McCormick. [Doubleday,Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Maureen Daly.

Sean Riley, manly and muscular young orphan, drifts along the waterfront, gets a berth on a Great Lakes freighter, and finds himself tossed into a world of men waging a lonely struggle against life.

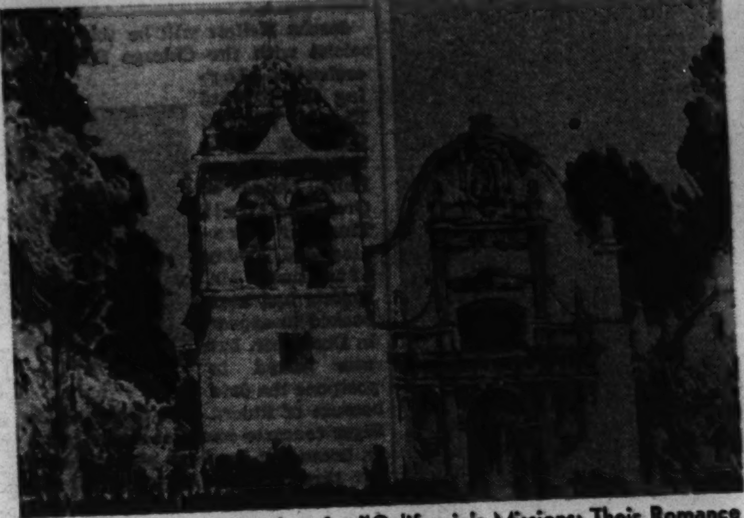
• • •

The characters are typical freighters, hard muscled, wind browned, each life agonized by a particular dread. Capt. Starr, who was tormented by a quiet loneliness; Burgee, crippled mate, muttering Shakespeare and howling rage against the twisted futility of his life; Anchor Larsen, simple minded and strong bodied, gnawed by the thought of his wife's infidelity, and Weasel, tough but callow and afraid of life, the victim of Anchor's obsession.

And on shore was Whitey, Sean's first friend, an albino gambler and bookmaker whose lungs were racked with disease; Whitey, wise in the ways of the city, whose physical and spiritual degeneration brings Sean his first responsibility.

• • •

It is a story swift, tense, and dramatic, yet sensitive and poetic in its atmosphere; written with the taste of sweat, the ache of muscles, and the dull throb of calloused palms; with the thoughtful, listening realization of winds that whined about the lake boat, high with loneliness and silent fog that curled white fingers around the smoke stack and lay flat and thick along the deck. It is a story of ordinary men preoccupied inwardly with their life struggles, peaked by a disaster that was a climax in the lives of all the characters.



A drawing by E. H. Suydam for "California's Missions: Their Romance and Beauty," by Hildegarde Hawthorne. [To be published March 26 by Appleton-Century.]

Belden Pens a Hair-Curling Story of Disaster in Burma

"RETREAT WITH STILWELL," by Jack Belden. [Knopf, $3.]

Reviewed by Arthur Frederic Otis.

Remember how you read with pride, about a year ago, that Lt. Gen. Joseph E. Stilwell had been put in charge of the Chinese armies in Burma? "Now," you said triumphantly to yourself, "we'll see things begin to happen! There will be an end of British muddling around, and the little monkey men from Japan will find out what's what!" Then you watched your newspaper for news of victory—and read only of defeat after defeat, until finally Burma was completely in possession of the Japanese.

Jack Belden was there. He saw the whole bitter show from start to finish, and was one of 115 pitiful survivors who struggled thru steaming jungles and sun parched wastes, battling malaria and thirst, hunger and traitorous natives, until, under Stilwell's leadership, they reached India and safety.

• • •

If you are one of the many who wondered at the lack of attention paid by London and Washington to this theater of war, which could have had much to do with the success of our arms in Asia—and if you read of Churchill and Roosevelt's Four Freedoms program with a sidelong glance at Burma and India—this book is your meat.

Call it a "significant document" if you like. Refer to it as a "magnificent record" if you care to. It is both of those, beyond doubt. But, first and foremost, "Retreat with Stilwell" is a rip snorting, spine tingling, hair curling story, and as such it is quite likely to hold you spellbound.

Because Jack Belden is a story teller of exceptional ability. This is his first book. It leaves the reader feeling that he doesn't want to miss the next one. But it is rough on the emotions.

• • •

You will boil with indignation at the stupidity of the British in refusing China's offer of troops while there was still time for them to save Burma. You will writhe at the barbarous treatment of prisoners by the Japs and their misguided Burmese stooges. And you'll stand beside the young Irish artillery officer as he trains his guns on two villages lately occupied by the enemy and blows them to kingdom come—a woefully small triumph, but packing a world of satisfaction.

Those seven weary Gloucestermen who guarded the oil wells at Yenangyaung until Foster, the American demolition expert, dynamited the whole great plant in the face of the Japanese advance—they become fast friends of yours. And the footsore Inniskilling troops who kidded Belden about the planes official Washington didn't send.

• • •

But it's futile to try to pick out the high spots, because the whole story is a high spot—a peak in the flaming narratives that have come out of this war. It has less of stark horror and more of genuine human sympathy than most, with smiles scattered not too infrequently to soften its unavoidable bitterness.

Without intending to toss adjectives around loosely, I unhesitatingly call "Retreat with Stilwell" a great story.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

DELIGHTFUL are the diversions of bibliographers. Earle F. Walbridge, author of a fascinating series of monographs on the more bizarre aspects of literature, writes this department that he is collecting material for a definitive paper on composite novels. Bookshop browsers may be familiar with some of these curiosities of collaboration. One that turns up occasionally is called "Six of One by Half a Dozen of the Other," a curious performance in which Harriet Beecher Stowe participated with five others of her time. The pastime was once popular in France, where there is a record of 31 authors collaborating on a single one-act play. In recent years the idea has been taken over by the manufacturers of mystery fiction, with interesting results. All this, of course, is known to Mr. Walbridge; I am not telling him anything he doesn't know. But in one matter I can assist him: I can tell him how the game is currently played.

Exercise in Ingenuity.

What I have in mind is an experience now rather more than a year old, involving Miss Craig Rice, the crime specialist; Louis Zara, the novelist, and the author of this note, who were called in to help put over a radio program based on the principles of collective novel writing. The difficulty was that the collaboration had to be extemporaneous; it went on under the eyes and ears, so to speak, of the audience. Somebody handed us a title, never before heard or seen, and—quick as a flash—it was our duty to build a story around it, one genius spelling another when invention flagged. We had only half an hour all told, and we had to do two stories and leave time for a couple of terrible commercials.

One fine winter evening, Miss Rice—in high fettle—led off with an appalling and wonderful situation: a man found brutally murdered in his car, in the back seat of which—when the police arrived—were discovered 64 assorted clocks and watches, all stopped at a quarter to seven. Something like that anyway. At this point, baffled by her own ingenuity, and no wonder, she abruptly ceased and handed the story on to me; and I made a deep crimson spectacle of myself trying to find an explanation to the mess. It took Mr. Zara to get us out of the hole we had digged for ourselves. Mr. Zara, a realist, quietly explained that the clocks and watches had nothing to do with the murder, and he resolutely ignored them in his solution.

Collective novel-writing, then, is a literary relay race in which, as one runner is about to drop exhausted, another seizes the torch and carries on. My one experience of the game would suggest that the torch is handed on at the moment it begins to burn the fingers of the earlier runner—a dirty trick.

How Fast Do Authors Write?

Agnes Sligh Turnbull, whose novel, "The Day Must Dawn" [Macmillan], is a current best seller, writes very slowly, according to a note from her publishers. Three pages often represent a morning's work; the pages—if I understand the blurb in front of me—are notebook pages only, written in pencil script and later transcribed by a stenographer. Say 300 words a day, or at most 900. It doesn't sound like a lot; yet if you do it every day the sum total at the year's end is very creditable.

To every author his own method. Three hundred words a day was enough, I think, for Flaubert, who sometimes spent a week in agonizing quest of one word. It was Anthony Trollope's quota for every quarter of an hour. E. Phillips Oppenheim is said to average 4,000 words a day, but he doesn't write them himself: he dictates them to a crack typist, who either takes them down in shorthand or plunks them directly onto a machine. I suspect that the all-time speed record is held by Harry Bedford-Jones, the contemporary romancer, who thinks nothing of 10,000 words a day, hammered out on four typewriters standing abreast. I have forgotten why he told me there were four. Perhaps he leaves them smoking behind him as the day wears on; but more likely he works on four novels at once.

There is a record of a Chinese novelist who wrote at such fearful speed that, hurling the finished sheets over his head, they soon accumulated in a pile large enough to darken his windows and threaten him with suffocation. My completest sympathy is with Bret Harte, a conscientious workman whose performance never satisfied him. In his early days on the Pacific coast, I have read, it was his habit to reach the Overland Monthly office early, spend a laborious morning turning out a single paragraph and go to lunch when he had finished. After lunch he corrected his paragraph and rewrote parts of it until 5 o'clock. At that hour he would carefully reread what he had written, tear it up thoughtfully, and go home.

Anthology with a Different Idea.

An anthologist with a new idea, my young friend Tom Boggs, is functioning in New York, dividing his time, if his communiques are to be trusted, between the Harvard club in West 44th street and Gilhuly Brothers' bar and restaurant in 8th avenue—both charming places, as I recall them. But that is not the new idea. It is Mr. Boggs' sensible notion that if we must have anthologies, they should include meritorious contemporary verse and not just, everlastingly, "Abou ben Adhem" and the late Mr. Kipling's "If." His first collection, "An American Anthology," contains some remarkable—at times, I confess, unintelligible—poems, many previously unpublished, by Wallace Stevens, Kenneth Fearing, e. e. cummings, and other exciting moderns. Thus it is, among other things, an important first edition. A second gathering is now slowly preparing, presumably at Gilhuly's and the Harvard club, and I am all for it. Notable too is the fact that his first small volume issues from the press of James A. Decker of Prairie City, Ill., a publisher who publishes only poetry—which is as quick a way of losing money as anybody has yet thought up. The Decker list has just been augmented by "Rind of Earth," a new book of verse by August Derleth, the one-man literary movement of Sac Prairie, Wis. Mr. Decker is doing an important job, I think; and he is doing it here in Illinois.

In his always delightful "Stories of Authors," Prof. Edwin Watts Chubb asserts that Longfellow "is said to have declined an invitation to the Adirondacks because he was told that Emerson was to carry a gun." a delicious anecdote that I have chuckled over for years. Comes now Prof. James Taft Hatfield of Evanston, author of "New Light on Longfellow," and tells me—I had cornered him at a recent party and all but forced the story on him—that he is very skeptical about it. That is what I get for being naive. But the story is too good to be discarded quickly; it out to be true.
